Government Statement

Period covered	Daily (Exclusive of Sunday)	Sunday (Only)
Six months ending Sept. 30, 1917, . .	381,675	614,418

On May 14, 1917, the Chicago Daily Tribune returned to its former retail price of 2c per copy within the city of Chicago and its suburbs, the old price of 2c in the country never having been changed.

On May 20, 1917, the Chicago Sunday Tribune increased its retail price to 8c in the country, the old price of 5c in the city of Chicago and its suburbs remaining unchanged.

The current statement to the Post Office Department therefore covers a period of approximately one and a half months at the old retail prices and four and a half months at the new and increased retail prices.

The decreases in circulation under the figures reported to the Post Office Department by the Chicago Tribune for the corresponding six months period last year are, however, only seven-tenths of one per cent for the Sunday Tribune and two and seven-tenths per cent for the Daily Tribune.

Compared with the Government figures for the corresponding period two years ago, the Chicago Daily Tribune now shows an actual increase of 27,155 and the Chicago Sunday Tribune an increase of 56,022.

The Chicago Daily Tribune now enjoys the largest 2c circulation in America, morning or evening, and the Chicago Sunday Tribune's circulation is far greater than that of any other Sunday newspaper outside of New York City.

For the period from January 1, 1917, to and including September 30, 1917, the Chicago Tribune has printed more advertising than in any similar period in its history.

An Advertiser Doing His Duty to-day is the man who eliminates all chance of risk; who spends his advertising money in proven channels.

He judges circulation with more care than usual —he considers the "grip" of the publication. In his advertising he talks to the most people possible, in concentrated markets of quick response where his distribution is amply provided for.

Furthermore, just at this time he uses more space than usual in the few great daily newspapers that eliminate risk—that have the "grip." There never was a time when such newspapers so consistently held public attention as right now.

*In Chicago The Daily News is the newspaper

GOVERNMENT MAY SEIZE NEWS PRINT MILLS.

SENATE PRINTING COMMITTEE MAKES RECOMMENDATION AS A WAR NECESSITY MEASURE.

The biggest development in the year and a half work of the Federal Government to settle the news print paper situation and protect many newspapers of the nation from extermination, because of the high prices charged by manufacturers, came on October 6 in the form of a recommendation by the Senate Committee on Printing that the Government seize and operate the print paper and pulp interests during the period of the war.

The committee states:

"The committee has been moved to report the resolution for the consideration of the Senate at this time in the hope that some relief may be speedily accorded the many publications that are in grave danger of destruction by the unbearable prices now exacted for print paper.

"To jeopardize the existence of the press is to imperil the life of the Government itself, so dependent is a democracy upon the prompt and widespread information of the people.

"Therefore, whatever affects the publication of its newspapers and periodicals likewise affects the welfare of the Government and the necessities of such publications become in fact public necessities.

"If print paper cannot be obtained in adequate quantities, the information of the public will be restricted in the same measure as the output of the paper mills is limited; or if the price of paper is held so high that many newspapers cannot afford to continue publication, the information of the public will likewise be curtailed and the interest of the Government suffer thereby.

"It seems imperative, therefore, that the Government should do everything in its power to insure the preservation of the press, especially in a time like the present, when the newspapers and periodicals are such a vital force in helping the cause of humanity against military madness."

The defiant attitude of print paper producers is arraigned. The report says of the Federal Trade Commission's findings:

"They show beyond any question that the print paper industry, in its greed for excessive profits, has imposed a most unjust burden on the American press, which faces a serious disaster if relief cannot speedily be had from the oppressive prices now exacted for print paper."

It adds that the commission, in its recent investigation, exhausted every resource at its command to obtain relief for the publishers.

Under a resolution introduced by Senator Smith of Arizona and reported by the committee for passage, the Trade Commission would be empowered to control the production and distribution of print paper and mechanical and chemical pulp in the United States.

All print paper and pulp mills and agencies would be operated on Government account. Their products would be pooled in the commission's hands during the war emergency and equitably distributed at a price based on production and distribution cost plus a fair profit per ton, to be determined by the commission.

Provision is made in the resolution for cooperation with the Canadian Government and for limiting imports to shipments for Government account.

Developments in the move to bring the news print manufacturers under Government control are not expected to assume shape until Congress meets again in December. The resolution from the Senate committee on printing will then have a place on the Senate calendar, and the alignment on the proposition of Government control of an important industry will be detailed plans for taking over print plants have not yet been worked out by Government officials.

The aim, it is said, is to deal with paper as with fuel, wheat, and other commodities regarded as war materials. Paper on which newspapers are printed, officials hold, is indispensable to the prosecution of the war against Germany.

The resolution and report of the printing committee follows:

"The committee on printing, to which was referred the resolution (S. J. Res. 101) to provide for the national security and defense by insuring to the Government of the United States an adequate supply of print paper at a fair price and by insuring a supply and equitable distribution at fair prices to the industries of the United States, having had the same under consideration, reports the resolution back with the recommendation that it do pass.

"The resolution (S. J. Res. 101) is as follows:

"Whereas by reason of a state of war now existing it is essential to the national security and defense for the successful prosecution of the war to assure a supply of print paper and its equitable distribution at a fair price in order that the Government of the United States may be assured an adequate supply of paper products and that all proper news may be generally and efficiently disseminated: Now, therefore, be it

"Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Federal Trade Commission is hereby authorized and empowered to supervise, control, and regulate the production and distribution of print paper and mechanical and chemical pulp in the United States, and that all mills producing and all agencies distributing print paper and mechanical and chemical pulp in the United States shall be operated on Government account; that these products be pooled in the hands of the Federal Trade Commission for the term of the war and the emergency occasioned thereby and equitably distributed at a price based upon cost of production and distribution plus a fair profit per ton, as determined by the Federal Trade Commission: Provided, That if the compensation so determined be not satisfactory to the

BOSTON JOURNAL ABSORBED.

HERALD PUBLISHERS BUY ASSETS AND WILL ISSUE HERALD-JOURNAL.

The Boston Journal, which began its career in 1833, was issued for the last time on October 6.

The plant, good will and everything pertaining to it was purchased by the Boston Herald Company. The Herald for a while will appear as the Herald-Journal.

Frank Munsey purchased the Journal from Stephen O'Meara, the present police commissioner of Boston, and after several years sold it in 1915 to Charles Sumner Bird and Matthew Hale, who sold in turn to Walton A. Green and associates some time ago. Mr. Green retired from the Journal and left it in the hands of Charles Eliot Ware.

Lately there had been negotiations for the purchase of the Journal by the publishers of the Record and Advertiser.

The Journal's chief prominence was during the civil war, when it was the leading New England chronicler of news from the front.

The merger took effect on October 8, with the following statement by J. H. Higgins, treasurer and general manager of the Boston Publishing Company:

"To the features that have made the Boston Herald a distinctive newspaper will be added the best of those to which Journal readers have become accustomed.

"This amalgamation of the Journal with the Herald is the most important event that has occurred in the New England newspaper field since the consolidation of the Traveler with the Herald on July 1, 1912—an event that laid the foundation for the Herald's rapid growth and present prosperity.

"The history of the Journal is one of earnest endeavor and of many great achievements, and in seeking new affiliations whereby its best traditions would be perpetuated, and its readers best served and pleased, the Journal naturally turned to the Herald as its nearest prototype.

"The Herald's complete organization and splendid mechanical equipment it will be possible to render even larger service to Journal readers than they have had before.

"The Journal circulation is among people of more than average intelligence, whom the Herald warmly welcomes to its equally intelligent family of readers, firm in the conviction that the combined Herald and Journal will fulfill their requirements as a complete newspaper of the better class."

To THE FOURTH ESTATE, Mr. Higgins added:

"As recited in the statement, the Boston Herald has made more rapid progress than any other newspaper in Boston since the Herald and Traveler were consolidated in 1912, and from an exceedingly heavy annual loss has come to the point of a profitable institution. We have shown greater gains in advertising than any other paper in Boston this year.

"The Journal has a net paid circulation of about 68,000. Naturally we expect to retain a large percentage of this circulation, making a distinct addition to the circulation of the Boston Morning Herald.

"The elimination of the Boston Journal leaves only four morning papers in the field—the Globe, Post, Advertiser and Herald, and places the Herald and Traveler, as a all-day morning and evening newspaper in a strong position."

The management and officers of the Boston Company are: Robert Lincoln O'Brien, publisher and editor; James H. Higgins, treasurer and general manager; and Thomas W. Streeter, secretary.

The Herald and Journal is the morning and Sunday paper and the Evening Traveler is issued every day except Sunday.

The combined Herald and Journal and the Evening Traveler are represented in the national advertising field by the S. C. Beckwith Special Agency, New York, and G. Logan Payne, Chicago.

BOOK AND PAPER MEN GIVE UP.

ABOLISH THE BUREAU OF STATISTICS—WANT TRUST ACT DROPPED.

Following the filing of the Senate printing committee's recommendation that the Government seize all paper mills, twenty-three book paper manufacturers, answering the Federal Trade Commission's complaint on October 10 that through their bureau of statistics they had enhanced paper prices unduly, announced that the bureau had been discontinued and asked for a dismissal of charges against them. The commission will render a decision October 29.

The defendants were cited to appear to show cause why they should not cease alleged unfair practices.

They made no admission of charges of concerted action to raise prices and asked dismissal of the complaint solely on the ground that the instrumentality through which the unfair practices were alleged to have been carried out had gone out of existence.

MUNSEY PUBLICATIONS TO HAVE NEW HOME.

Frank A. Munsey has purchased the historic Stewart Building and property in New York, on the northeast corner of Broadway and Chambers street, and will erect upon the site a modern office building in which the New York Sun and the Evening Sun will have a new home. It will furnish a fitting headquarters for Munsey's Magazine and the other publications owned by Mr. Munsey.

The transaction involves one of the largest and most interesting real estate deals in New York in many a day. It is Mr. Munsey's intention to improve the historic site with a monumental structure which will stand favorably comparison with the finest of the city's office buildings.

The property is valued at approximately $4,000,000.

NEW HOME AND SUNDAY NAME IN DETROIT.

The issue of October 14 of the Detroit Sunday News-Tribune will be called the Detroit Sunday News, and the old name Tribune will be dropped.

The entire staff of the News will be moved by October 15 to the new building and the business of the News will be conducted in the new building from that date. Everything will be entirely new, as the furnishings of the old building will be disposed of immediately after removal.

CIRCULATION MEN ARE BIG ECONOMY FACTORS.

WHAT THEY DID LAST YEAR AND WHAT THEY ARE PLANNING FOR FUTURE TOLD AT I. C. M. A. MEETING.

That the circulation managers played a most important part in bringing their newspapers through the cost-of-production crisis of the past year was well illustrated in the reports of officers and members of the International Circulation Managers Association at their annual convention in Atlanta during the past week.

Many economical things were done in the circulation department in order to counteract in a measure the ever increasing expenses. Reports showed that:

Wrapping paper and twine has been dispensed with wherever practical, canvas bags and patented straps or ties taking their place.

Returns have been almost wholly eliminated.

Exchanges and "deadheads" have been cut off.

Advertisers' copies have been reduced to a minimum, clippings of advertisements have been substituted for complete copies.

Free copies to employees have been cut off; many of whom have become regular subscribers.

Pressroom and mailroom waste and "overruns" have been largely reduced.

Special trains have been consolidated or entirely dispensed with.

Much mail matter is now being forwarded by express in order to reduce transportation charges.

Agents have been appointed in communities where individual subscribers by mail were formerly the only means of distribution, this brought a saving in wrappers, time in the mailing department and transportation costs.

Mechanical mailing devices have been installed to replace human labor, thereby cutting down the payroll.

Office systems have been simplified in order to reduce expenses.

Promotion work has been scientifically organized to reduce number of employees and to prevent lost motion.

Educational campaigns have been inaugurated to induce subscribers to renew subscriptions of their own accord and not to depend upon personal call of publisher's representative, thereby cutting off a big item of expense.

Subscription rates have been increased.

Clubbing offers have been discontinued.

Premiums and other inducements have been abandoned by many publishers, bringing about a big saving of money, and at the same time educating the subscriber to consider the merit of the newspaper, instead of the bait that has been offered with it.

Cooperation between circulation departments of newspapers in various cities has eliminated waste of money through old methods in practice, such as paying of newsboys and dealers for representation, boosting and so-called personal service. This makes it necessary for newsboys and dealers to hustle more for themselves, in order to make money, and the result is an increased sale of papers, and the public gets what it wants and not what is thrust upon it.

In commenting on these economies President Schmid said:

"There are undoubtedly other things possible in our departments to further cut down expenses, but those mentioned above are the important ones and the circulation manager's duties have become more of a pleasure during the last year than a worry, because it is always a pleasant task to figure out effective ways and means of retrenchment.

"We may well consider our association one of the potent influences in the newspaper business, ever increasing in value and efficiency and overcoming the most extraordinary obstacles that constantly beset the paths of our publishers. A reiteration of this fact is all that is necessary to the welfare and happiness of our individual members, and to the progress and growth of our association.

For the future, President Schmid said:

"The problems of today are not the only ones we must solve, but the tremendous dislocation of conditions which will face us when the war ends must be met. Are we preparing ourselves for this crucial time?

"Economy has been the watchword for a long time; have we defined it in the highest degree and practiced the lessons that experience has taught us?

"Now that international strife has reached the American shores, the question of our salvation in business, as well as in social life, assumes a new phase. We are willingly facing the situation and are conscripting our men and our money in a most righteous cause. The International Circulation Managers Association, like all others in the newspaper publishing business, is in the battleline for democracy.

"One of the material things which has worried our publishers is the constant increase in the cost of labor and materials. The big burden which our publishers are carrying is the print paper. The situation has been alarming for a long time. It is necessary for us to continue to exert our influence in whatever way may seem prudent and necessary to save our business from the clutches of unscrupulous manipulators.

"During the last few months a new menace presented itself in the proposal to increase the second class postal rates. For a long time this proposed legislation has been the source of great worry to our publishers. Besides second class mail increases, the war revenue measure as passed presents still another grave danger. House bill 4280 proposes a 1-cent tax on all parcel post packages. In itself this tax would not be objectionable, but unfortunately the postal authorities in Washington have the power of determining the several classifications of mail, and under this authorization the postmaster-general has ruled that all catalogs, booklets, pamphlets and circulars weighing up to eight ounces shall be classed as parcel post. This bill may mean the discontinuance of much of our printed matter, so necessary to the promotion of circulation.

"With the enactment and enforcement of the conscription law, new difficulties have arisen. Unquestionably a large percentage of members of our departments will enter the military service. I recommend that all members in good standing, who shall go to war in any capacity, be relieved of the payment of dues and still remain in good standing during such absence. It is gratifying to know that some publishers have already made arrangements in this respect.

ASSOCIATION MUST EXPAND.

"I am thoroughly convinced that this association must eventually take action toward extending its scope of activity. The gradual increase in number of state and sectional organizations of circulation managers makes it apparent that there is a desire on the part of these men to get together oftener than once a year to discuss the problems which face them in their immediate field, and which, as a rule, apply only to their particular locality.

"The I. C. M. A. cannot afford to have these smaller organizations grow in number so that interest in the parent organization will wane; your president therefore recommends that some plan be discussed by this convention and action taken whereby the various state and sectional bodies may become units of this organization, to be governed by a chairman to be elected by the members of each state or section, providing, however, that said chairman be subject to the constitution and by-laws of this body and subordinate to its president.

"The chairmen of the various sections might also constitute the board of directors of the I. C. M. A., instead of a board elected as heretofore.

"A reorganization of this association along these lines would have many advantages and would stimulate greater interest in our affairs. Sectional meetings could be held quarterly, semi-annually or as frequently as the members of such sections may elect.

"The question of admitting to membership circulation managers of magazines, farm papers, trade papers, etc., is also one that may need attention, if our constitution and by-laws are changed to make this possible.

"I would be in favor of holding divisional meetings during our conventions, so that the various classes of publications represented could thresh out their problems in advance of final action by the association as a whole.

"This latter plan of increasing our membership and the scope of the I. C. M. A. requires most careful consideration. Our finances are in very good shape."

President Schmid paid tribute to the memories of C. F. Brann of Des Moines and H. McCoy Winters of Augusta, Ark., members of the I. C. M. A., and to Mrs. F. H. Whittaker of Jackson, Mich., "a very dear friend" of the I. C. M. A., who died since the last meeting.

The subscribing of $500 each to the Liberty Loan of the United States and the War Loan of Canada; the sending of a message to President Wilson and the Canadian Premier pledging the support and loyalty of the I. C. M. A.; and the establishing of a roll of honor for members who have enlisted in the Army and Navy of the United States and Canada—featured the opening session of the nineteenth annual I. C. M. A. meeting on Tuesday morning.

Nearly a hundred delegates, representing all parts of the United States and several Canadian cities, attended the opening. In addition they brought about forty ladies as guests of the association.

The decision to purchase the bonds of the United States and Canada came at a meeting of the board of directors held on Monday night. The association already held $500 of the Liberty Bonds.

All the officers, with the exception of Second Vice-President Joseph R. Taylor of the Grand Rapids Press, were present at the opening. An address of welcome was made by J. R. Smith of Atlanta, acting for Governor Hugh M. Dorsey of Georgia, who was unable to attend.

President John M. Schmid followed with his annual report, as already noted.

R. B. Metlean of the New York Evening Post introduced the resolution creating the "Honor Roll." It provides that members of the association joining the armed forces of the United States and Canada be given a life membership in the association and their names placed on the permanent "Roll of Honor," which will be printed in each number of the Official Bulletin. The members first going on this "Honor Roll" are: L. L. Ricketts of the Des Moines Capital; J. H. Zerby of the Pottsville (Pa.) Republican; F. G. McKinley of the Saginaw (Mich.) News; H. E. Munford of the Minot (N. D.) News; and J. V. McClatchy of the Sacramento (Cal.) Bee.

GLAD TO BE IN ATLANTA.

D. B. G. Rose of the Louisville (Ky.) Post, speaking on "Why are we in Atlanta?" said:

"I feel that we are all glad to be in Atlanta. We are glad to meet in the home town of our friend Simmons and Toler, Chandler and Moye; and while I know that our meeting here will be most pleasant, I trust it will be equally profitable to ourselves and to our publishers.

A paper by W. H. Harrington of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat discussed: "Can one or more daily newspapers in any city successfully increase their selling price without concerted action from all dailies in the same field?"

PRICE RAISING PSYCHOLOGY.

Joseph Horner, Jr., of the Green Bay (Wis.) Press-Gazette, in speaking on "The psychology of price-raising," said:

"An individual is less likely to raise any question as to the propriety of reading the same paper at an additional cost if he finds his fellows faithfully observing the new regulations. This fact is convincing.

"A peculiarity of the present time is that prices in general have been going up. This circumstance has served as an aid to publishers who have undertaken to effect an increase in the price of their product. People are in a state of mind where they expect to pay more for everything. Disloyal money-grabbing manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers have used this principle of social psychology as a tool, but I dare say that publishers are 'not guilty.'

"Talk changes opinion, publicity starts conversation, but the spirit of conversation, may be either for or against the cause which is made public. If a newspaper were to start a 'take it or leave it' at the new price' campaign the effect would be disastrous to its circulation.

"Justifiable reasons (I'm sure we have had these) should be set forth in such a way that the less intelligent readers can grasp them without an effort. This will serve as a groundwork for the right kind of talk among agents, solicitors and readers in general and will hasten the successful establishment of a new price habit."

HOW NEW YORK RAISED SUNDAY PRICES.

James McKernan of the New York World told "How the increase of 1 cent on the wholesale rate to newsdealers affected the sales of the New York City Sunday papers; how this increase can be made by other Sunday papers." He said:

"We were compelled, beginning with the first Sunday in March of this year to make advance of 1 cent per copy on all New York Sunday papers sold outside of Greater New York. No increase was made on papers sold in the home town.

KANSAS CITY POST ON "GERARD".

ATTORNEY REPLIES TO THE PUBLIC LEDGER COMMENT ON RELEASE SUIT.

EDITOR THE FOURTH ESTATE:

SIR: In your issue of September 29, T. R. White of Philadelphia said some very uncomplimentary things regarding a statement which appeared in your paper some weeks ago from W. M. Barton, manager of the Kansas City Post.

Mr. White is one of the attorneys representing the plaintiff in the case of the Public Ledger vs. the Post Printing & Publishing Company, a suit pending in the United States District Court, for the Western District of Missouri, at Kansas City.

In the suit brought against the Post, the Public Ledger prayed for an injunction to restrain the Post from printing the Gerard articles, which the Public Ledger claimed were protected under a copyright obtained by it.

Ordinarily in the West, the courts determine the issues involved in law suits, and we know of no reason why any different rule will prevail in the Public Ledger law suit.

While this is true, yet the Post does not want to rest under the serious accusations contained in Mr.

White's address, and it therefore has suggested that this final word be submitted to you for publication.

Courts hold parties to the positions assumed by them in their pleadings, and it would seem that the public should adopt the same rule.

The Public Ledger in its bill of complaint, as the foundation of its cause of action, stated:

"Plaintiff sold the right to re-publish said book in serial form to certain newspapers in the United States, simultaneously with the publication in the Public Ledger. In doing so, however, it was careful to limit the territory within which such publication could be made to territory where the Public Ledger does not, and in all probability will not, circulate."

And in paragraph 8 of said Bill of Complaint, plaintiff states:

"And defendant entered into a contract on or about August 13, 1917, where by the defendant was given the privilege and license to publish the said book in serial form commencing with September 16, 1917, in the Kansas City Post, a newspaper published in Kansas City, Mo."

Let us give attention to the first quoted portion of the bill of complaint.

The Gerard articles were sold to certain newspapers to be printed as the Ledger printed them, and in territory where the Ledger would not circulate, and yet the facts are that the articles were sold to the St. Louis Post Dispatch, a newspaper with the largest circulation of any newspaper west of Chicago, and in the fifth largest city in America, and this in the face of the fact that the Ledger was not releasing the story in any place where it might possibly circulate.

When the Post wired the Ledger on August 13, that it would pay the same price as the Denver Post for the Gerard articles, and the reply came back:

"Accept your offer for Gerard serial of same price paid by Denver Post or $300 dollars."

Is it any wonder that the Kansas City Post believed that it had the right to use the articles, when the St. Louis Post Dispatch, with its 300,000 subscribers, thousands of whom were buying the paper in Kansas City, had obtained the privilege of immediate publication?

Would any prudent publisher buy the release of the Gerard articles for Kansas City after they had been printed in the Post-Dispatch and other Western newspapers?

The only telegram regarding the purchase of the right to print, was the telegram of August 13, and the only reply ever sent to the Kansas City Post upon that particular subject, was the one just quoted, and in neither of these telegrams was there any intimation that they were connected with or had relation to any other proposition.

If the Public Ledger had intended to limit the Post, it would have been so easy for it to have said:

"Accept your offer for Gerard serial beginning September 16, same price paid by Denver Post, or $300; instead of sending as it did:

"Accept your offer for Gerard serial of same price paid by Denver Post or $300."

We submit that any fair-minded publisher in America will say that the Post, in printing the articles as it did, pursued the same course that any other enterprising publisher would have pursued.

The Ledger says that it made a contract with the Post, and that it was not to begin until September 16.

As to whether or not the contract was to begin then, is a matter for a court and jury to determine, and it is not for Mr. White nor the writer of this article to undertake to determine that issue.

Mr. White says that the court, at the request of his client, required the Post to give bond. An affidavit was filed by the Post before the hearing before Judge Stone, and in that affidavit the closing paragraph contains this language:

"This affiant states that in publishing the articles in question, that it did so in good faith, as shown by its announcement and telegram of August 14, and that the defendant, the Post Printing & Publishing Company, is willing to enter into a bond to secure to the plaintiff any damages it may sustain over and above the contract price of $300, such damages to be determined by trial in this court."

To comment on a fact established by a court paper, even though the contender is a Philadelphia lawyer, is unnecessary.

The Kansas City Post believed, when the newsboys on every street corner were selling newspapers other than the Public Ledger (and we will be able to show that no copies of the Public Ledger were sold here) containing the Gerard articles and its proposition of $300 for the right to the story was accepted without any condition that it had the right to publish the story.

And we are perfectly willing to let a court and jury in Missouri determine that issue.

Should it be decided that Mr. Gerard as Ambassador to the German court had the right at the expense of this Government to obtain, by observation and by virtue of his position, facts belonging to his Government and to sell such information, not a line of which by any sort of imagination is original in conception, and that the Post must pay damages for printing the same after the Ledger had sold it the right, then and in that case, we are able to pay the bill.

Attorney for the Kansas City Post.

MAC DONALD BACK IN UNITED STATES.

NOW THE GENERAL MANAGER OF WASHINGTON HERALD—
HE IS WELL KNOWN.

Following the retirement of E. C. Rogers to become business manager of the Washington Times, Alonzo T. MacDonald was appointed general manager of the Washington Herald by Clinton T. Brainerd, publisher. Mr. MacDonald for several years past has been associated with the management of the Toronto News and the Toronto Globe.

Although Mr. MacDonald is a Canadian by birth, he has been engaged in newspaper work principally in Chicago, Denver, New York and Louisville, Ky. He was managing editor of the New York Daily News during Frank A. Munsey's ownership and later was managing editor of the Louisville Herald. He was one of the first men in the United States to write a "feature column" for a newspaper.

At other times Mr. MacDonald was with the Chicago Daily News and the Denver News. In 1915 he was made assistant general manager of the Toronto News and he later became general manager, resigning in June of this year. Since then he has been with the Toronto Globe as day managing editor.

NEW PARTY ORGAN.

J. L. Neville, recently with the Winnipeg Free Press, will be editor of a new St. Stephen (Ont.) paper, which is to be the organ of the Liberal party in Charlottetown, P. E. I.

ON OHIO COMMISSION.

Herbert R. Mengert, a Columbus (Ohio) newspaper writer, has been named secretary of the Ohio commission to investigate workmen's old age and sickness insurance.

C. O. Ryan has purchased the interest of Dr. H. W. Emeny in the Eldora (Ia.) Ledger.

UNIONVILLE. CONN.

To NEWSPAPER ACCOUNTANTS:

Do you want to merely hold down your jobs or do you want to make your department a dynamic part of the business organization?

Many progressive newspaper accountants have asked me to start a correspondence course dealing with the accounting and costing systems which I am installing in newspaper offices.

Here is an opportunity for you to see all that I see in travelling from one paper to another—to learn all that I know about this work—to produce better results for your company and to show your executives that you are really competent and productive.

The cost of such a course will depend on the number joining, for it is not my intention to make any profit, because I am earning salaries and fees.

If you wish to avail yourself of this opportunity, write to me to-day in care of THE FOURTH ESTATE, stating you desire to enter this proposed course.

I will then calculate the cost to each member, merely covering actual expenses—postage, stationery and stenographic work—and advise you what that cost will be if you join. The articles written by me appearing in THE FOURTH ESTATE will be discussed, test questions will be sent you and any questions you like to ask will be carefully answered.

Your replies will be carefully criticized and, in short, I will try and teach you everything I know about newspaper accounting and costing. If genuinely interested write me.

My clients are always asking me for good men to carry on my work—those are the men I want to help and to know.

When replying tell me all about your training and experience, what your duties are, what your weakest and strongest points are, what sort of information your executives want and what you give them. Then I will know how to help you and where to start you in with the course now proposed.

Address: EDMUND WALKER, care of The Fourth Estate, 232 West 59th Street, New York City.

CIRCULATORS ARE ECONOMISTS

Greater New York is less than handling circulation outside of the city. The large wholesale news companies furnish men, rolling stock and rope to draw the papers in large quantities direct from the delivery rooms of the various newspapers. Hence the increase price was placed only upon that part of the circulation of the New York Sunday Papers, which is the most expensive to handle.

"It has had no particularly bad effect on the circulation of any of the New York papers. The dealers without exception passed this extra charge on to the public—that is, they increased their selling price correspondingly. There were a few readers who complained, but the majority of the people seemed to appreciate the fact that there was no alternative, and that the newspapers did not take this step until they were compelled to do so.

"I think, that the following suggestions might be of help to other circulation managers:

"1st.—Be sure that your product is worth the price that you ask for it.
"2nd.—Be sure that a uniform price is charged to dealers.

"3rd.—Treat each dealer or dealers in their respective class in the same manner. One wholesale rate. One retail rate only. Make no special rebates or concessions.

"4th.—Secure the cooperation of competitive newspapers in your field. By this I mean get your competitors to agree to not take advantage of your conditions by special activity during the first few weeks of the new price. If a newspaper should announce an increased price and its competitor immediately started a scheme or some special promotion it would of course have a tendency to upset the plans, hence sincere cooperation must be assured before attempting a change of this kind.

"If your newspaper is worth the advanced price, the public realizing the increased cost of production, will generally stick to its favorite paper.

"I would not advise any one to take this step until he has eliminated all extra and unnecessary expense, such as on sold free copies etc."

The morning session closed with a general discussion of questions raised by speakers, and the members still allowing credit for unsold copies were asked to tell how they justified the continuance of the policy.

Tuesday afternoon the members and their ladies made a trip to the Federal Prison, Cyclorama, scene of the battle of Atlanta in Grant Park and enjoyed a trolley ride.

To make up for this short period of pleasure, however, a night session was held Tuesday.

TUESDAY EVENING.

A. E. MacKinnon said that circulation ethics are much improved over the past and that they will continue to improve in the future. He announced plans for starting the Tri-State Circulation Managers Association for Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware.

WARNING AGAINST OVER-ECONOMY.

Joseph P. Barry of the Providence (R. I.) Journal and the Evening Bulletin, gave a talk on "Schemes for reducing circulation expense and new efficiency methods in circulation management," saying:

"Three years ago efficiency was a subject which nearly all publishers refused to discuss. Most of them considered it red tape that did not help them to get anywhere, and in consequence the amount wasted in the publishing business would have financed a fair sized Liberty Loan."

"But when the cost of production jumped over 100 per cent and even the most prosperous publishers saw the imperative necessity of reducing their cost without cheapening their product, they overcame their antipathies and set themselves to the task of eliminating every kind of waste.

"Today the publishing business can be classed with the most efficiently conducted businesses of the country, and when the world becomes tranquil again the present high cost of production may well turn out to have been blessing in disguise.

"I think everyone will admit that the circulation managers have 'done their bit' in this war on waste—returns have been eliminated, press room and mailing room waste cut to a minimum, free copies reduced or cut out entirely, and in many cases the prices have been increased.

"However, there has been a tendency on the part of some to over-economize and to reduce their costs at the expense of efficiency.

"In my opinion that is a fatal mistake, as, in order to retain its reader-confidence, a newspaper or magazine can never relax for a moment in its endeavor to give the public the best service possible and like everything else, such service must improve all the time.

"Remaining stationary is equivalent to falling behind in every line of endeavor today."

SELLING PRICE MUST GIVE PROFIT.

O. O. Scattergood, manager of country circulation of the Chicago American, presented a paper, which was read by Secretary Mathews, on "Should newspapers predicate profit on the sale of their by-product—advertising space?"

In spite of the fact that experience has proven this cannot be done successfully, Mr. Scattergood said that "there are hundreds of newspapers in this country today engaged in trying to upset and disprove this truism. "These efforts remind one of a mad bull butting his head against a stone wall." He further said:

"The sale of the main product of the newspaper of today must be maintained at a price sufficient to cover cost of production, plus a reasonable profit or the newspaper will lose its individuality and integrity and by force of necessity become dominated by, and a mouthpiece of special interests. The alternative is bankruptcy."

A paper by John D. Walker of the Johnstown (Pa.) Tribune discussed: "The value of training boys in 'news-crying,' selling points, behavior, etc., and 'gingering' the enthusiasm of the American boy in circulation building."

WHEN CLUBBING PAYS.

Ernest A. Scholz of the Crowell Publishing Company, in giving a talk on "The use of magazine clubbing offers by daily newspapers in circulation building," said:

"The cooperative selling of periodicals (daily, weekly and monthly) is based upon a fundamental and solid-rock principle of marketing. And when each, in combination, is presented on its merits and merits only—when each is sold for its intrinsic value when each shares alike in the investment and profit—the principle is being employed in a way that is of value and service to advertisers, to contributors and to the public—and in a way that means bigger business and better business."

R. F. D. AND SMALL TOWN CIRCULATION.

Joseph H. Lackey of the Memphis (Tenn.) News-Scimitar, in speaking on the "Best plan for stimulating R.F.D. and small town circulation on an evening newspaper," said:

"It would not be wise in building up a mail circulation to depend altogether upon one method—every method that has proved its usefulness in getting results economically should be used. After your mail circulation has been built up to the desired proportions, then the least effective and most expensive methods may be discarded.

"Mail circulation should be handled strictly on a paid-in-advance basis. It is unprofitable when handled in any other way. Where all subscriptions are paid-in-advance and are killed at expiration a very low rural subscription price—comparatively speaking—may be made without loss. Although our rural subscription rate is much cheaper than our rate through carriers or agents, yet we find at the end of the year that our net receipts, compared to cost, are just about the same.

"Mail business, when once developed, if built on a solid foundation, is about as stable and reliable as any other class and under the paid-in-advance system the collections are 100 per cent."

Harold Hough of the Fort Worth (Tex.) Star-Telegram presented "Suggestions from the A.B.C. for simplification and standardization of records in circulation departments; how the A.B.C. has helped the circulation manager."

DISCUSSIONS.

The program committee put forward as a topic for general discussion:

"As a result of the liquor clauses attached to the Post Office Bill by Congress, how many newspapers discontinued liquor ads? How many continued to run liquor ads, but cut off the circulation in the states affected by the law? How many publish two editions, one for wet, and one for dry territory?"

The president called on members promiscuously for short talks on the following topics:

"Should newspapers in any large city have exclusive carriers or should they be permitted to handle other papers?"
"Is there too much space devoted to baseball and other sports in newspapers?"

"Are special editions and pages featuring small towns materially helpful in circulation building?"

"Are Sunday comics in colors passing, and if so why?"

"Does circulation secured through scare-heads pay?"

"Circulation at any price—does it ever pay?"

The circulation managers on Wednesday morning passed the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the International Circulation Managers Association enter formal protest against the new second class zone rates because of the belief that the new rate is oppressive, unjust and injurious to the publishing business.

"That while willing and glad to pay increased taxes for the support of the American Army and Navy, we see in any postal rate adopted by Congress only a service charge for service rendered."

The committee named to appeal to Congress at its next session consists of: A. E. MacKinnon, chairman; R. B. McClean, E. R. Hutton, Frank L. Frugone and John M. Schmid.

Each member of the association is to make appeal to the Congressmen from his state for support in repealing the measure.

James L. Farley of the Philadelphia North American read the paper assigned to Robert McClean of the Philadelphia Bulletin on "Effects of raising the price of papers to 2 cents—methods of holding circulation in such cases."

Sidney D. Long of the Wichita (Kan.) Eagle on "Circulation salesmanship."

CHECKING UP OUTPUT.

Hugh A. Aiken of the Columbus (Ohio) Citizen, spoke on "What system should be employed to reduce the difference between the press run and circulation output." He said:

"In our plant the boys who man the lifts have a sheet conveniently at hand separated into these five departments, and as they take from the lifts bundles of 400 papers they are checked out to the department to which they are delivered. For example, if a bundle of 200 papers is delivered to the man at the newsboy's window, under the column of 'newsboys' is marked with a single stroke the fact that 200 papers have been delivered to this department and likewise to the others when delivered to them."

"Then at the end of each edition run, these sheets are turned in to the chief mailing clerk, who at the end of the day compares them with the pressman's report of total perfect print."

"Our average net daily press run for the year of 1916 was 74,526, with an average of papers not accounted for of 22. With the many changes for miscount, I think you will all agree with me that the average of 22 is practically the minimum."

"Regarding my experience as to the best method of checking spoils, our pressman had adopted the following plan, tion to another.

"These papers as they come through are laid aside, first counted, and then at the close of the edition, with whatever spoils may arise, are weighed each edition, but instead of starting at zero we start at all 9's excepting the last number which is set at 5. This gives him an opportunity to turn the pressive revolutions or the equivalent of ten papers, which takes care of all spoils papers in changing the plates or increasing the size of the paper from one ed. which in a small office like ours, has proven very satisfactory.

"The press counters are changed on each edition, or rather, set back for weighed and counted for each edition, and wherever this is tried you will be surprised that notwithstanding not all full papers come out of the press, yet how close weight and count come.

"These papers also give an opportunity to the fly boy to make up quite a number of perfect print papers, as certain pages on one press will be perfect where those on the other are not, and by looking them over at the end of the run several perfect print papers can be secured."

HABITS THAT MAKE A GOOD BOSS.

Robert B. McClean, business manager of the New York Evening Post, answered the question: "Is there enough attention given to the organization of the circulation department?" He said:

"Few newspapers now consider the circulation department as a necessary evil, but rather regard it as a sales organization on which depends much of the success of the newspaper business.

"The circulation manager will make progress faster if he clears out of his head all foolish notions; if he clears out of his department all the facts and fancies, adopting new systems with an eye only to maximum results and minimum costs; if he stops gambling in schemes and wasteful methods; he will get there.

"Concentration, determination and persistence are personal habits that make a good boss for any job. That kind of a boss has a producing circulation department because he has concentrated on the study of human nature in the hiring and firing of help and his determination makes every man and girl and boy in his department produce or go.

"Be proud of your paper and sell it on its merits. Get that spirit yourself and your belief in your paper will bulge out of you all the time and inspire your organization with the enthusiasm that cuts through mountains to success."

PSYCHOLOGY IN SOLICITING.

M. Levy of the Cincinnati Post spoke on "Applying psychology to the soliciting of subscriptions." He said:

"I think psychology can be best applied to soliciting subscriptions by the use of the various following instincts:

"Instinct of companionship. Draw picture of companionship, pleasure and education to be derived by having newspaper in the home.

"Instinct of vanity. Here the woman's page, with its fashions, etc., can be brought into play.

"Instinct of bargain hunting. Here the advertisements of the merchants, with their special sales, bargains, etc., can be made a part. People, especially women, like to look through collections of merchandise, special sale tables, etc.

"Instinct of education. Develops an opportunity to go into the world war, the economic side, etc.

"Instinct of athletics. One can discuss the sport page with its column devoted to baseball, tennis, golf, bowling, boxing, etc.

"Instinct of domesticity. Here again the woman's page comes into play, with its war time household recipes, short cuts on the best way of doing things about the house, etc.

"Instinct of adventure. The novel, week or serial story with its romance and adventure can play a part here.

"Instinct of student academic type. War, editorials and general news should be the appeal.

"Instinct parental. The bedtime story and comics for the 'kiddies.'

"Instinct of being well informed. Here the general news, editorials, war, special feature articles can be applied.

"Instinct of lighter type. Comics, novel-a-week or special story will work nicely.

"The game of selling is a game of psychology, and psychology is mind force. The solicitor who succeeds must resort to the kind of strategy that would take the ordinary man 'out of the crowd,' putting him into the larger sphere of things, and to my mind it would take more than the average newspaper solicitor to apply psychology to the soliciting of subscriptions."

EFFECT OF POSTAL INCREASES.

Robert J. Corrigan of the Denver Rocky Mountain News and Denver Times, discussing "The best method to use in meeting the expense caused by the proposed increase in postage," said:

"In the matter of increasing the rate to distant readers we must bear in mind the fact that the desirability of a paper varies with the inverse ratio of the distance from the city of publication. The reader in the town close by does not need much coaxing to give his subscription to the metropolitan paper, but the fellow several hundred miles away is difficult to hold, as a rule, even with a nominal subscription rate.

"Will not a raise in price to the distant readers mean that a big percentage of them will discontinue? I am inclined to believe they will, and that we circulation chaps will have to do some more intensive farming near home to take up the slack, if we have to put another increase across. The only consolation is that we will be given three-quarters of a year to make ready to meet the postage increase before it becomes operative.

"There is a possibility that arrangements might be made to bill out the bulk of local display advertising, together with 'legals' and want ads, from the editions going to distant points. The purpose of this would be to carry beyond the first zone just as small a volume of advertising matter as possible and thus sidestep the zone tax as applied to advertising portions of a newspaper.

"Some of the foreign or national advertisers will insist upon their copy being carried in all editions, but many of them will be open to reason. In these days of big automobile and tobacco exploiting there seems to be little chance to keep anyways near the stipulated 5 per cent allowance without taxation. The local advertiser will expect his copy to be carried in the first zone, and probably in the second, therefore will have an added postal charge, based on the volume of advertising in excess of 5 per cent to pay for on papers distributed relatively close to home.

"There unfolds before me a vision of 'this' or 'make-over' gables, with the want ad sections, legals, and local advertisements, so as to get as close as possible to the untaxed 5 per cent advertising limit for the far away zones. The only ray of sunshine in this will be heading off the 'make-up' from his favorite pastime of using an aged office, as to bill up a quarter-page hole in the 'East Mail' or the 'Bull Dog' editions.

"The remedy may eventually come from another direction, for instance, making the rate in the county of publication a half cent a pound, and applying the zone rate exclusively to the magazines and other periodicals. This would privilege the smaller town daily and its more infrequent brother at the county seat to share the second class mail expense with the metropolitan publisher, and I think it would be an equitable distribution of the cost."

Roy Hatton of the Detroit Free Press on "Cooperation among competitors in a given field; establishing fixed selling conditions; how to minimize losses through the 'dead beat' country and city dealers, etc."

Charles Payne of the Indianapolis Star on "Eliminating the middle man—district commission agents vs. salaried representatives in charge of branch offices."

The president called on members at random to discuss the following topics:

"Is the Cox or any other similar mailing machine a success? Do they eliminate complaints? Would a newspaper with a small circulation of five, or twenty thousands (circulation, speed and money invested considered) be justified in purchasing a machine of this kind?"

"Economies in news print consumption."

"Does bill-board, street-car and advertising in the columns of competitors pay in exploiting news features, like serials, etc."

"Methods of handling weekly collections with carrier boys."

"The bulletin service—is it of any value to the circulation department, and, it so, what is the best system?"

"Best method of organizing and directing city collectors and what is a fair compensation allowed for them?"

"Experiences of circulation managers taking care of circulation at army camps."

The rest of the afternoon was devoted to an open meeting for questions and answers by the members. The president called on members in rotation and asked if they had any questions to bring before the convention on circulation matters. This brought up from members many questions and explanations of the schemes they had successfully worked during the past year.

The annual dinner was held at the Piedmont Hotel on Wednesday evening, followed by an entertainment. HOW TO KEEP SUBSCRIPTION RECORDS.

About 150 persons were present at the banquet. Ivan E. Allen, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, was toastmaster. The speakers were Major John S. Cohen, editor and general manager of the Atlanta Journal; W. G. Bryan, publisher of the Atlanta Georgian and American; John M. Schmid, I. U. Sears and J. A. Mathews.

There were music and special numbers of entertainment by Miss Lilla Lyman, Mr. and Mrs. Green B. Adair, Fred Houser and Atlanta's famous colored orchestra.

THURSDAY MORNING.

J. T. Toler of the Atlanta Constitution spoke on "Discontinuance of premiums. Is it not better generally to apply the money expended on them to increasing the quality of the newspaper, as, for example, with more local news?" He said:

"As I see it, the whole thing should be summed up in these few words:

"Avoid premiums whenever possible. If used, let the subscriber pay the cost of the premium, the publisher the cost of the carrier, and use only as a measure of defense of a special circulation campaign, and not as a regular part of the institution."

"While this campaign is going on, however, the ideal condition of the editorial department should be approached by getting out the very best newspaper that local and general conditions will permit. In order to hold a large percent of the new business obtained by the use of premiums it will be necessary for the editorial department to do its part."

"In other words, premiums can be used to secure the circulation, but the quantity and quality of news must do the holding."

A paper prepared by Roy C. Webster of the Hartford Courant explained "The value of the New England Circulation Managers Association to the I.C.M.A. and the advantages of other state and other circulation managers' associations."

A number of papers on the program were not read, but will be printed in the Official Bulletin. Among them were:

Other papers programmed were by: T. V. Armstrong of the Ottawa (Ont.) Journal-Press on "Cooperation vs. competition in country circulation."

P. C. Treviranus of the Milwaukee Journal on "Introducing 'Scop,' the Journal's house organ for carriers and newshoys," and

H. A. Wenige, Bridgeport (Ct.) Standard American, on "In what other ways than by circulation figures can the circulation department be of the greatest service to increase and hold advertising patronage?"

Joe Levy of the New Orleans Item on "Newshoys" and newshoys' unions—are they practical? The George Fries of the Cincinnati Times-Star, on what he believes is the simplest and cheapest system for keeping R.F.D. and other mail subscription records and how he handles a subscription remittance from the time it reaches the office until the entire transaction is completed."

C. B. Julian of the Peoria (Ill.) Journal & Transcript on "The relative value of circularizing as compared with personal solicitation in efficiency, economy, and thoroughly covering the field."

Thirty minutes' discussion each was allowed on the following topics:

"Shall the I.C.M.A. invite circulation managers and magazines and trade journals and divide the association into divisions with a chairman at the head of each, all to come under the general control of the president of the I.C.M.A.?"

"Would it be wise to divide the United States and Canada into divisions so that circulation managers of each division may hold state or sectional meetings at least twice each year, such meetings to be in charge of a chairman, all to be under the supervision of the I.C.M.A.?"

Officers were elected as follows:

President, Ike U. Sears, Davenport (Ia.) Times; first vice-president, Joseph R. Taylor, Grand Rapids (Mich.) Press; second vice-president, James McKernan, New York World; secretary-treasurer, James A. Mathews, Oklahoma City Oklahoman.

Directors—A. G. Lincoln, St. Louis Post-Dispatch; D. B. G. Rose, Louisville (Ky.) Post; E. S. Dobson, Philadelphia Public Ledger; James R. Henderson, Montreal Gazette; J. M. Annenberg, Schenectady (N. Y.) Union-Star; James L. Farley, Philadelphia North American; John T. Toler, Atlanta Constitution; H. H. Fries, El Paso (Tex.) Herald.

Washington, D. C., won the 1918 convention.

John M. Schmid, the retiring president, was presented with an imported Oriental rug by the members in appreciation of his fine service in office.

On the conclusion of the meeting, many of the members left for a visit to Birmingham, Ala., Washington, D. C., and other cities en route home.

ENTERTAINMENT IN ATLANTA.

LADIES GIVEN A GOOD TIME WHILE THE MEN HELD THEIR SESSIONS.

The I.C.M.A. entertainment in Atlanta was arranged by a committee composed of John D. Simmons of the Journal; John T. Toler and J. H. Moye of the Constitution, and Charles Chandler of the Georgian and American.

The ladies' entertaining committee was composed of Mrs. Toler, Mrs. Chandler, Mrs. Moye and Mrs. Simmons.

On Tuesday, the visiting ladies visited the North Side, Ansley Park, Druid Hills and the residential sections; and after luncheon at the East Lake Clubhouse they joined the men for the afternoon trip to the Federal Prison, Cyclorama, scene of the Battle of Atlanta in Grant Park and trolley ride.

While the men were meeting Tuesday evening the ladies attended a vaudeville show at Keith's Forsyth Theater.

Wednesday the ladies went shopping in the morning, and in the afternoon enjoyed an automobile trip to Burns Club, Wrens Nest and other points of interest. They attended the association banquet and entertainment in the evening.

The official convention photograph was taken while the members and ladies were at the Federal Penitentiary.

A photograph of members only was taken at the adjournment of Wednesday's session.

The ladies were photographed on their automobile-luncheon trip.

Each member present received a copy of the official picture.

NO PRO-GERMAN MEDIA FOR ADVERTISING.

EDITOR THE FOURTH ESTATE:

SIX: In the belief that every American should contribute his share to suppress disloyalty, we have sent the following letter to each one of our clients:

"Don't feed the snake that it may bite you."

"We have in this country a large number of snakes—pacifists, La Follette, pro-Germans and German publications. Almost all of these have been receiving money from the German Government, and, for my part, I do not propose to feed them any American money."

"In pursuance of this, we have adopted a policy whereby we shall absolutely refuse to send any advertising orders or contracts to papers published in the German language, and venture to recommend this policy to you."

We believe that if every advertising agency would do likewise, the German Government would be put to considerable more expense in financing traitorous German publications than at present, and it seems to us an absolute disgrace that any red-blooded American advertiser will, by his patronage, support these snakes in the grass.

We suggest that you pass this idea along the line.

NEW YORK TIMES' VIEW OF RECOMMENDATION.

Commenting on the paper mill seizure recommendation of the Senate committee, the New York Times says:

"There is but one way to keep the Government out of the papermaking business. It is for the manufacturers of news print to come to their senses, abandon their excessive demands, and their most unwise defiance of the Government, make reasonable prices to publishers for the coming year, and put themselves in line with the men in control of other great industries who have very sensibly made agreements with the Government for the regulation of prices."

"The manufacturers are not asked to surrender their profits, they are asked merely to accept reasonable profits, like other manufacturers."

"Their present prices are extortionate."

"The Trade Commission has established a case against them."

"Since it is impossible for them to make a good defense of their present position, and since, in resisting all attempts to dislodge them from it, they incur visible and serious dangers, we should think they would have the wisdom to seek shelter while there is yet time."

"If the manufacturers of print paper, as the Government charges, have illegally combined to raise prices, they know how to combine to lower prices."

"Of that the Government would make no complaint. Every consideration of prudence and self-interest should prompt them, without delay, to take the only course that will avert the very serious consequences involved in the adoption of the Senate resolution."

REFUSES LOAN AD.

The Government may inquire into why the New Yorker Volks-Zeitung, the official organ of the German speaking Socialists of New York, has refused to aid the Liberty Loan campaign by taking paid advertising from the Liberty Loan committee. This refusal has been announced by Guy Emerson, director of publicity for the Second Reserve District.

This paper is the only publication in the entire district which has thus far declined point blank to aid the committee.

The refusal took place three weeks ago, when the principal banks of the city "pooled" together and inserted an advertisement in the daily papers urging thrift in connection with the distribution of the second Liberty Loan.

Offer of the advertisement was made to the Volks-Zeitung by the H. K. McCann Company on behalf of the Liberty Loan Committee. The McCann agency was told that the board of directors had decided, in a resolution passed about the time the German and Austrian loans were attempted in this country, to reject all propaganda assisting in the accumulation of war loans.

WHAT WILL CAUSE TROUBLE
—HOW FOREIGN PRESS MUST BE LICENSED.

Postmaster-General Burleson announced on October 9 that the provision of the Trading with the Enemy Act authorizing the Post Office Department to license foreign language newspapers was in operation and that within ten days the department would begin to issue licenses. He said a number of papers already have filed applications and scores are expected within the next few days.

The Postmaster-General said that publications need not fear suppression under the Trading with the Enemy acts censorship provision, unless they transgressed the bounds of legitimate criticism of the President, the Administration, the Army, the Navy, or the conduct of the war. Mr. Burleson declared:

"We shall take great care not to let criticism which is personally or politically offensive to the Administration affect our action.

"But if newspapers go so far as to impugn the motives of the Government and thus encourage insubordination, they will be dealt with severely.

"For instance papers may not say that the Government is controlled by Wall Street or munition manufacturers, or any other special interests.

"Publications of any news calculated to urge the people to violate law would be considered grounds for drastic action.

"We will not tolerate campaigns against conscription, enlistments, sale of securities, or revenue collections.

"We will not permit the publication or circulation of anything hampering the war's prosecution or attacking improperly our allies.

"The policy of the foreign language newspapers will be judged by their past utterances, and not by newly announced intentions. We have files of these papers, and whether we license them or not depends on our inspection of the files.

"German language newspapers not licensed will be required to publish English translations.

Mr. Burleson said no Socialist paper would be barred from the mails unless it contained treasonable or seditious matter. "The trouble," he added, "is that most Socialist papers do contain this matter."

FORM OF LICENSE.

The section of the Trading with the Enemy Act, adopted by Congress, affecting foreign language newspapers is applicable to all foreign languages and not German alone.

The President is given authority to license foreign language papers to publish war news without a correct translation in parallel column.

Only those so licensed will be permitted to print such matter without first submitting a translation to the Post Office Department. This section goes into effect 10 days after the passage of the act and remains in force until the close of the war.

The matter prohibited is specifically set forth to be "any news item, editorial, or other printed matter respecting the Government of the United States, or any nation engaged in the present war, its policies, international relations, the state or conduct of the war, or any matter relating thereto," unless the publication deposits with the postmaster before distribution or publication an English translation of the article or the President licenses the publication to work without these restrictions.

In the one case a statement must be printed as follows:

"True translation filed with the postmaster at — on — as required by this act."

Where licenses have been issued the publications will print above their matter:

"Published and distributed under permit authorized by the act of — on file at the post office of —."

These licenses are revocable.

Publications violating the section are liable to be barred from the mails and from other means of transportation.

There also is prescribed a penalty of a fine of not to exceed $500 or imprisonment for one year.

OTHER BRANCHES OF CENSORSHIP.

The censorship exercised by the Government over cable and telegraph lines is about to be extended and centralized in a new board, which will be established by a Presidential proclamation.

The new censorship board will be made up of representatives of the War, Navy and Post Office Departments and the Exports Council. While the Navy and the War departments will continue to have immediate charge of the censorship of cable and telegraph lines, respectively, this work will be done under the supervision of the new board, which in addition will exercise the new powers granted to the President under the Trading with the Enemy act. This act authorizes a censorship of mail matter addressed to foreign countries, the President to designate those countries as to which it should apply.

This question was discussed by the President on October 9 with the Cabinet members.

It is the understanding that a censorship will be applied soon to all mail destined for Spain and also to some of the South American countries. Evidence goes to prove that the German spy system has worked out a carefully devised plan for getting information via Spain into Germany. The new censorship will stop this.

The new board will have nothing to do with the press censorship now being exercised by the Post Office Department under the Trading with the Enemy Act.

PRESS CLUB HONORS WOOD.

The New York Press Club on October 6 gave a dinner in honor of George Wood, a well known New York newspaper man, upon his entering the United States service as a member of the hospital unit.

Edward Percy Howard, president of the Press Club, was toastmaster. Among the speakers were Arthur Curtis of the World; John A. Hennessy, formerly president of the Press Club, and Dan C. Nolan, editor of the Yonkers Daily News.

Keats Speed, managing editor of the Sun, presented the guest of honor with a wrist watch.

person, company, or corporation entitled to receive the same, such person, company, or corporation shall be paid seventy-five per centum of the amount so determined by the Federal Trade Commission and shall be entitled to sue the United States to recover such further sum as, added to said seventy-five per centum, will make up such amount as will be just compensation for such paper, and jurisdiction is hereby conferred on the United States district courts to hear and determine all such controversies.

"Sec. 3 That the President is authorized and empowered to take all proper steps to secure the cooperation of the Government of the Dominion of Canada in the creation of a similar agency as herein provided, with like functions; and the Federal Trade Commission is authorized and empowered to act in conjunction with such Canadian agency, when appointed, to the end of fully effectuating the objects of this act.

"Sec. 2 That the President shall have power by proclamation to declare that imports into the United States during the present war emergency of print paper and mechanical and chemical pulp shall be made only on Government account, to or through the Federal Trade Commission, if and whenever he shall determine such step to be necessary in order to fully effectuate the objects of this act.

"Sec. 4 That compliance with all orders and regulations of the Federal Trade Commission made in accordance with this act shall be obligatory on any individual, firm, association, company, corporation, or organized manufacturing industry, or the responsible head or heads thereof, and shall take precedence over all other orders and contracts heretofore placed with such individual, firm, company, association, corporation, or organized manufacturing industry; and any individual, firm, company, association, corporation, or organized manufacturing industry, or the responsible head or heads thereof, failing to comply with the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a felony and upon conviction shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than three years or by a fine of not exceeding $50,000, or both.

INVESTIGATION ORDERED BY SENATE.

"By direction of the Senate, under resolutions adopted April 24 and September 7, 1916, the Federal Trade Commission has made thorough and exhaustive investigations of the news print and book paper industries with a view to determining whether the prices demanded for print paper are justified by present costs of production.

"Complete reports on these investigations have been submitted to the Senate by the Trade Commission. The findings of the Federal Trade Commission show, beyond any question, that the print paper industry, in its greed for excessive profits, has imposed a most unjust burden on the American press, which faces a serious disaster if relief cannot speedily be had from the oppressive prices now exacted for print paper.

"The Trade Commission, in the course of its investigation, exhausted every resource at its command to obtain relief for the publishers, but has been able to secure only a small measure of success owing to the defiant attitude assumed by the principal producers of print paper and the lack of authority on the part of the commission to enforce its findings as to a fair and reasonable price.

"Before submitting its report to the Senate, the Trade Commission undertook an arbitration between the manufacturers of print paper and the publishers, whereby immediate relief might be had on a basis that would prevent serious financial distress and injury to the publishers and at the same time assure a fair compensation to the manufacturers of paper.

"In the course of this negotiation, the principal manufacturers of news print paper submitted a formal proposition to the commission requesting it to fix upon a fair and reasonable price for their product and agreeing to abide by such findings. The commission promptly fixed upon 2½ cents per pound, car lots, f. o. b. mill, as a fair and reasonable price for news print paper, but, subsequent to this finding, several of the largest manufacturers withdrew from the arbitration and no substantial or permanent relief has yet been obtained for the newspaper publishers.

"However, the Government itself has profited from the findings of the Trade Commission in that the President, at the suggestion of the joint committee on printing, has exercised his authority under the national-defense act to purchase news print paper required for certain war publications at the price fixed upon by the Trade Commission.

"Therefore, it seems all the more important that Congress should not delay longer in securing the same measure of justice for the newspaper publishers of the country.

"As a result of the Trade Commission's investigation of the news print situation, seven of the leading news print manufacturers have been indicted for violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law. In addition to which the Trade Commission, at the conclusion of its investigation of the book paper industry, entered a formal complaint against the bureau of statistics of the book paper manufacturers and 23 member companies of that bureau, charging them with using unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce.

"But neither the indictment nor the complaint has afforded any measure of protection up to this time to the publishers from whom the paper manufacturers are continuing to exact prices for paper that the Trade Commission has found to be utterly unfair and unreasonable.

PAPERS MUST SOON RENEW CONTRACTS.

"Most of the newspapers of the country are now up to the point where they will soon have to make contracts for paper for the coming year and, if any adequate relief is to be obtained for them, it must be had without waiting for the prosecution of the indictment in the Federal court or the formal complaint filed by the Trade Commission. On this point Trade Commissioner Colver said in his letter to the committee, under date of August 15, 1917:

"About January 1 the majority of publishers must make new contracts. There is every indication that they will be plundered. The bill prepared in your committee at the time Mr. Davies and myself appeared before you is respectfully recalled to your attention."

"Discussing the seriousness of the news print situation, not only to consumers of paper but to the public generally, the Trade Commission says in its report, 'the commission has reason to believe that this situation will be still more aggravated and serious in the ensuing months,' and adds that 'the consequences to thousands of smaller newspapers and to many of the larger ones, and through them to the reading public, will be most serious.'

"The resolution is intended to put into effect the following recommendations that the Trade Commission submitted to Congress in its reports on the news print and book paper industries, both of which were referred to the committee on printing:

"(1) That all mills producing and all agencies distributing print paper and mechanical and chemical pulp in the United States be operated on Government account; that these products be pooled in the hands of a Government agency and equitably distributed at a price based upon cost of production and distribution plus a fair profit per ton.

"(2) That pursuant thereto some Federal agency be empowered and directed to assume the supervision and control thereof during the pendency of the war.

"(3) That, by reason of the fact that approximately 75 per cent of the production of news print paper in Canada comes into the United States, proper action be taken to secure the cooperation of the Canadian Government in the creation of a similar governmental agency for the same function, which shall be clothed with power and authority to act jointly with the governmental agency of the United States for the protection of the consumers and manufacturers of print paper and the public of the United States and Canada.

"(4) That, in case the Canadian Government shall not join in such a cooperative enterprise, then the importation of paper and mechanical and chemical pulp into the United States shall be made only on Government account or through the Federal agency charged with such supervision and distribution."

"To make the resolution conform to the view of Congress as expressed in the food-control act, a provision has been inserted authorizing suit in the United States district courts if the price fixed by the Trade Commission is not satisfactory to the person entitled to receive the same, in which event only 75 per cent of the amount allowed by the commission shall be paid until the full compensation is determined by the court.

"To insure adequate authority to the Trade Commission to make the resolution effective a penalty provision has been added similar to that contained in the section for the purchase of military supplies of the national-defense act.

"The committee has been moved to report the resolution for the consideration of the Senate at this time in the hope that some relief may be speedily accorded the many publications that are in grave danger of destruction by the unbearable prices now exacted for print paper.

"To jeopardize the existence of the press is to imperil the life of the Government itself, so dependent is a democracy upon the prompt and widespread information of its people. Therefore, whatever affects the publication of its newspapers and periodicals likewise affects the welfare of the Government, and the necessities of such publications become in fact public necessities.

"If print paper cannot be obtained in adequate quantities, the information of the public will be restricted in the same measure as the output of the paper mills is limited; or, if the price of paper is held so high that many newspapers cannot afford to continue publication, the information of the public will likewise be curtailed and the interests of the Government suffer thereby.

"It seems imperative, therefore, that the Government should do everything in its power to insure the preservation of the press, especially in a time like the present when the newspapers and periodicals are such a vital force in helping the cause of humanity against military madness.

"The distress of the American publishers, particularly of the smaller newspapers which are least able to bear the unjust burden, is thus related in the report of the Federal Trade Commission on the news print paper industry:

"Among publishers of minor dailies and weeklies, it is complained that they found great difficulty in getting paper at any price, and to a large number of such publishers in the country the increase in the price means the difference between a living margin and the complete ruin of their business and the suspension of their publications.

"The financial strength of great daily publications may enable them to survive; it is the smaller newspapers that will probably suffer the most seriously if these conditions continue. The small weekly and daily publications of the country, particularly, serve a great and useful purpose in the dissemination of facts and in the creation of an intelligent public opinion, and such disaster as impends by reason of this increase in the price of news print paper makes the question one of great public concern."

"In another report to the Senate on July 10, the Trade Commission likewise calls attention to the news print situation and the urgency for immediate action as follows:

"The commission again earnestly invites the Senate's attention to the serious condition which is confronting the public and the newspapers of the country if a situation continues where prices to be paid for paper are based not upon cost of production and fair margin of profit but upon conditions such as have obtained in the past and give promise of obtaining in the future where price is based upon panic demand.

"Some of the larger newspapers of the country may be powerful enough to weather the conditions which have obtained during the past year for an additional year or some of them may be powerful enough to secure advantageous positions in the purchase of supplies, but it is of paramount importance that the great body of newspaper publishers of the country shall procure their supply of print paper at a fair price based upon cost and a fair and reasonable profit. Such a price will enable them to continue in business and serve the public efficiently."

BOOK PAPER REPORT SUBMITTED.

"Again, in its more recent report on the book paper industry, the Trade Commission renews its recommendation to Congress as to the urgency for prompt legislative enactment to relieve the publishers. In the book paper report the Trade Commission says:

"In its preliminary report of this investigation the commission recommended as a war emergency measure that all print paper and distributing agencies operated on Government account during the continuation of the war and that the total product be pooled in the hands of a governmental agency so that it may be equitably distributed at a fair price based upon cost of production and a reasonable profit per ton.

"These recommendations the commission wishes to renew, since it believes that under existing abnormal conditions immediate relief to publishers can only be obtained by the adoption of some such legislation.

"The commission also desires to call the attention of the Congress to the necessity for the enactment of legislation regulating the activities of trade associations. The print paper and other investigations of the commission show that trade associations, although originally organized for legitimate purposes and often engaged in helpful activities which serve a useful purpose, nevertheless some of them indulge frequently in practices which tend to destroy competition and defeat the objects of the Sherman law.

"The commission's print paper investigations show that the activities of the trade associations connected with the news print and book paper industries have contributed to the rise in price of these commodities and that the effective regulation and supervision of such activities by some governmental agency would tend to restore healthy competition in these industries and thereby to reduce prices to a more normal basis."

"There are 2,000 small dailies and some 14,000 weekly newspapers in the United States that have to depend largely on the open market for their supplies of news print. In the latter part of 1916 many of these smaller papers had extreme difficulty in obtaining a supply of paper except at prices which, if maintained, will drive them out of business, and yet the Federal Trade Commission, which spent more than a year investigating the news print situation, reports to Congress that—

"The efforts of the commission to restore competitive conditions in the news print industry expeditiously and to arbitrate and effectively project a fair price for news print paper have failed."

"The Federal Trade Commission in its report states that at prices now prevailing news print will cost the publishers in 1917 more than $105,000,000, which is an increase of $35,000,000, or 50 per cent."

"The commission further declares that one-half of this $35,000,000 increase in paper cost, or $17,500,000, alone represents additional profits to manufacturers."

VAST PROFITS OF PAPER COMPANIES

"The International Paper Company of New York, which produces nearly 40 per cent of the news print made in the United States, and thereby largely fixes its price, is reported to have added $7,465,827 to its profits in 1916, an increase of $4,344,146 over its profits for 1915."

"It is likewise interesting to note that the common stock of the International Paper Company jumped from 94½ to 75½ in 1916 and recently was quoted around 35, while its preferred stock ranged in 1916 from 42½ to 109½, the current quotations being about 65."

"Unless Congress takes some such action as here proposed, the International will likewise get the lion's share out of the $17,500,000 of additional profits which the Federal Trade Commission reports are in sight this year for the news print manufacturers."

"The Lauretide Company of Montreal, another large manufacturer of news print paper, also shows the largest profits in its history, according to reports submitted at the recent annual meeting of that company. Its net earnings, including returns from investments, amounted to $2,220,000 for the year ended June 30, 1917, as against its previous record of $1,244,283. In other words, the gain amounted to $975,717, or about 77 per cent, over the best previous profits of the Lauretide Company. After deducting the usual charges for interest, depreciation, etc., the Lauretide Company's reports show a balance of $1,988,193, equal to a little less than 21 per cent. This represents earnings on common stock at the rate of 17.8 per cent. The president of the Lauretide Company is one of the news print manufacturers indicted for violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law.

"In connection with the vast profits now being made by the manufacturers of news print paper, the report of the committee on paper of the American Newspaper Publishers Association states:

"There is not a single paper mill which has been built in the United States or Canada in the last 10 years which has not made 15 to 20 per cent on the money invested. The very fact that stock jobbers and watered stock promoters are able to get away with so much in the paper business is prima facie evidence that the margins are more than liberal. Many companies have millions of dollars of water stock, which was only promotion and organization bonus stock. Under the liberal profits being made, this stock is in many cases worth away above par."

"Of course it is very evident from these tremendous profits that the manufacturers of news print paper do not want any governmental supervision or control over their products. In fact the president of the International Paper Company, Philip T. T. Dodge, has been quoted as saying:

"I wish to say emphatically that our company will be unalterably opposed to Government regulation. The minute that begins, we will start putting our machines out of business. I oppose Government supervision of our business."

NEWS PRINT MANUFACTURERS INDICTED

"It is sufficient to observe in this connection that Mr. Dodge is under indictment for violation of the anti-trust law in the conduct of the business of the International Paper Company, the particular charge against him, together with the president of the Lauretide Company and certain other members of the News Print Manufacturers Association, being that they had agreed in carrying on their trade:

"(a) To refrain from competing with each other in the matter of securing new customers for their paper."

"(b) To refrain from competing with each other as to the quality of the paper to be sold."

"(c) To refrain from competing with each other as to delivery of and furnishing storage for paper sold but not delivered."

"(d) To refrain from competing with each other as to terms of credit, rate of interest on open accounts, dates of beginning and ending of contracts, the methods of making sales of paper through salesmen, dealers, and jobbers, the payment of return freight on the cores upon which their paper was wrapped, payment of charges for cartage, and allowing of claims for waste or damaged paper."

"(e) To engage in simultaneous representations to the public, to their customers, and to each other, of the alleged increased cost of manufacture and of the alleged shortage of news print paper, and to manufacture insufficient quantities of such paper, with the object of concertedly working for materially higher prices."

"(f) To cooperate in discouraging the erection of new mills or the installation of new machines for the manufacture of news print."

"(g) To cooperate in preventing new concerns from competing with them by transferring orders and contracts to new concerns on condition that such new companies should not compete with them."

"(h) To furnish from time to time to the News Print Manufacturers Association, at No. 18 East Forty-first Street, New York City, for the information of the defendants full and complete information concerning contracts with their customers and the quantity of the paper manufactured, carried in stock or sold by them, also the capacity of their various plants and other details of their businesses."

"In view of the attitude of these news print manufacturers the committee does not believe that Congress should concern itself at this time over their opposition to Government regulation and control of their product."

"Their conduct is particularly conspicuous in comparison with the views expressed by other American business men who, at the recent Atlantic City convention of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, adopted resolutions urging Government price fixing for all essential products, not only in sales to the Government but to the public as well, and advocating a general Government purchasing department, which, in addition to fixing prices, would have power to distribute the output of industries in a manner most necessary to the conduct of the war."

"The resolutions adopted by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States gave further expressions to the loyalty of the business men as follows:

"It is the spirit of American business, that however fundamental may be the change in the relation of Government to business, the Government should have the power during the period of the war to control prices and the distribution of production for public and private needs to whatever extent may be necessary for our great national purpose."

"The resolution giving the Federal Trade Commission power to supervise, control, and regulate the production and distribution of print paper is in full accord with the position taken by these patriotic American business men at their Atlantic City convention."

NEWSPAPER MEN DO NOT FEAR CENSOR.

"In some quarters, however, it has been suggested that a proposition for Government supervision and control over the production and distribution of print paper is not to the best interests of the newspaper publishers and that it might, in effect, create a censorship over the press of the country."

"The best answer to this suggestion comes from the newspaper men themselves. Their answer is an overwhelming indorsement of the proposition to place the news print paper industry under Federal control during the period of the war."

"In this connection the following letter from Hon. Frank P. Glass, editor of the Birmingham (Ala.) News and vice-president and chairman of the executive committee on paper of the American Newspapers Publishers Association, is submitted:

of white print paper during the war period, was lately submitted to the members of the American Newspaper Publishers Association on a referendum vote:

"Whereas in view of the fact that the long-continued tension of the print paper situation has not been relieved, and the plan of relief worked out by the Federal Trade Commission has been nullified by the fact that the commission is without legal power to enforce its remedies: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the newspapers earnestly urge upon Congress the granting to the Federal Trade Commission the necessary power to fix the price of the product of American paper manufacturers and brokers, and representatives and selling agencies in America representing or acting in behalf of paper manufacturers and mills manufacturing paper outside of the United States.

"I beg leave to inform you that this referendum vote has been sufficiently completed to authorize a statement of the result. The resolution has been endorsed by a vote of 2 to 1.

"It gives me pleasure to convey this information to you, believing that it will have decided weight with your committee and with all Members of Congress upon the matter of the Government's taking over the regulation of the print paper trade. This step has been taken by all Governments of the Allies of the United States, and the necessity of a similar step here is constantly becoming plainer.

"Trusting that this expression of opinion by a large majority of the publishers of daily newspapers of the country may be useful to you, I am,

"Very respectfully yours,

F. P. GLASS,

"Vice-President and Chairman Executive Committee on Paper, American Newspaper Publishers Association."

FINDS NO OPPOSITION TO PLAN.

"Directly on the subject of censorship, George E. Hosmer of Denver, chairman of the legislative committee of the National Editorial Association, is quoted as saying:

"As to the suggestions that have been made from some sources, in some of the trade press, that if the Government has charge of the manufacture and distribution of paper it will mean a complete censorship of newspapers, for a Federal administration body would refuse to furnish paper to any one that censured the Government, I can best answer by quoting H. B. Varner of North Carolina, with whom I talked in Washington. He said that he much preferred to have the Government censor him than to have the news print manufacturers censor his product. I feel that he has put the matter tersely, and that if the Government does not take over this proposition, according to the plan of the Federal Trade Commission, many of the newspapers of the country are going to suffer severely.

"Since this report was made I have conferred with newspaper men, particularly of the smaller daily and weekly class, in 12 or 15 states, running all the way from the Atlantic coast nearly to the Pacific, and have yet to find any opposition to the plan."

"In his report to the National Editorial Association convention Mr. Hosmer stated, concerning the news print situation:

"Investigation by the Federal Trade Commission and by our committee has clearly shown that there has been only a slight increase in the cost of manufacturing print paper since 1915, and you all know the increase has been from 50 per cent to 200 per cent in the selling price."

"It seems to me that what should be done is to give the Federal Trade Commission specific power to fix prices and take charge of distribution of print paper. If that is not sufficient, give the Trade Commission power to take over the mills and operate them during the war period. We are now in a critical condition in this country, and the pirates who have been holding us up on print paper, as well as those who have been holding the people up on foods, should be prosecuted and their privileges curtailed.

"There is no question that the interests of the country demand that the publishers be furnished paper at a reasonable price and in sufficient quantities to meet their legitimate demands."

EDITORIAL ASSOCIATIONS APPROVE.

"The National Editorial Association at its annual convention in Minneapolis on July 11, adopted the following resolution urging the Federal Trade Commission to take over and operate American news print mills and thus reduce the price of news print paper:

"Whereas for the past 18 months there has been a determined and persistent effort on the part of the print paper manufacturers and jobbers to create a panic market for print paper; and

"Whereas for several months they have succeeded in making the publishers believe that there were good and sufficient reasons for the extraordinary prices they were charging, but during the past seven or eight months it has been clearly demonstrated by the investigations of the Federal Trade Commission and by your legislative committee that there was, and is, no good reason for the large advances made, as the Trade Commission clearly demonstrated that there had been but a very slight increase in the cost of manufacture; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the National Editorial Association in convention assembled at Minneapolis, calls upon Congress to pass legislation immediately that will give the Federal Trade Commission power to fix prices and operate the mills and distribute the print paper manufactured in the United States during the period of the present war in accordance with the recommendations of the Trade Commission in its report to Congress. And further be it

Resolved, That arrangements be made with the Canadian Government so that the print paper manufactured in Canada and shipped into this country shall also be handled by the Trade Commission in order that all the publishers of the United States may be provided with sufficient paper at a reasonable price."

"The Southern Newspaper Publishers Association in convention at Asheville, N. C., July 9-11, adopted the following resolution favoring legislative enactment to control the production of the news print paper, as proposed by your committee:

"Resolved, That the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association, representing 105 leading daily newspapers of the South, in convention assembled, unqualifiedly approves and strongly urges the immediate adoption of the complete plans of the print paper committee of the American Newspaper Publishers Association to empower the Federal Trade Commission by legislative enactment to control the production of news print paper, to pool its distribution, and to fix its price."

"This action is absolutely necessary to conserve the best interest of our Government and our people under the present extraordinary emergency."

"The Georgia Weekly Press Association likewise adopted a resolution at its meeting in Thomasville, Ga., July 16-18, indorsing the action of the Federal Trade Commission in urging Government control of print paper mills."

"The New York State Press Association, at its meeting in Ithaca on June 29, also adopted a resolution indorsing the action of the Federal Trade Commission in recommending Government control of print paper mills, and recommended cooperation between the Governments of the United States and Canada in controlling the manufacture and sale of news print paper."

"It is evident, therefore, that the vast majority of the newspaper editors and publishers have no fear whatever of any censorship being exercised through Government control of the production and distribution of print paper."

"Such little opposition as has been expressed by newspaper publishers comes from the owners of a few of the larger dailies, which are either interested financially in paper mills or have advantageous contracts for print paper that they fear might be affected by Government supervision and control.

ALREADY UNDERTAKEN IN SMALL WAY.

"The fact is, the Federal Trade Commission has already undertaken in a small way and without specific authority of law to distribute a limited quantity of news print paper in sheet form which it succeeded in having placed to its account by one or two independent mills."

"In directing the distribution of this paper through the jobbers who agreed to handle it at a reasonable charge, or through certain newspaper associations, the Federal Trade Commission has actually relieved a number of the smaller newspapers that were being oppressed by the excessively high prices demanded for sheet news print."

"Concerning this effort of the Federal Trade Commission, Mr. Hosmer, chairman of the legislative committee of the National Editorial Association, says:

"The smaller newspapers are particularly thankful to the Trade Commission at this time for the paper they have furnished them since last April, even though the big manufacturers, who agreed to furnish paper at a reasonable price, failed. Independent mills have furnished the paper through the commission to newspapers in more than 20 states at prices from $5 to $9 1/3 per cent under the prices quoted by jobbers and mills direct. In some cases this paper has been distributed through designated jobbers, who have been paid about 10 per cent for handling; in other cases through Senate associations or committees from associations, who have handled it as a patriotic duty, without expense to the newspaper men."

"The Canadian Government has undertaken to control the production and distribution of news print paper through its orders in council."

"It is stated that a pool is actually in existence in Canada, the news print manufacturers selling to Canadian publishers at $2.50 per 100 f. o. b. mill, and $3 per 100 f. o. b. mill when shipped to destinations outside of that country."

"In this connection it is interesting to note that $2.50 is the price that the Federal Trade Commission has fixed upon as a fair and reasonable price for news print paper in this country."

"In comparison with this price; the Trade Commission reports that the largest consumers of news print have had to pay from $3 to $3.50 per 100 pounds, and in some cases even up to $4.50, while the small publishers have been forced to pay prices as high as $7.50 to $9 per 100 f. o. b. mill."

"This same paper sold before the war as low as $2 per 100 pounds, delivered."

"By indorsing the proposition for Government control over the production and distribution of print paper during the war the newspaper publishers have indicated that they have no fear whatever of the Government censorship under such plan."

"What the newspapers do fear, and justly so, is that their very existence may be placed in jeopardy by the paper combine, which already, by its greed for excessive profits, has forced hundreds of the smaller newspapers throughout the country to discontinue publication."

"Could any Government censorship be more drastic or fatal to a free press than that which the indicted paper clique already has exercised for their own selfish interest?"

"The committee submits the resolution for the consideration of the Senate with the question whether it is better to safeguard the continuance of a free press in this country by assuring it an adequate supply of print paper at a fair and reasonable price or whether to permit a further increase in the excessive profits of the paper industry, which the Federal Trade Commission declares is about to exact $17,500,000 more in excessive profits from the American publishers, who are loyally and patriotically supporting their Government in this fateful hour?"

PAPER MAKERS' TRIAL SET FOR NOVEMBER 12.

AS THE FOURTH ESTATE told last week it would be, the trial of the five members of the Executive Committee of the News Print Manufacturers Association and two others who were indicted on a charge of having combined to increase the price of news print paper, in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, which was set down for October 8 in the Federal District Court, New York, was adjourned by Judge Learned Hand until November 12 by agreement of counsel.

BRITAIN SETS PAPER PRICE.

The British Paper Commission this week fixed the price that news print paper manufacturers in Great Britain may receive for their paper when sold to the newspaper publishers of Great Britain.

The price is 4½ pence per pound, which, converted into United States money on the basis of par of exchange, is 9.3725625 cents per pound.

BIG PAPER CARGO HERE.

There arrived in New York City this week a cargo of about 1,500 tons of news print paper and some ground wood pulp, brought here by the Publishers Paper Company, Ltd., from the Harnsworth Mill in Great Falls, Newfoundland.

All paper brought to the United States by the Publishers Paper Company is sold before it is manufactured.

PAPER LABOR SCARCITY.

The present price being paid experienced woodmen in Maine in getting out pulpwood is $2 a day with board, as compared with $35 a month last year.

The present price paid cooks is $3.04 per day; teamsters, $2.25; blacksmiths and filers, $3.10; all with board.

Reports indicate difficulty in securing men at the foregoing prices and that the scarcity is due to the high prices paid in munition plants.

NEW TAGEBLATT HEAD.

August F. Herbert is taking the place of L. Werner and M. Darkow, the editors of the Philadelphia Tageblatt who were indicted on the charge of conspiracy against the Government. The names of the officials who were indicted with Werner and Darkow appeared in their usual places on the top of the editorial column.

Although Darkow is an alien enemy, he can be tried in the United States courts on the charge of treason, according to United States District Attorney Kane.

CHICAGO "FOREIGN" MEN AID LIBERTY LOAN.

A campaign by the editors of foreign language newspapers and citizens of foreign extraction to make Chicago a leader in floating the second Liberty Loan was inaugurated at a luncheon in the Hotel Sherman, following addresses by Hans Rieg, chief of the foreign language division, bureau of publicity, of the Treasury Department; John F. Smulski, Louis M. Hammerling and W. A. Heath.

Concrete proof of the cooperation of the foreign language press was given when Mr. Hammerling, at the close of the meeting, announced that the fifty papers represented in Chicago had pledged $50,000, with which to buy Liberty Bonds of the new issue.

A committee representing practically every nationality among the citizens of foreign extraction in Chicago was appointed to cooperate with the Liberty Loan executive committee of the district. Their names are:

Belgian, Felix J. Streckmanns.

Bohemian, A. J. Cermak.

Croatian, Dr. Anthony Biankini.

Danish, Henry L. Hertz.

French, Edward D. La Torneaux.

Greek, C. Salopulos.

German, Henry Lutzenkirchen.

Hungarian, Steven von Fay.

Italian, Hector Durante.

Jewish, Harry A. Lipky.

Lithuanian, Rev. J. B. Klorie.

Norwegian, Oscar Haugen.

Russian, Nicholas Klekner.

Polish, John P. Smulski, Joseph A. Werwinski, South Bend, Ind.

Serbian, John R. Palandech.

Syrian, Paul S. Newey.

Spanish, Consul Bartheld Singer.

Swedish, Henry Samuel Hinschen.

Mr. Hammerling, who is president of the Association of Foreign Language Newspapers, explained the need of enlightenment which the foreign-language newspapers could do.

"When I am speaking," he said, "I change the name of the bonds slightly and call them 'privilege bonds,' because in the language of my childhood the word 'privilege' stands for the most noble act a human being can do.

"I have been talking in factories and in shops, and I find that as soon as the workmen really understand the nature of the bonds they subscribe readily. The City of Chicago, with a larger percentage of citizens of foreign extraction than of native-born Americans, should show 1,500,000 subscribers before the campaign is finished, for they have more at stake than any one else."

CHANGES IN SPRINGFIELD.

Ralph C. Busby has been appointed managing editor of the Springfield (Ohio) Sun, succeeding Paul C. Laybourne, resigned. Recently Mr. Busby has been editing the Cooperator, house organ of the Robbins & Myers Company, of which the Sun's new owner (W. A. Myers) is the secretary.

As editor of the the Cooperator, Mr. Busby is succeeded by Raymond G. Hall of the Daily News and formerly of the Sun.

Earl Leech has resigned from the Sun's editorial staff to go with the Dayton Journal.

NEWSPAPER EXPERIENCE IS GREAT HELP TO SILL.

William Raymond Sill, the publicity director of the Century Theater, New York, for Dillingham & Ziegfeld, is a well known newspaper man.

Born in Hartford, the son of a former governor of that state, and educated at Amherst College, he entered the newspaper business in his native city and was associated there with the late John Addison Porter, the first secretary of President McKinley, then editor of the Hartford Post.

WILLIAM RAYMOND SILL.

Next he was editor of the first daily in Litchfield County, Ct., the Winsted Citizen, where he remained until he went to the Minneapolis Tribune, then owned by Charles M. Palmer, who had married a daughter of young Sill's uncle.

During this period he was at the Indian uprising that resulted in the death of Sitting Bull.

Leaving Minneapolis he went with Mr. Palmer's interests to the St. Joseph (Mo.) News. Returning East, he became connected with the New York Recorder and later the Hartford Post, but remained there for but a short time when William Randolph Hearst, who had just bought the New York Journal, dispatched him to Cuba, where he was with the insurgent army under Gomez and Antonio Macco. On reaching Havana, he was incarcerated in Morro Castle and remained there under sentence of death, but was subsequently released.

During the Spanish War Mr. Sill represented the Hearst interests and was with the American troops, and on a despatch boat with Schley's squadron when the Spanish Fleet was destroyed.

After the War he went to the New York Evening World, and became dramatic critic of that paper, succeeding Alan Dale, until he joined Weber & Fields at their famous music hall as representative. He was with those two manager-comedians until their separation, after which Mr. Sill occupied a similar position with Lew Fields.

He left Mr. Fields to become press man at the newly created Palace Theater for the Keith interests and later joined the staff of Charles Dillingham as business manager for Montgomery & Stone.

Mr. Sill is not new at the Century Theater, for he was there when it was under the Wayburn management, two seasons ago. He is one of the most widely known and popular press representatives in the country.

PRESIDENT LAUDS ARMY PAPERS.

TRENCH AND CAMP, ISSUED JOINTLY BY NEWSPAPER OWNERS, APPEARS.

The first issue of Trench and Camp, the weekly newspaper for national army and National Guard training camps, carries the following letter from President Wilson to John Stewart Bryan, publisher of the Richmond News-Leader, editor-in-chief:

"I am happy to have a chance to say this word of gratitude for the newspapers which you and your associates are so generously providing to be issued in our great training camps.

"I understand that this is to be in a very special sense, a soldiers' newspaper and that it will no doubt be devoted in substantial part to matters of local and peculiar interest in the camps in which they appear, but that they will also have a general influence in interpreting to the soldiers the hope and enthusiasm of the nation behind them and interpreting to the nation the fine determination and spirit of our men in arms.

"It is important that there should be no loss of touch between the nation and its soldiers and the series of papers so generously provided will be helpful in maintaining the spirit and understanding of both."

Trench and Camp is to be published simultaneously for each of the camps by the newspaper of a nearby city. The newspaper will get out the paper without charge and turn it over to the Y.M.C.A. for distribution.

The Rayonet, the official organ of the eighth division, National Army, at Camp Lee, Va., made its initial appearance on October 5. The edition consisted of eight pages, with a four-page pictorial section showing camp scenes. Each company has a reporter and all news relates directly to men in the cantonment and their activities. The edited copy is taken to the offices of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, where the Rayonet is printed without charge. The initial issue has claimed a circulation of 15,000 and carried 618 inches of advertising. The profits are to be used in providing recreational equipment.

CAMP PAPER SQUELCHED.

This week's issue of the Ontario Post, printed by the Flower Hospital Unit stationed at Fort Ontario, Oswego, N. Y., has been suppressed. An editorial written by Captain W. E. Doremus of New York proved objectionable to Captain A. R. Edwards, commandant of the fort, and to Congressman Luther W. Mott.

THE ORGANIZATION OF A DAILY NEWSPAPER.

ARTICLE XIV.

MAKING COST SYSTEM SELL ADVERTISING—HOW IT MAY BE USED TO RAISE THE LOW RATE CONTRACT.

BY EDMUND WALKER.
Herald Building, Chicago.

Today I want to talk to the advertising manager and his assistants. I am not an advertising salesman, but perhaps this article will give you some idea of how to use your accounting department to the best advantage.

Have you ever approached a merchant for whom you were carrying display advertising at a low rate with the intention of renewing the contract at a higher rate?

Of course you have, and you remember the line of talk you gave him.

It was entirely based on generalities. You told him about rising cost and news print and labor troubles and overhead expense.

After you were all through, assuming that you were successful, you got the new contract, patted yourself on the back and expected an increase in salary, whereas you probably deserved to have been fired.

Now what really happened?

You "bullied" the advertiser into signing your contract at a higher rate. You left him with the opinion that you had "put one over"—of course the contract was signed, but that is not salesmanship.

Some advertising solicitors "take orders" and other "sell" advertising—there is quite a difference.

You took his order for so many lines of advertising space, you did not care about the copy he would run, you got as big an order as you could, absolutely ignoring the fact that he might be contracting for more space than his sales justified.

You got as big a rate as you could without taking into consideration the cost of production or the class of advertising to be produced or his personal record in the composing rooms.

THE OTHER WAY OF SELLING.

John Doe's advertising contract was due to expire on September 30, and on August 31—a month preceding the expiration date—your accountant began keeping actual costs on the copy turned in by him.

These sheets recorded in full detail the actual time spent in the composing room, both hand and machine, on this copy.

The class of work performed was also recorded, the cost of the space, the total cost of producing the advertisement and the selling price day by day.

On September 30 your accountant handed you these sheets properly summarized. You then went to see this advertiser with a view to satisfying him that he should pay a higher rate. Here was what you said:

"During the past year your advertising has been carried at a net loss of $722.14—this may sound like poor business and it is. You would not make a contract to sell your merchandise at less than it cost you and you would feel very uncomfortable to know that you were buying our advertising space at less than it cost us to produce.

"You can help us reduce this production cost, however, so that your rate will not have to cover a multitude of unproductive outlays.

"Having installed an efficient costing system, your copy has been carefully watched and we find that last month alone 'corrections' ordered by you after handing in your copy, cost us $24.16—this is $289.92 per annum, or practically equivalent to a 6 per cent dividend on $5,000 of our cash capital.

"In other words $5,000 of our capital is going to waste every year because of your corrections.

"Now, we do not want to charge you for something which does you no good, so we urge you to eliminate these corrections in your copy.

"Our suggestion is that, rather than make a blanket change to cover this cost, we quote you a rate eliminating this expense and you simply pay the cost of making such corrections as you may demand.

"In that way you only pay for what you get and we get refunded our outlay—we both win.

"Eliminating this item then, we show a loss of $432.22 on your orders. Here are the daily cost sheets for September, let us examine them carefully together.

"You notice that the advertisement carried in our issue of the 4th contained the same number of lines as on the 6th, and yet cost more to produce.

"Examining the details for these days, you see that the copy for the 4th was practically all set up by hand, while that of the 6th was practically all machine work.

"Do you believe that your advertisement of the 4th was any better than the insertion on the 6th?

"Did you get anything in return for this additional expense.

"If your copy had all cost the same rate as on the 6th we could have produced your advertising in September at 14 per cent less than it actually cost us.

"Now here is what we suggest for the next three months:

"You are going to help us keep down production expense, and we are going to cooperate with you. Your rate will be based on the actual cost of production.

"During the next three months we are going to sell you white space at 1 cent a line, and on that cost we are going to charge you for the actual time used in the composing rooms.

"At the end of three months we will strike an average and then obtain a flat rate. In the meantime you will reduce the cost to your company by helping us along the lines above set out.

"For the next three months you will have the satisfactory feeling of knowing that you are only paying for what you actually get.

"After that, when we adopt a flat rate, we are still going to keep a check on your orders and you can come and ask for these sheets showing the cost of carrying out your contract at any time.

"If you go back to your old habits, of course, we will have to revert to our original plan and charge you separately.

"So much for the rate question—now how about the space requirements of your business?

"Mr. Walker, our auditor, has been watching your advertisements and has given me this report, which should help us ascertain the amount of space you require.

"Last year you spent $342.17 advertising 'Jones' cigars—what were your total sales?

"Only $1,430?

"Well, on the margin of profit the manufacturers allow your company you cannot afford to spend more than 3 per cent of your gross sales on advertising.

"Now why don't you make a list of the most profitable lines you handle. Then show against each line just what margin can be spared for advertising and run your copy accordingly?

"Some lines which you carry cannot afford to be advertised at all—there is not the profit in them. Other lines you can well afford to push.

"If you like I will bring our auditor over here this evening after your store is closed and he will make up that list with your help—then you and I will get together again and plan your next year's contract intelligently—we will know exactly what space you need and what copy you are going to run—I shall be able then to tell you how to keep your cost of production in our composing rooms down, too."

Now, Mr. Advertising Manager, who "sold" advertising and who "took orders?"

Do you think that advertiser is going to be unappreciative of this service?

I believe that the solicitor for the other paper over the road is going to have a very hard time breaking into your field—I think you are by this time regarded as one of the inside partners.

There is yet another feature of this work. Your auditor went round to this advertiser's store and saw what was going on from the inside. If he was up to his work, he would now know exactly what line of credit to extend and in the event of accidents he will know where to collect his money.

Do not let me give you the impression that any cost system will give you these results. It won't.

More money is being wasted every month on cost systems not designed for newspapers than you would believe. In making an installation I always work my plans to meet the advertising department and to help produce business.

I. N. S.-A. P. SUIT TO BE REVIEWED.

U. S. SUPREME COURT GRANTS WRIT OF CERTIORARI ON BOTH SIDES' PETITION.

The grant by the United States Supreme Court of a petition for a writ of certiorari in the case of the International News Service and the Associated Press on October 8 reopened a controversy which is bound to have a most important effect on every news service and every newspaper in the United States.

The action of the supreme court was taken because of a minority opinion by Justice Ward in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, and also because claims of the Associated Press to news fact proprietorship were new in law.

The opinion of the other two members of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the contention of the Associated Press that it was possible to obtain a proprietorship in a news fact.

The minority decision of Justice Ward declared that any such doctrine was "absurd."

The contention of the International News Service, that knowledge of a fact, once that knowledge was acknowledged to the public by the publication of a newspaper or by its display on a bulletin board, became public property.

The whole question will now be reopened before the United States Supreme Court and a final decision will be reached on this principle which the International News Service has contended is "vital to a free press and is the greatest bulwark against the formation in the United States of an absolute news monopoly."

This action does not stay the operation of the injunctions already existing, court officials said, but merely provides for a review, to which there was no opposition by the Associated Press.

There was no right of appeal to the Supreme Court, but both sides petitioned the Supreme Court for a writ of certiorari to review it, the Associated Press also being anxious to secure a decision of the highest tribunal in the United States on the subject.

The petition of the Associated Press for a writ of certiorari recited that it "would be content to rest its rights upon the decisions below without requesting the Supreme Court to assume the burden, except that nothing but a decision of the Supreme Court can assure this great service a sound and indisputable foundation and forestall a great quantity of costly and harassing litigation all over the country in both Federal and state courts."

CLUB TO ISSUE WEEKLY.

Beginning with the October number of the Columbus (Ohio) Athletic Club Journal, the magazine will be issued every Friday. The first number will be devoted to Camp Sherman.

REPEAL AMENDMENTS FOR SECOND CLASS INCREASES

TO BE PRESENTED WHEN CONGRESS RECONVENES IN DECEMBER—NOW BEING STUDIED BY COMMITTEE.

Increased second class mailing rates are among the features of the War Revenue Bill that members of the Senate Finance Committee are studying for the purpose of offering repeal amendments when Congress convenes again, because they impose double taxation and are regarded as being unjust to certain individuals and industries.

A leading opponent of these features is Senator Penrose, ranking Republican member of the finance committee. He holds that the tax on second class matter should be increased over the one-cent-per-pound rate only after a scientific investigation by the Post Office Committee.

Therefore he will offer a bill at the next session to provide for such an investigation, with the idea of having the Post Office Committee report a bill dealing justly with the newspapers and magazines.

Senator Penrose has stated his intention of presenting appeal amendments, and he is sure to have the backing of such men as Senators Simmons, chairman of the finance committee; Smoot, Hitchcock, Smith of Michigan and others.

Chairman Simmons of the finance committee voiced his displeasure with the second-class increases as follows in presenting the conferees' report of the Revenue Bill to the Senate:

"The original proposition to impose a tax on advertising matter under the zone system provided for a very much higher rate than we finally agreed upon. The original proposition was that both the rates upon reading matter and the rates upon advertising matter should presently take effect—I think in thirty days after the passage of the bill, or it may have been the 1st of January.

"That was changed upon the insistence of your conferees; so that none of these rates, either as to reading matter or advertising matter, will take effect until the 1st day of July, 1918, and the increases will be made annually on advertising matter through a period of four years, and on reading matter through a period of two years; that is, the first increase on reading matter will be for the first year only a quarter of a cent, and for the second year another quarter of a cent, making half a cent.

"There is also a provision, inserted by the conferees, upon the insistence of the Senate conferees, that a publisher shall be permitted to mail his publication from any Post Office and to secure the zone rate of that Post Office; that is to say, if a magazine is published in New York, it may be sent by freight or express to San Francisco and distributed from the San Francisco office at the zone rates applicable to that office.

"I think that is a provision which will afford in some cases very great relief against what is characterized by some of the publishers as a hardship.

"I want to add that, speaking for myself personally, in the finance committee I thought that postal taxes, whether upon letters or upon publications, newspapers, and periodicals, were matters which should be dealt with as a postal measure rather than as a revenue measure.

"I did not believe then, and I do not believe now, that any tax should be imposed upon the facilities of the Post Office Department except for the purpose of defraying the expenses of that department and that service and its enlargement and expansion.

"It will be a long time, even if the Government shall finally make a profit from the transportation and distribution of second-class mail matter, as it is making a profit in the carriage of letters, before we shall receive a sufficient revenue from the Post Office Department to make the necessary extensions and enlargements in postal facilities to which the people of this country are entitled and which the best interests of the Government demand.

"I do not believe that we ought to be imposing taxes upon these facilities for the purpose of defraying the expenses of this war. I think this is one subject upon which we ought not to lay our hands.

"Entertaining that opinion, I felt that it was not a matter for the finance committee, but a matter for the post office committee.

"I was glad, therefore, when we were able to write into this bill a provision that the tax that we impose shall not take effect until July, 1918.

"I trust that before that time arrives the post office committee will work this matter out in a more satisfactory way than your committee or the conferees have been able to work it out, and that whatever additional tax it is found expedient and proper and just to impose may be imposed, not for the purpose of raising money to defray the expenses of this war, but for the purpose of raising more money to increase the postal facilities."

NEW MASONIC PAPER.

The Delaware Masonic Index, a monthly publication devoted to the interests of the Masonic Order in Delaware, has made its initial appearance with H. T. Price and G. B. Hynson as editors, H. Guthrie as assistant and J. C. Morgan as business manager.

Mr. Hynson, formerly editor of the Wilmington (Del.) Journal and now in the printing business in Philadelphia, has just been elected grand master of the Grand Lodge of Delaware, A. F. & A. M.

The St. James (Minn.) Journal-Gazette has sold its subscription list and good will to the St. James Plain-dealer and Independent.

LEE JOINS THE N. Y. TRIBUNE.

FAMOUS AD WORKER IS NOW DIRECTING PAPER'S BUREAU OF INVESTIGATIONS.

Richard H. Lee, who had the misfortune to be taken seriously ill a month ago when he was about to assume the duties of his new position with the New York Tribune, is now on the job in New York with all the vim that characterized his widely known advertising vigilance work and made him known the country over.

Mr. Lee is now the director of the New York Tribune bureau of investigations, and, in cooperation with Samuel Hopkins Adams, has started to make life more miserable than ever for the untruthful advertiser.

That Mr. Lee is entirely capable of handling his big new job is shown by his fine record of the past. Until his appointment to the Tribune, he was legal field marshal of the A.A. C.W. national vigilance committee.

Aside from being an attorney, Mr. Lee was a member of the City Hall Commission in charge of building Cleveland's famous group plan of public buildings. He was also for three terms president of the Cleveland Automobile Club and his enthusiasm was one of the principal factors in building that organization up to a membership of more than 7,000. He was also for two terms president of the Ohio State Automobile Association.

Besides having a busy law practice, Mr. Lee has been prominent in several other theaters of action in his home town of Cleveland.

Politics claimed him for several years, and he was one of the managers of a campaign that overthrew the dominant party in Cleveland municipal politics for the first time in almost a decade.

He has had experience on the police bench, and he knows crooks and their methods of high and low degree. While with the A.A.C.W. he led the vigilance committee work that resulted in the convictions of several noted fraudulent advertisers.

Mr. Lee was born in Pomeroy, Ohio, in 1877, and was educated in the Pomeroy schools, the Newark Academy and Ohio Northwestern University. He has a wide knowledge of law, a broad vision, clear mind and is a convincing talker—a combination that bodes well to make an excellent director for the Tribune's investigation bureau.

Since coming to New York, Mr. Lee has joined the New York Advertising Club and he also retains non-resident membership in the Cleveland Advertising Club.

PUBLISHERS RECEIVE PAPER REPORT SCHEDULES.

As announced exclusively in THE FOURTH ESTATE last week it would do, the Federal Trade Commission has called for reports on news print consumption and stocks from publishers. The blank forms have been sent out to consumers, together with the following letter:

"In order that accurate information regarding conditions in the print paper industries may be available to manufacturers, dealers and consumers, the commission will collect and compile statistics of production, consumption, shipments, stocks on hand, etc.

"Sales agents, brokers and jobbers are required to furnish for designated months the information called for by the enclosed schedule.

"The first report must be mailed to the commission on or before November 5, 1917, for the month of October and until further notice succeeding reports on the fifth of each month for the month preceding.

"If the records are not kept in a manner to furnish complete information as possible may be furnished. Therefore the information must be complete.

"The commission welcomes any suggestion for improving the schedule before it put in final form and printed."

IOWA ADVERTISERS MEET.

At their annual meeting held in Muscatine on October 10 the Associated Advertising Clubs of Iowa elected J. Sidney Johnson of Marshalltown president and C. A. Baumgart of Des Moines secretary. Tim Lequette presided.

Governor Harding appealed to the association to join other business men in supporting the Administration in war issues. A strong loyalty resolution was adopted with great enthusiasm.

J. K. Groom of Aurora, Ill., spoke for more extensive newspaper advertising.

Other speakers were President D'Arcy of the A.A.C.W.; Sidney J. Dillon, a Des Moines attorney, and Frank Armstrong of Des Moines, secretary of the state vigilance committee.

The convention pledged $1,000 to back important prosecutions to test the new Iowa "Truth Law."

Each of the twelve clubs now in the association agreed to organize a new club this year.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING OCTOBER 13, 1917

SENATE WANTS TO SAVE PRESS; HOUSE WOULD KILL IT!

The Senate committee on printing has declared it recommended that the Government seize the news print paper mills "in the hope that some relief may be speedily accorded the many publications that are in grave danger of destruction by the unbearable prices now exacted for print paper. It declared:

"To jeopardize the existence of the press is to imperil the life of the Government itself, so dependent is a democracy upon the prompt and wide-spread information of the people."

"Therefore, whatever affects the publication of its newspapers and periodicals likewise affects the welfare of the Government and the necessities of such publications become in fact public necessities.

"If print paper cannot be obtained in adequate quantities, the information of the public will be restricted in the same measure as the output of the paper mills is limited; or if the price of paper is held so high that many newspapers cannot afford to continue publication, the information of the public will likewise be curtailed and the interest of the Government suffer thereby.

"It seems imperative, therefore, that the Government should do everything in its power to insure the preservation of the press, especially in a time like the present, when the newspapers and periodicals are such a vital force in helping the cause of humanity against military madness."

On the other hand, the House of Representatives is constantly doing all it possibly can to "jeopardize the existence of the press."

Nothing better illustrates this than the discriminating special tax—in the form of increase in second class postage rates—that the House forced the Senate to accept as a part of the War Revenue Bill.

It seems strange that the two houses of Congress can disagree on such a vital subject.

Apparently there will be "tall doings" in settling this nationally important matter when Congress reconvenes in December.

Such an outspoken opinion by the serious-thinking Senators seems bound to have a good result some way.

CIRCULATION MANAGEMENT MEANS EFFICIENCY.

Have you read the report of the International Circulation Managers Association's nineteenth annual convention, presented on other pages of this number of THE FOURTH ESTATE?

Have you ever read a report of a newspaper convention at which more real and useful information was exchanged?

We have not.

And THE FOURTH ESTATE desires to congratulate the officers and members of the I.C.M.A. on their splendid Atlanta gathering.

The I.C.M.A. has developed into a most important part of newspaper association machinery, and it bore a very important part in carrying newspapers through the cost-of-production crisis of the past year and a half.

The economy and efficiency injected into the newspaper publishing industry by members of the I.C.M.A. has been truly remarkable.

Practically the whole key to meeting the paper scarcity and enormously increased all around production cost has been the circulation manager.

To meet this emergency called for the highest grade of practical intelligence and I.C.M.A. members furnished it.

Their was the job of keeping readers—in spite of papers being greatly reduced in size and in popular features and inducements—to enable the publisher to keep his head "above water."

They showed the publishers practical means of reducing waste and increasing efficiency in offices and plants.

The circulation manager has come through the test with flying colors. No wonder so many of the newly appointed newspaper executives are from the ranks of the circulators.

Of course, since circulation management became a science, the highest class of men have gone into it.

Again, our best wishes to the I.C.M.A. for success in the future in as full a measure as it has enjoyed in the past.

NEWSPAPERS NOT SENT FREE TO SOLDIERS.

Through misunderstanding of the postal rate concession to soldiers in France, hundreds of newspapers meant for American soldiers are daily destroyed in the local post offices.

If a newspaper reaches France through the mails it must be wrapped, addressed and stamped as usual.

The recent rate concession applies only to magazines. It is only necessary to place a 1-cent stamp on the cover of a magazine for it to reach soldiers in France. No address is needed.

But newspapers do not share this privilege.

NOTE AND COMMENT.

It is said that the first newspaper woman was Mrs. Anne Royall, an American, who was at the same time the first woman to own and edit a newspaper, starting in 1769 to publish a weekly that was first known as the Washington (D. C.) Paul Pry, and later as the Huntress.

The Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser is optimistic concerning the outlook for newspaper advertising in Alabama. It declares itself "gratified to note a considerable increase in the advertising patronage of most Alabama newspapers in recent weeks. Publishers are beginning to feel the renewed energies of business. This year Alabama has a big crop. Business is better than it has been in a long time. It is natural that the newspapers should begin to share in this sort of prosperity."

All newspaper clippings in Kansas papers relating to the part Kansas is playing in the war are being placed on file by the Kansas State Historical Society to be made into a Sunflower war volume when the conflict is over.

How many Walter Johnsons are there in the newspaper business anyway? Recently THE FOURTH ESTATE mentioned two. Walter C. Johnson, business manager of the Chattanooga News; and Walter Johnson, business manager of the Jackson (Miss.) Daily News. Still another notable newspaper man of that name is Walter Johnson, managing editor of the Topeka Capital.

Joseph F. Grawe, editor of the Waverly (Ia.) Independent-Republican, was recently the recipient of a bequest of $3,000 by the will of Abraham Shimmer of that place "because he conducted his paper honestly."

When summer slumps hit the advertising columns of the Jacksonville (Fla.) Metropolis, John Other, its advertising manager, considers it a good time to go after new business in greater volume than ever, a trait which he exhibited recently in getting out a special section devoted to Southern colleges and to the Kappa Alpha fraternity. It contained over 1,000 inches of special advertising—in a very dull week otherwise.

The annual "Fall Fashion Number" of the Clarksburg (W. Va.) Telegram included thirty pages and carried 36,932 square lines of advertising at rates 25 per cent higher than last year. This is the eighth successive year General Manager J. J. Devine and his force have issued this number and it grows more profitable each year.

Incidentally the Telegram has printed 50,000 lines of advertising for the Nussbaum Company of Clarksburg within three weeks.

Dr. Philander P. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education, told members of the High School Teachers Association in New York that it is necessary to keep away from the child impressions of the brutality of this war.

"In times of war there is a hardening of the imagination," he said, and a tendency to look upon the brutality of existing conditions with more or less complacency. The child is easily impressed and early impressions are apt to become permanent.

A keenly contested "wet" and "dry" campaign, which is in progress in New Castle, Del., is proving profitable for the Wilmington newspapers, which are getting large advertisements from both parties.

Twenty-five foreign language newspaper editors of Chicago have combined to work for the success of the second Liberty Loan. A committee representing practically every nationality among foreign citizens of Chicago has been appointed to co-operate with the Liberty Loan executive committee, and it has been announced that fifty foreign language papers have pledged $50,000 with which to buy new Liberty Bonds.

THE TAX ON BUSINESS.

EDITOR THE FOURTH ESTATE:

Sir: It is bad enough to have the Germans fighting us, but when the Government joins in too it's the last straw.

If the greater part of my profits, should I get them, be taxed, where is it possible for me to secure capital?

I only make on the majority of my contracts during good years. There must be a big incentive to secure capital.

The railroads need more profit, or where will their capital come from for improvements and needed repairs? Besides, my profit, if any, goes into the plant.

If we discourage and scare out of business the present generation, then posterity will receive poverty and a great debt.

I don't mind paying a tax on profits. That is not the trouble; it is the curtailment of business caused by the actions of our legislators which is causing the fear of taking business risks and the withdrawal of capital. It is too much tax for one year.

Too many feathers from the goose are expensive. TIMED BUSINESS MAN.

SPECIAL NOTICE

Mrs. Frances Cabanne Scovel, widow of Sylvester Scovel, who was a special writer for the New York World and who represented that paper in Cuba during the Spanish-American War, was married to Captain William F. Saportals, U.S.A., at Honolulu, on September 13.

William J. Parnell, editor and publisher of the Northampton (Mass.) Press, and Miss Mabel Harvey of Flushing, N. Y., were married on October 10 in Flushing.

Lieutenant Richard Oulahan, U.S. R., son of Richard V. Oulahan, Washington correspondent of the New York Times, will be married to Miss Mildred Shafer Bacon tonight in Washington.

WHAT CHICAGO AD MEN ARE DOING FOR THE LOAN.

In order to get the greatest value out of all the advertising efforts that will be centered on making the campaign on behalf of the Second Liberty Loan of 1917 even more of a success than the first, the Liberty Loan executive committee of Federal Reserve District No. 7 (Chicago) has appointed an advertising committee, headed by Chairman William H. Rankin, president of the William H. Rankin Company and vice-chairman of the National Advertising Advisory Board; vice-chairman, I. R. Parsons, advertising manager of Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., and J. D. Sims of the William H. Rankin Company.

The offices of this committee are in Room 573, the Rookery, Chicago.

The work of the committee will be to develop from the advertisements of many kinds and appeals which will be submitted to it, a harmonious and well planned campaign which will concentrate on the strongest advertising appeals to the prospective buyers of United States Government Bonds of the Second Liberty Loan of 1917.

Advertising men in all the various lines of work of the profession have already responded in splendid style to the call of the advertising committee and a great many advertisements have been submitted.

At a conference between Mr. Parsons and the advertising managers of the other State street stores there was an enthusiastic response to the request for cooperation, and all are working with a will to turn out the best copy possible for the Liberty Loan.

Several of the large advertising agencies of Chicago have volunteered to donate a great deal of the time of their copy staffs and art departments.

One of the first to respond was Paul Faust of Mallory, Mitchell & Faust, who said: "We're with you right to the limit in this. Uncle Sam can have the best we have in the shop."

A large part of the organization of the William H. Rankin Company is now and for some time past has been working day and night on Liberty Loan advertisements.

The same is true of advertising men throughout Chicago, and it is felt not only will this be a bigger campaign than the one last June, but it will be better and more forceful in every respect.

McMANUS IN THE NAVY.

Joseph J. McManus, formerly assistant city editor of the Boston Record and now a chief yeoman in the United States Navy, has been appointed captain's writer to Captain Ashley H. Robertson, of the U. S. S. Mount Vernon.

The Columbus (Mont.) News and the Stillwater County Democrat have been consolidated.

TRIBUNE ANSWER TO HEARST.

DENIES PRINTING QUOTED PASHA STATEMENT—VAN ANDA EXPLAINS.

The New York Tribune has issued the following reply to statements made by William R. Hearst and his New York American, noted in THE FOURTH ESTATE last week:

"Hearst's American on October 5 published the following:

"As an evidence of the utter disregard of truth in the publication of the account of the dinner, the New York Tribune states yesterday that Mr. Lewis had a record showing the presence at the dinner of Captain Boy-Ed and von Papen. 'The date of the dinner was the middle of March, 1916. The records show Captain Boy-Ed sailed from this country on the steamship Rotterdam on December 28, 1915, and that von Papen sailed on the Noordam on December 23, 1915. Neither returned to this country.'

"This is the Tribune paragraph referred to by the American exactly reproduced:

"The records compiled by Mr. Lewis show that at the dinner given to William Randolph Hearst by Bolo Pasha there were also present Adolf Pavenstedt, a friend of Count von Bernstorff, and his directors of bomb plots, Captains Boy-Ed and von Papen; Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, a Mrs. Owen Johnson and Jules Bois."

"Captains Boy-Ed and von Papen are not said in that paragraph to have been at the dinner. They were mentioned as friends of von Bernstorff and Pavenstedt. The only one of the four at the dinner was Pavenstedt."

"In the same story the American gave the following list of the guests at Bolo Pasha's dinner: Jules Bois, Mr. and Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, Carr Van Anda, managing editor of the New York Times; Mr. and Mrs. Julian Gerard, Bolo Pasha, Mrs. Owen Johnson, Miss Helen Smith, C. F. Bertelli and Adolf Pavenstedt."

"Of these thirteen, five were connected with either the Hearst or the Rulder newspapers. Adolf Pavenstedt is a director of the Herman Rulder newspapers; C. F. Bertelli and Julian Gerard are employees of Hearst; and Mr. Hearst himself."

"Concerning this dinner, Bolo Pasha boasted to Pavenstedt, according to the latter's sworn testimony:

"No such dinner was ever given before at Sherry's. You know I had the famous poet of France there and the leading newspaper men of America, and you—the intimate friend of von Bernstorff."

VAN ANDA'S STATEMENT.

C. V. Van Anda, managing editor of the New York Times, asked to state his recollection of the dinner, said:

"Some time in the spring of 1916 C. F. Bertelli, who five or six years ago was the Paris correspondent of the New York Times, invited me to dine with him at Sherry's. I went on the appointed evening, and found among the other guests Mr. Hearst, Mr. Jules Bois and a Frenchman whose name I did not catch when the introductions were made. The dinner was served in the public dining room, and afterward the entire party went to a theater. It was apparently merely a pleasant entertainment, and if anything of the slightest public interest was said or done during the entire evening it escaped my observation."

"I do not remember Bolo Pasha or Mr. Pavenstedt, and it was not until after the names of some of the other guests at the Bolo dinner were published that I recognized it as the dinner to which I had been invited by Mr. Bertelli."

Clayton Young, for several years on the editorial staff of the Boston Record, has just finished a tour of Japan and China en route to the Philippines to become city editor of the Manila Times.

LAUZANE TO BE GUEST.

Stephane Lauzane, editor of Le Matin of Paris, will be the guest of honor at a luncheon given by the Southern Commercial Congress in New York in connection with its ninth annual convention, at the Hotel Astor on October 15 at 12.30 p. m.

The notices sent out to newspaper men and others enclosed a card stating that the luncheon would be tendered to Lord Northcliffe, editor of the London Times, and M. Lauzane, but Mr. Owens, managing director of the Southern Commercial Congress, in answer to an inquiry regarding the discrepancy between the notice and the card, said that it was not yet definitely decided whether Lord Northcliffe would be able to be present.

Herbert S. Houston is chairman of the press and advertising committee.

BOOKS USEFUL TO EDITORS AND ADVERTISERS.

"EFFICIENCY IN THE OPERATION OF NEWSPAPERS AND THE PRINTING BUSINESS—HOW TO MODERNIZE," by L. E. Parsons, Eureka Service, publisher.

L. E. Parsons is a newspaper man of Chicago. His work, which has been copyrighted by him, deals with the many phases of the business to which efficiency and economy should most forcefully apply. The publication should prove to be a great assistance to newspaper publishers and printers. The additional feature, "How to Modernize," is broadly handled and deals with the inside and mechanical ends of the newspaper business as well as with the editorial arrangement end, being taken up, practically page for page of the newspaper.

"OVER 500 LOCAL EDITORIAL AND NEWS FEATURE SUBJECTS FOR NEWSPAPERS," by L. E. Parsons, Eureka Service, publisher.

With "war" being the uppermost topic of the day so far as the big news is concerned, and which editors cannot get away from, they may find that they are up against the problem of providing other thoughts, which their readers demand. One pleasing aid has been found for both editors and reporters in a booklet entitled "Over 500 Local Editorial and News-Feature Subjects for Newspapers." It contains subjects of practically every nature for editorials or stories for either a daily or weekly newspaper.

"THE FRASER BUDGET FOR PERSONAL OR FAMILY EXPENSES," arranged by Alice Spear Fraser, published by Tapley Specialty Company.

This book has twelve sheets arranged for the entry of expenses by months and is arranged to give comparisons and a final total showing the year's expenses against the year's budget. The suggested list of expense classifications is a helpful addition.

"PHYSICAL TRAINING FOR BUSINESS MEN," by H. Irving Hancock, published by G. P. Putnam's Sons.

The simple and moderate movements outlined by the author are derived from the exercises taught in our Regular Army and are designed to develop and maintain correct carriage and to foster physical and mental alertness. The desk worker needs regular exercise, and he is rarely able to arrange for it in outdoor forms. The author has arranged a routine of indoor exercises which take only a few minutes every day and presents them in such an attractive manner that the benefits are gained in a spirit of pleasure and zest.

"THE SPIRES OF OXFORD, AND OTHER WAR POEMS," by W. M. Letts, E. P. Dutton & Co., publisher.

The majority of these poems were published by the Dutton firm in 1916 under the title "Hallowe'en and Poems of the War." The verdict of the public was shown by continual requests for permission to republish, especially "The Spires of Oxford." So in issuing a new edition, with several new poems, it is given its place in the forefront. "The Spires of Oxford" has been hailed as one of the most perfect expressions of poetry that the present war has brought out.

"UNDER FIRE," (The story of a squad) by Henri Barbusse, E. P. Dutton & Co., publisher.

The volume is dedicated to the memory of the comrades who fell by the author's side at Crouy and on Hill 119 in January, May and September, 1915. In the current issue of the Bookman, Frank Moore Colby says: "There is much more than the life of a squad in this brilliant and varied narrative, which records or divines wide areas of experience. It is not a chronicle, still less a diary, but it combines pictures of men in masses, and of individual types, moralizings, impressions, observations, episodes, into a sort of epic of army life from the point of view of a private soldier."

"THE SANDMAN—HIS SONGS AND RHYMES," by Jenny Wallis, the Page Company, publisher.

This is a book of poems, narrated in such a pleasing manner as to reach the heart of every child.

"NEWSBOY SERVICE," Anna Y. Reed, Ph. D.; World Book Company, publisher.

How newsboy service furnishes the boys who are still in public schools the largest amount of employment, and how it is the means of combining vocational study with vocational guidance is explained by this volume. Dr. George Elliott Howard, who has written the introduction of the volume, states that Mrs. Reed has "produced a model investigation in social statistics but at the same time she has written a book which in every part focuses the attention and challenges the sympathy of the reader. It will be a great service to all who are interested in the vocational training of youth."

"PHILLIP'S BUSINESS DIRECTORY OF NEW YORK, 1917," published annually by John F. White.

If one were in doubt as to the greatness of New York City as a business centre, a comparison of the past three editions of "Phillip's Business Directory, for 1917, would show the reader the wonderful strides in that direction by both big and little business; in the 1915 issue there were 1286 pages of business classifications, the 1916 issue contained 1344 pages and the present issue has jumped to 1528 pages.

The present issue has a fine appearance, both as a book and typographically, and has every convenience that will enable the public to find the information desired in either the index to the business classifications or the index to advertisers, and despite the fact of the war being on, this issue also has a French section.

"THE MECHANISM OF EXCHANGE," by John A. Todd, B.L.; Humphrey Milford (Oxford University Press), publisher.

Although economic conditions have changed in a host of respects since the initial breakdown of foreign exchanges in the summer of 1914, nevertheless the principles underlying all the manifestations of economic stability or disturbance are the same today as three years or ten years ago. The difficulty of application of these principles to the constantly changing condition of monetary and financial affairs is not disputed. And the need, therefore, of interpreting the significance of these changes prompted the author in setting forth his views during the period of turmoil and confusion—without waiting for the stabilization of the financial mechanism which will come not at the end of the war, but many years thereafter.

The volume is written primarily for the business man for whom economics are becoming more and more a "living" science. And though revision must follow revision as long as the period produces change after change, this book is well worth study by the active business executive.

"CORPORATE ORGANIZATION AND MANAGEMENT," by Thomas Conyngham and revised by H. Potter; Ronald Press Co., publisher.

The necessity for repeated editions of the author's "Corporate Management" and "Corporate Organization" suggested the combination of these two books in the volume now presented. It is for the use of business men, corporation officials, attorneys and students of commerce and finance and is adapted for use in any state of the Union. Full working forms are given, and a comprehensive index is included.

"ARMY AND NAVY INFORMATION," by Major D. W. C. Falls; E. P. Dutton Company, publisher.

Difficult as it is to keep up with the rapid progress of military affairs in the United States since the declaration of war, Major Falls has succeeded. His little book, which is copiously and clearly, if not artistically, illustrated, is a mine of real information about the military and naval services of this country up to June, 1917, and also gives much valuable data about the services of foreign powers. It should be in the hands of every recruit in the Army, Navy or Marine Corps, as its information on uniforms, insignia, pay, ceremonies and service customs may save him from embarrassing mistakes.

"PARNASSUS ON WHEELS," by Christopher Morley; Doubleday, Page & Co., publishers.

A genial story of an itinerant book-seller, who started as a book-keeper, enjoyed life as a farmer, drove his wife to distraction by taking up simple life literature as a profession and then went on the road selling it, is here presented by Mr. Morley, who has a rare gift of quiet humor.

"WALDEN'S A.B.C. POCKET GUIDE," Walden Publishing Company, publisher.

This work, now in its thirty-first annual edition, continues to afford a reliable guide to the paper manufacturing and distributing industries of the United States. A complete list of mills that sell paper, with their officers and the kinds of paper handled takes up most of the book, the remainder of which is given over to mills actually producing paper in the United States, idle mills not being listed.

"MODERN BUSINESS CORPORATIONS, including the Organization and Management of Private Corporations with Financial Principles and Practices," by William Allen Wood, L.L.M., of the Indianapolis Bar; Bobbs Merrill Company, publisher.

This revised and enlarged edition of "Modern Business Corporations" comes as a natural result of the usefulness of the first work. The legal and financial problems of a new enterprise are discussed and the pitfalls indicated for the organizer and manager.

For the operating corporation there are departments of particular interest. Special development is found on the subject of taxation of corporations, including suggestions for securing relief from over-taxation. A careful combination of treating both the financial and legal phases of each problem, from the theoretical as well as the practical point of view, has made the book of interest to professors and students in the field of economics and finance and commerce, in addition to the active managers and accountants.

The inclusion of forms is a helpful item, as is the detailed index.

The Reporter Printing Company is now owner of the Varina Reporter. W. H. Lewis of Spencer is manager and editor.

Nearly Nine Millions in Nine Months

In nine months of 1917 the New York Times published 8,979,348 lines of advertisements, a gain of 852,625 lines compared with the corresponding period in 1916, 2,109,251 lines more than in the corresponding period in 1915—deducting help and situation wanted advertisements, a greater volume and a greater gain than any other New York newspaper.

Average net paid circulation, daily and Sunday, 357,225 for six months ended Sept. 30, 1917, an increase of 70 per cent in five years, an increase of 149 per cent in ten years.

NEWS OF THE AD AGENCIES.

The Honig-Cooper Company has just moved into new and larger quarters in the Call Building, San Francisco. Louis Honig, president of the company, says:

"If the present war had come ten years ago American business would have shouted 'Curtail expenses,' and the first cut would have come in the advertising. Today advertising is more broadly viewed and the modern merchandiser knows that he must sustain by advertising his established prestige no matter what conditions may be."

The agency of Gardiner, Atkinson & Wells is now located at 150 Madison avenue, New York.

The Thomas M. Bowers Advertising Agency, Inc., has moved from the Rector Building to the southwest corner of Jackson street and Wabash avenue, Chicago.

The Triangle Advertising Company, 341 Fifth avenue, New York, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $9,922 and assets of $7,986 in outstanding accounts. The creditors are newspapers throughout the country.

The Millard Corporation, New York, has been incorporated to do a general advertising business, with a capital of $5,000. Its incorporators are G. W. Karnick, J. Amat and A. V. Fox.

The firm of Frost, Green & Kohn, New York, was incorporated on October 9 to conduct a general advertising business by A. R. Eley, E. Blum and C. H. May of 225 Fifth avenue. The capital stock is $25,000.

The Bush Advertising Service of New York was chartered on October 9 by H. R. Dawson, C. R. Delmage and E. J. Crumney of 177 Montague street, Brooklyn. The company has 500 shares common stock, no par value. Its active capital is stated to be $50,000.

Paul G. Hobart, late of the copy department of the Dooley-Brennan Company, is now doing work of the same nature with the William H. Rankin Company of Chicago. He was formerly the editor of the Stewart Lever, the house organ of the Stewart-Warner Speedometer Corporation.

O'SHAUGHNESSY GIVING UP HIS BUSINESS.

On account of his acceptance of the post of executive secretary of the Association of American Advertising Agents, James O'Shaughnessy will not continue as head of the O'Shaughnessy Advertising Company of Chicago. But the details of that firm's rearrangement are not ready for announcement yet.

At the time of going to press, THE FOURTH ESTATE received a wire from Mr. O'Shaughnessy to the effect that he will open his A.A.A. office in New York within the next week and that "the work of the association will be put under way as rapidly as possible."

AD FOLKS' NEWS.

In order to secure sufficient funds to send two delegates to attend the annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World to be held at California next June, the Columbus (Ohio) Advertising Club is forming a group of twenty members, each of whom is paying fifty cents a week. It is figured that by June there will be $340 in the fund to pay the expenses of the delegates, who will be chosen by lot.

The Advertising Club of Los Angeles has organized a Better Business Bureau to conduct vigilance work in that city. A. H. Watkins has been appointed paid secretary, with the title of director.

Although the Advertising Club of Tulsa, Okla., has been organized but one month, it lays claim to a membership of nearly 100 members.

During the present winter season advertising clubs holding membership in the A.A.C.W. may borrow any of four films now in the possession of that organization, the only expense being express charges.

"Mr. Noad's Adless Day" tells of a man who didn't believe in advertising and wished that there never had been such a thing. His wish is realized and exasperating inconveniences result.

"You Want Something" tells how a manufacturer is converted to advertising by improvements an ad agent brings about in his own factory.

"The Link" shows how cooperation with the advertising end of a business makes for success in sales results.

"Thomas Jefferson Morgan" is a story of the vocational work of the Curtis Publishing Company, showing what it is doing for boys by offering them profitable employment in their spare time.

One of the most prominent new members of the New York Ad Club is Richard H. Lee, who a few weeks ago resigned as special counsel for the National Vigilance Committee of the A.A.C.W. to join the New York Tribune as director of the legal phases of its truth-in-advertising investigations.

Frederick C. Walcott, Herbert Hoover's personal representative in the United States Food Administration, spoke at the New York Ad Club Thursday noon on "Why We Are at War, and How We Can Fight with Food." Mr. Walcott is an Englewood (N. J.) banker who has been in Belgium and Poland.

Charles A. Hirschberg, publicity manager of the Ingersoll-Rand Company, has been appointed by Governor Strong of the Federal Reserve Bank to take charge of publicity for the special Liberty Loan Committee, covering the machinery and machine tool trades.

Hale S. Huggins has resigned as efficiency bureau director in the New York University School of Commerce, Accounts and Finance and will become general service manager of the Murray Advertising Service, New York. Mr. Huggins has been engaged in advertising and sales work for a number of years in New York and the West.

The Advertisers Club of Cincinnati reports that it is making gratifying strides, its attendance now being fully 50 per cent above that of last year.

The Advertising Club of St. Louis will hold its annual election late in October. If the new Statler Hotel is open before November 1 the meeting will be held there. The lease with the Mercantile Club expires on December 1 and plans are under way to secure larger quarters.

Herbert Morgan, chairman of the program committee, has provided for some interesting meetings during the fall and winter months. The membership is 470.

The Young Men's Ad Club of New York will hereafter meet in the New York Advertising Club's home. The first session there was held on October 11.

ROGERS BUSINESS HEAD OF WASHINGTON TIMES.

The business organization of the Washington Times has been expanded by the addition of E. C. Rogers as business manager and B. G. Bryant as advertising manager.

Arthur Brisbane is the editor and owner of the Times and Edgar W. Shaw is the publisher.

Mr. Rogers goes with the Times from the Washington Herald, of which he has been business manager.

E. C. ROGERS.

He served his newspaper apprenticeship on the Philadelphia Press, where for six years he was in the business office, the advertising copy department, and was an advertising salesman.

From Philadelphia, he went to the Washington Times as manager of the copy department, and was subsequently advertising manager and business manager, serving the Times nearly six years. Then he became business manager of the Herald, and after four years he is back on the Times again.

Mr. Rogers has taken over to the Times with him B. G. Bryant as advertising manager. Mr. Bryant gave Mr. Rogers his first newspaper job and developed him from an advertising solicitor to advertising manager of the Herald.

GREER VISITS NEW YORK.

Wyche Greer, publisher of the Wichita Falls (Tex.) Morning Tribune and who formerly managed the Fort Worth (Tex.) Record, spent several days last week in New York. Mr. Greer is also part owner of the Wichita Falls Tribune, which recently installed a full leased Associated Press wire and other improvements. The Tribune is represented in the national advertising field by Lorenzen, Green & Kohn.

The printing plant and building of the Grenor (Ind.) Examiner has burned to the ground. John Page is editor.

The Advance, a Chicago Congregationalist weekly, is celebrating its fiftieth anniversary.

F. M. Broome has discontinued the Alliance (Neb.) News and the plant has been moved to Antioch, Neb., and will be printed under the name of the Antioch News.

J. W. McGee has sold the DeWitt (Ia.) Observer to W. L. Simmer of Troy Center, Wis.

James L. Markham has taken over the editorship of the St. Peter (Minn.) Herald.

INTRODUCING AD FOLKS.

Chester M. Cogswell, the new head of the copy and service department of the Coolidge Advertising Agency, Des Moines, was previously for seven years connected with Des Moines newspapers. For two years he was reporter on the Register and Tribune and for five years he was a reporter and on the editorial staff of the Des Moines Capital.

F. W. Darby, who has been appointed advertising manager of the Watrous Engine Works Company, Ltd., of Brantford, Can. (manufacturing sawmill machinery, pulp mill machinery, engines, boilers, fire engines, etc.), was lately engaged in the advertising department of Beatty Brothers, Ltd., of London, Ont., makers of hay tools, stable equipment, etc.

Mr. Darby is also very well acquainted with the printing trade, having been connected with several Ontario newspapers before he embarked in the advertising field a few years ago. Although a comparatively young man his experience has been along such lines as should prove of great benefit to him in his new undertaking.

Miss Nellie D. Prendergast, whose appointment as advertising manager of the H. Barerott White Corporation, Syracuse, N. Y., was noted in THE FOURTH ESTATE recently, was formerly in full charge of advertising and publicity for the Pathfinder Motor Company of Indianapolis (her home town) and was connected with the Overland Willys Corporation.

During her publicity work with the Pathfinder Company Miss Prendergast is said to have made the record of obtaining over 500 pages of publicity on Ezra Meeker, the old man who crossed the country in a twelve cylinder car; and another stunt of hers was to have a car cross the continent on "high." She is a well-known figure at automobile shows held at New York, Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia and other places.

Since going to Syracuse, Miss Prendergast has gotten some nice publicity results and she says she is more than pleased with the way the newspaper and advertising men there have treated her.

The new president of the Chicago Advertising Association, who was inaugurated into office on October 8, is Clyde H. Burlingame, known to his host of friends in the club as "Burly." He has been associated with the Morton Salt Company as advertising manager since 1912. For several years previous to that he was assistant sales and advertising manager of the Great Western Cereal Company. He is thoroughly versed in newspaper and magazine advertising, direct by mail, outdoor, house-organ, dealer ad matter and movie theater advertising.

His successful "Blue Ticket" nomines declared:

"He is just the kind of a man we want and need at the head of our splendid organization. The president of our club must be capable of handling a big job in a big way. Mr. Burlingame can be depended upon to do this."

"One who has achieved the business success that he has could not do otherwise. His election will insure the club a progressive and aggressive administration. He is thoroughly imbued with the winning spirit. He is by temperament and training ably fitted to direct the various activities of the club with credit both to himself and to the organization.

"He possesses in fullest measure the ability to thoroughly grasp and solve the many problems which are sure to confront the man who next year will have the honor of heading 'The Livest Club in Chicago'."

Lewis B. Ely is a newspaper man and author who has joined the staff of the W. C. D'Arcy Advertising Company, St. Louis. For five years Mr. Ely was leading editorial writer for the St. Louis Republic and for eight years he wrote editorials and was associate editor for the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Commenting on his entrance into the advertising agency field, Mr. Ely said:

"In graduating from journalism into advertising I have merely achieved a literary promotion. In my newspaper days I was compelled to acknowledge that the best written and most often interesting pages were the advertising pages, and I was inspired with the ambition to land where the reading was good. Here I am—that's all."

George H. Harris, recently appointed manager of the advertising and publicity department of the Midland Motor Car & Truck Company, Oklahoma City, first entered into relations with newspapers when he acted as advertising manager for a large department store. His advertising attracted the attention of the commercial organization of the town in which he was located and he was made secretary of the Chamber of Commerce.

For ten years, Mr. Harris has been connected with various Texas commercial organizations as secretary, and while acting in this capacity organized the startling "Turkey Trots," one of the most unique bits of advertising ever effected in that region. This occurred in Cuero, in 1912 and 1913, the governor of the state and his staff leading a parade of 10,000 live turkeys.

During the past six months, Mr. Harris was secretary of the Sulphur (Okla.) Chamber of Commerce, also acting as correspondent for the Oklahoman and the Times of Oklahoma City, the Ardmore (Okla.) Ardmoreite, the Fort Worth (Tex.) Telegram and the Dallas (Tex.) News.

A REAL PATRIOT.

Peter S. Lambros, publisher of the Greek Star, Chicago, has started a tobacco fund for the American soldiers abroad. The fund, collected chiefly from the readers of the Star, has already passed the $500 mark. Lambros is as patriotic as any publisher in Chicago and has been devoting a great deal of time lately to making patriotic addresses.

AUSTRALIA INTERESTED.

EDITOR THE FOURTH ESTATE.

SIR: The reports in THE FOURTH ESTATE in connection with the news print paper industry have been most interesting to me and to every newspaper man out here.

From latest telegraphic reports, we understand that paper is becoming scarcer on the Eastern seaboard, while there is very little available on the Western seaboard. Of course a country situated like Australia, so far away from the source of supply, finds this very awkward, more especially on account of the dearth of shipping space. M. B. CARMICHAEL, Sydney, Australia.

This has been anniversary week for the North Side News, a daily published in the Borough of the Bronx, New York City. The News was first issued on October 7, 1901. It is an evening newspaper with a Sunday edition.

CHICAGO SERVICE FLAGS.

The Chicago Tribune has unfurled its service flag, bearing eighty-two stars. It will add six more, since 88 men, 10 per cent of its total force, have gone to war.

The Herald's service flag carries sixty-eight stars.

BUSY MISS SHULSINGER.

Rose Shulsinger, the new publicity director of the Jewel Productions, Inc., of the Universal Film Company, is a graduate of H. Sophie Newcombe College, New Orleans, and of Ward-Belmont, Nashville, Tenn.

ROSE SHULSINGER.

She received her first newspaper training on the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, later becoming editor of the Times woman's page.

Next she came to New York, where she took up publicity work, exploiting the Yale Pageant and such stars, as Anna Held, the Robert Mantella, Roy Atwell, Doris Predo, Frank McIntyre and others.

With the New York premiere of the Universal's super-film "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," she went with that company and has remained ever since. She handled the features at the Broadway Theater, including "Even as You and I," which she successfully carried to Chicago; "The Hand That Rocks the Cradle," "Come Through," "Pay Me," "Sirens of the Sea," Thanhouser's "Man Without a Country," purchased by the Jewel productions, and she is now working with Elaine Hammer-

Miss Shulsinger is also a contributor to various theatrical and motion picture magazines.

THOMPSON SUES.

Mayor Thompson of Chicago has now filed declarations of damage suits totaling $1,000,000 against three Chicago newspapers.

Action is also brought against H. H. Merrick, Jacob M. Dickinson and Arnold Joerns, members of the National Security League, for $200,000 each.

The Chicago Tribune was sued for $500,000 and the Herald and the Daily News for $250,000 each.

The action is based on articles published by the newspapers on September 24, as given out by members of the National Security League. They charged the mayor with refusing to cooperate with Governor Lowden in preventing a meeting of pacifists.

HELPS NEW MEN.

In order that a constant shifting of the staff may not cut down the efficiency of news getting, the city room of the Chicago Tribune is preparing an office "gang book."

The book will be a compendium of reporting information to be passed along to newcomers on the staff. It will contain the live news "sources" on various organizations around Chicago. With the aid of the "gang book" the new reporter will have access to the best news sources without undergoing the tedious process of finding them out for himself.

PUBLISHES HIS VERSE.

Carl Sandberg, formerly of the Chicago Day Book, but now a member of the Chicago Daily News staff, has published a volume of verse entitled "Songs of Chicago." The book has been favorably received by reviewers.

GERMAN PAPERS CURBED.

The German military authorities have suppressed the Berlin Deutsche Zeitung, a Pan-German newspaper, and placed the Socialistic Danzig Volkswacht under preventive censorship.

In its August session the main committee of the Reichstag gave the government four weeks to reform the censorship, restricting it to its proper place in the control of publication of military news.

A Copenhagen report says that censorship of political newspapers by the military has never been more active than at present.

CHANGE ON MOVIE PAPER.

Herbert Howe, who has been handling the trade paper publicity for the Triangle Film & Distributing Corporations, has, in addition to his present duties, assumed the editorship of the Triangle Magazine, the house organ of the company.

Arthur Henry Krows resigns as editor to take a position in the publicity department of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation.

PREMIER GEORGE SUES.

David Lloyd George, the British premier, has begun proceedings for libel against newspapers which announced that on September 24, during the air raid, he left London for his house at Walton Heath.

The fact is that the premier started for France that night.

POSTAL RATES WILL GO UP ON NOVEMBER 2.

The Post Office Department has named November 2 as the date on which the new war revenue postal rates will take effect. The department has issued the following instructions:

Letters and other first class matter (except drop letters), 3 cents for each ounce or fraction of an ounce. Drop letters, 2 cents for each ounce or fraction of an ounce.

A "drop" letter is one that is mailed for delivery from the post office at which it is posted or, in other words, which is addressed for local delivery by the post office at which it is mailed.

For instance, the drop letter rate applies to all letters mailed in the district of the New York (N. Y.) post office for delivery within that district.

The district of the New York, N. Y., post office embraces the boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx, also Pelham and Pelham Manor; all letters mailed within that district for delivery therein will be subject to the rate of two cents an ounce.

There is no drop rate on any matter except letters.

Letters addressed to other post offices in the United States, to Canada, Cuba, Mexico, Panama, and Shanghai City (China) or to any other destinations to which the domestic rates apply, also other first class matter addressed for delivery to any destinations to which the domestic rates apply will be subject to the rate of three cents an ounce.

Postal cards for any address will be subject to two cents postage.

Postal cards are cards which are issued by the Government and sold by the Post Office Department. The 1-cent postal cards must have a 1-cent postage stamp affixed to them, in addition to the 1-cent stamp which is printed on such cards. The 2-cent rate applies to all postal cards regardless of whether they bear written or printed messages.

Post cards (private mailing cards) bearing written or typewritten messages will be subject to 2 cents postage.

Post cards (private mailing cards) which are entirely in print, or which bear no more writing (or typewriting) than is authorized upon printed matter will continue to be mailable for 1 cent each.

In all cases postage should be fully prepaid.

Postmaster Thomas G. Patten of New York City has asked Postmaster General Burleson for a ruling on the new regulations. According to them now, a 3-cent stamp will have to be placed on a letter in Manhattan for delivery in Brooklyn.

Mr. Patten explained that the 3-cent rate on letters from Manhattan to Brooklyn or from Long Island City to Greenpoint arises from the fact that the organization of the post offices in New York City do not conform to the organization of the municipal government.

The New York post office has jurisdiction in Manhattan and the Bronx, while Brooklyn, Staten Island, and Long Island City are separate postal districts, with postmasters in charge.

Under the new law it will be obligatory on any one mailing a letter into another postal district to place a 3-cent stamp on it. This is the interpretation placed on the law by the local Post Office authorities, and it is this point that Mr. Patten wants Washington pass on, for it has been pointed out that, as the law says that letters marked for delivery in New York City must have a 2-cent stamp, this should not mean delivery only within any one of the postal districts comprising New York City, but within any part of the city.

According to the interpretation of the new law, a situation is presented whereby a letter mailed at the Battery will be delivered at the city line at Yonkers for 2 cents, while the same letter mailed at the Battery will have to have a 3-cent tax on it for delivery in Brooklyn, another postal district.

In the same way a letter mailed

COMMENDATION FOR RYAN.
When the news of the assault on Chief Boatswain H. C. Gunn, officer in charge of the U.S.S. Recruit, reached the "landship" at Union Square in New York, Arthur Ryan, well known newspaper man and press representative for the mayor's committee on national defense at this recruiting station, immediately jumped into the breach and handled the sad affair with a great deal of tact and skill.

In recognition of this he has just received the following letter from Rear Admiral L. C. Palmer, head of the bureau of navigation:

"The bureau has been informed that in the absence of the regular publicity officer of the U.S.S. Recruit you took care of the preparation of the news matter in relation to the deplorable death of Chief Boatswain H. C. Gunn, U.S.N., retired."

"The bureau is highly gratified at the accounts which appeared in the New York newspapers and which gained justice for Mr. Gunn in the eyes of the public; and I desire to express the bureau's hearty appreciation of your efficient service in preparing these articles. It is realized that in publication of the first accounts of the circumstances which caused Mr. Gunn's death, a grave reflection was cast upon his patriotism, and the bureau is grateful to you for the prompt and energetic manner in which you brought out the facts in the case."

ENLISTED AT LAST.

Although rejected seven times for defective eyesight, A. B. Kaplin, a newspaper man of Duluth, has just received special authority from Washington permitting him to enlist, eyesight requirements waived. In his efforts to get into active service, Kaplin was turned down by the Regular Army, the Navy, the Marine Corps, the Ambulance Corps, the National Guard and two officers' training camps.

The newly organized naval band, headed by John P. Sousa, now a naval officer, is a feature of the recruiting drive. Two thousand jacksies are also in the company.

Ensign Blossom is charged with the responsibility for proper publicity on the trip.

MUSIC FOR SOLDIERS.
The Newark (N. J.) Sunday Call is conducting a campaign to raise a fund for the purchase of phonographs for New Jersey units in war service.

On October 14 an elaborate concert will be held at the Broad Street Theater, Newark, to help raise these funds. The playhouse has been offered for this purpose and Thomas A. Edison, Inc., which is cooperating in the campaign, will endeavor to have many of the noted artists under contract with that firm to volunteer their services for the occasion.

O. D. Hopkins, for a year and a half connected with the New York Evening Mail, has been made advertising manager of Realty, a magazine of the house and home, published in New York. Mr. Hopkins has had twenty-two years of practical merchandising, selling and advertising experience, part of which he gathered in small and large advertising agencies. In connection with the Mail, he started the Investors Service Monthly Bulletin in the New York financial district.

MAGAZINE NOTES.

Charles C. Nixon, vice-president of the Continental Publishing Company, has assumed the editorship of Everywoman's World, Toronto, turning his advertising department duties over to Robertson Y. MacLean, who for some time past has been manager of sales for the advertising department.

Mr. Nixon has appointed Miss Mary M. Murphy as managing editor of Everywoman's World.

Miss Laura Nixon, a sister of Vice-President Nixon, is doing the editorial work for Rural Canada.

C. Frederick Carrington has become connected with the Western advertising staff of the Metropolitan Magazine, with offices in Chicago. His former position was Western advertising manager of the Continent.

illustrations, each one telling a story that holds the reader's attention and interest from the time the book is opened until the last page is reached.

To those who are familiar with the daily comic strip on "Roger Bean," which deals with every day life as it really is, this book will appeal in particular. It is like having the best parts of an interesting continued story compiled and ready to read.

Those who are not acquainted with "Roger Bean" ought to meet the square good natured "regular guy" he is. His plump little wife, exquisitely feminine; the baby boy they adopted one Christmas eve; and "Golduh Stubbins," the inexperienced maid of all work, make up the rest of "Roger's" household—which, for that matter, might be just any one's household, so often does Jackson, this keen reader of human nature, depict incidentals that occur in the best of families and are not known to be so ludicrous as when held up to the public gaze.

"Chic" Jackson hails from the state that has produced so many stellar lights in the literary field. His progress has been rapid, and today he is revered and beloved among the home folk in Indiana, and they are very proud of the fact that another Indian has been listed in the world's hall of fame.

MALVY ACCUSER SEIZED.

The October 5 edition of L'Action Francaise of Paris was seized by the government. Its editor is Leon Daudet, whose charges against Louis J. Malvy, former minister of the interior, caused a sensation in the chamber of deputies the day previous.

The charges were denied by M. Malvy in his statement in the chamber of deputies. M. Malvy announced that he had been slanderously accused of abusing his position as minister to betray the country.

L'Action was again seized on October 8 on account of an article it contained signed by Mr. Daudet.

GOVERNMENT IS IN NEED OF MORE PUBLICITY.

President Woodrow Wilson has created, under the jurisdiction of the Committee of Public Information, a division of pictures, a division of films, and a division of publications, for the purpose of stimulating recruiting and patriotic interest in the war, to the end that utmost cooperation of all citizens in the successful prosecution of the war be secured.

The order authorizes the Secretary of State and the Secretary of War, and the Secretary of the Navy each to detail an officer or officers to the work of the committee.

JOINS ETHRIDGE ARTISTS.

George Paul Nitz has succeeded F. C. Faul as director of the retouching department of the Ethridge Association of Artists, New York. Mr. Nitz studied at the Art Institute of Chicago and left that company to join Rogers & Co., Chicago, with whom he remained for five years. Later he was with the Packard Motor Car Company.

Mr. Faul is now with the William H. Rankin Company of Chicago.

TRIBUNE LITERARY EDITOR.

The New York Tribune on October 20 will publish a special array of literary features, comprising in addition to its accustomed columns of criticism and news, a general review of recent publications of value, a forecast of the fall and winter activities of authors and publishers, and articles on various phases of the book world.

NEW HOME IN NEWPORT.

The Newport (R. I.) Herald will take possession of its own building some time during November. It is on Franklin street, close to the Federal building now in course of construction.

OBITUARY NOTES.

ROBERT TOMES, a New York publishers' advertising representative, died at his home in Brooklyn (N. Y.) on October 4, aged seventy years.

Having been an expert telegrapher and electrician from his youth, Mr. Tomes went into the advertising business in 1903. During the Presidential campaign of 1876 he was in charge of the telegraph service at Samuel J. Tilden's headquarters, New York and directed a force of a dozen operators. For twenty years he managed the New York Stock Exchange office of the Western Union. As a telegraph operator Mr. Tomes had frequently written dispatches for the papers. Otherwise he had no intimate relations with them previous to 1903. When he decided to take up advertising his friends warned him that he would have a hard row to hoe. He said he knew that, but believed he would reap satisfactory crops all the same. And he did. He enjoyed most cordial relations with the general advertisers with whom his work brought him into contact.

JACOB C. MORGAN, for thirty-five years publisher of the Council Bluffs (Ia.) Daily Globe and later publisher of the Kearney (Neb.) Democrat, died recently in Kansas City, Mo.

WILLIAM L. EASON, dean of San Francisco Bay newspaper men, dropped dead of heart disease in Alameda, Cal., on October 1. Mr. Eason was the founder of the first newspaper in Hayward, Cal., and had worked on practically every San Francisco Bay newspaper. For the last five years he was an editorial writer on the Alameda Evening Times Star.

Mr. McInerney was a native of Kingston, New Brunswick, and was forty-five years old. He leaves a widow. Most of his newspaper work was done on the Evening World and the Evening Sun. He returned to the latter paper from the former only two weeks ago. Several times he acted as Albany correspondent for the Evening World and had a wide acquaintance among politicians. It is likely his body will be sent to Canada for burial.

C. W. FARNHAM, a newspaper man prominent in Republican politics, died of pneumonia at St. Luke's Hospital, New York, on October 6, after an illness of three days. Mr. Farnham had been connected with several New York dailies, and was associated with the Republican National Committee during several campaigns, acting as campaign secretary to Presidential Nominee Hughes in 1916.

NEWS PRINT PRICES FOR THE YEAR 1918.

INTERNATIONAL PAPER COMPANY WILL TRY NOT TO EXCEED 3.10—BUT IT CANNOT SAY DEFINITELY.

An official of the International Paper Company on October 19 gave THE FOURTH ESTATE the first authorized interview to be published on the probabilities of that company's paper prices for the year 1918. He said:

"I believe, in view of the marked reduction in waste and other economies introduced by publishers, and the fact that all news mills are being pushed to the limit, there is little reason to fear a shortage of paper.

"As to the price for 1918 there are too many uncertainties as to wood, coal, labor and other costs to admit of a price being fixed for the year 1918 at this time.

"The cost of everything involved in manufacture is constantly increasing and the increase continues.

"In Canada it has been officially determined within a month that the cost to manufacture is approximately three cents, and in the United States it has been officially declared that news print paper in the United States costs the manufacturer on an average $4.50 per ton more than in Canada.

"Nevertheless the International Paper Company will endeavor to avoid any advance in its price of $3.10 for its high class roll news in quantity at the mills.

"It will be noted that on May 1, 1916, an agreed schedule of union labor wages was put into force by the I. P. Company for a period of two years.

"Notwithstanding this fact, there have been two increases in the wage scale made by the I. P. Company since that date.

"The last increase made goes into effect tomorrow, October 21, and amounts to approximately a yearly increase in labor cost of $750,000 with the further addition of approximately $70,000 growing out of the 10 per cent bonus which the I. P. Company still continues to its operatives.

"This latter increase in the labor cost of the I. P. Company is practically equivalent to an increase of $1.65 per ton in labor cost alone.

"It may be further noted that beginning with May 1, 1916, and including the increase which goes into effect October 21, the scale of wages is increased 50 per cent and the end may not be yet."

THE NORTHCLIFFE PAPER IN U.S.

A.N.P.A. ENTERPRISE PROVES A BIG SUCCESS—MINTYRE TELLS OF INSPECTION.

The operation of the paper mills of the Anglo Newfoundland Development Company, Ltd., at Grand Falls, Newfoundland, in the interests of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, may now, after two and one half months, be carefully judged on its merits.

Six different cargoes of paper have been landed in the United States and shipped to practically every state in the Union. This paper has now been used by 300 or 400 publishers, and the paper market, under the strain of this additional tonnage and the manner in which it was placed, has been maintained soft.

All users of this paper praise in the highest terms the efforts of the paper committee of the Newspaper Publishers Association in bringing tonnage into the market and supplying a paper which they say is of a superior quality, not equalled by any mill in the United States.

A. G. McIntyre, special representative of the A.N.P.A. paper committee, who has just returned from a trip of a month and a half to Canada and the Newfoundland mill, said to THE FOURTH ESTATE yesterday:

"The mills at Grand Falls are undoubtedly the finest example of scientific paper manufacture in the North American continent. The organization which Lord Northcliffe has in Newfoundland represents the maximum of efficiency in paper manufacture on this side of the Atlantic, and showed remarkable genius in meeting the problems of manufacturing good paper cheaply under such difficult conditions as are found in the colony of Newfoundland.

"The mills are now operating to greater capacity than ever before. The sizes of paper being manufactured for the American Newspaper Publishers Association are filling the machines out to the last inch of trim, giving a machine efficiency never before attained on English sizes.

"The paper being made there by Lord Northcliffe's staff stands at the top of the list in quality and low manufacturing cost in the North American continent. This mill is apparently able to manufacture paper under present difficult conditions at less than the cost of Canadian mills, according to their reports to Commissioner Pringle, brought out in the recent investigation—this in spite of the fact that tariffs and taxes in the Island of Newfoundland are in excess of similar taxes in Canada, to the extent of at least $3 a ton.

"It is noteworthy that the greatest publishers' paper mill in the world, which this is, is also the greatest mill from a manufacturing point of view of mills manufacturing under approximately similar conditions.

"This mill easily gives the lie to those who would claim that publishers cannot build and operate paper mills successfully.

TRADE COMMISSION SOLE PAPER PROTECTION.

MEASURES TO PROTECT PUBLISHERS DURING CONGRESS' RECESS—CHANCE FOR CONSUMERS' RELIEF.

There will be no false alarms on news print supply this winter—no repetition of the scares and stampedes of a year ago—if the Federal Trade Commission can prevent it.

This is the real significance of the latest action on the part of the Trade Commission whereby, as reported exclusively in the last two issues of THE FOURTH ESTATE, publishers have been notified to fall into line with paper manufacturers, jobbers and dealers and keep the Trade Commission informed at frequent intervals as to the state of their paper stocks.

Looking over the scene, after the excitement had subsided last spring, the Federal officials became thoroughly convinced that the panic into which newspaper publishers were thrown was a manufactured or at least a contagious panic.

It will be remembered that reports were spread broadcast of a serious shortage of paper supply not only at the mills, and in the warehouses at distributing centers, but also in the storerooms of such publishers as were known to make a practice of storing surplus newsprint.

Without stopping to investigate—indeed they had no facilities for conducting a comprehensive dependable investigation—newspaper publishers rushed into the open market and bid against one another with the result that prices mounted to unwarranted heights on such supplies as were readily doled out to the clamorous buyers.

The Federal Trade Commission is determined that nothing of that kind shall occur again. If it cannot do anything else, for the time being, to insure the free play of the normal law of supply and demand in the newsprint industry, the Trade Commission can at least prevent stampedes based on unwarranted fears.

To that end the searching light of continuous publicity is to be turned on the print paper trade at all angles.

When its all-embracing reporting system—compulsory under heavy penalties—is in full working order as it will be before snow flies, the Trade Commission will have at all times a down-to-date inventory of paper stocks.

No manufacturer can slyly pile up a big surplus without the Commission knowing it.

Similarly the reserve stocks in the hands of producers cannot be depleted seriously without the Federal bystander having due warning of an impending shortage, if one is actually threatened.

Best of all, no selfish interest can, by spreading pessimistic reports or by remaining ominously silent in the face of the anxious inquiries of publishers, convey the impression that a grave situation threatens.

ALL CARDS ON THE TABLE.

However, this plan of the Trade Commission to compel all hands to lay their cards on the table will not be one-sided in its workings. The effect will be to not only lay bare to a considerable extent to the trade policies of paper producers and distributors, but likewise to tell tales out of school with reference to any publisher who thinks solely of his own welfare rather than of the greatest good to the greatest number in the publishing industry.

That is to say if a publisher suddenly undertakes to store newsprint when he has never previously put away stock, if he seems disposed to place more paper in reserve than might be accounted a reasonable margin of safety, or if he is inclined to go into a nervous market for the purpose of increasing an already large reserve, the fact must be reflected in his report to the Trade Commission and the latter will have a powerful weapon at hand in its privilege to make public the facts in these reports if the interests involved do not do what the Commission deems the right thing.

The whole scheme is not, in its basic idea, revolutionary nor is it original with the Trade Commission. It is indeed, merely an adaptation of the storage reporting system inaugurated some time since by the Bureau of Markets of the United States Department of Agriculture. The latter operates to prevent the manipulation of poultry, butter and egg prices by means of rumors that the supply of these edibles in cold storage is all but reaching the vanishing point.

On the same formula, the newsprint reports to the Trade Commission will forestall any needless alarms to the effect that paper stocks at the mills are dangerously low.

TRADE COMMISSION SOLE PROTECTION.

Whatever of relief the Trade Commission may accomplish for newsprint consumers by this new policy of "pitiless publicity," it is obvious that the effort is to be commended because the Trade Commission must stand, for the next three months, as the only hope of relief for paper users.

Congress has adjourned until early December and, if past performances are any guide, little will be accomplished in a legislative way in the interval between the assembling of the national legislature and the holiday recess.

That means that for all the punch in that report on Government control and regulation of the print paper industry submitted by Senator Smith on the eve of adjournment, it will probably be at least ninety days before Congress can be induced to give ear to the publishers' tale of woe unless

Why Philadelphia Offers Greater Selling Opportunities to Merchants and Manufacturers

NOW is the time for every merchant to be alert, to forge ahead, to build up permanent business.

Here in Philadelphia—the Workshop of the World—every indication points to record business in retail lines, due to the fact that more than 58,000 business places (of which about 8,000 are manufacturing plants) employing about 700,000 male and 300,000 female workers, are running to full capacity.

Add to this the metropolitan area of Philadelphia, including the great new industries created by the needs of the United States Government along tidewater, such as the great ship-building yards which have been located at Camden, Chester, Gloucester, Bristol, Cornwalls, etc. Then the large munition factories at Eddystone and Essington; the big powder works at Wilmington, Pennsgrove and surrounding towns; the big steel mills at Wilmington, Newcastle and Claymont; the oil and gasoline plants at Marcus Hook, Point Breeze and other points.

These workers and their families are housed in approximately 375,000 separate dwellings in the city of Philadelphia. The net paid daily average 2 cent circulation of the Philadelphia Bulletin for the six months from April 1st to September 30th, 1917 (as per report to U. S. Post Office Department) was 363,115 copies a day.

There is in Philadelphia territory an immense outlet for advertised commodities among these families, who are enjoying the highest scale of wages in years.

Housekeeping needs alone run into a tremendous volume of sales, while food, raiment and other necessities required by this vast army create a market that is third in the United States.

The Philadelphia Bulletin is the one dominant newspaper through which to reach these consumers.

CONGRESS KNOWS LITTLE ABOUT PUBLISHING.

SEN. HITCHCOCK POINTS OUT DELUSIONS WHICH SEN. HARDWICK HAS HAD ON SECOND CLASS RATES.

In connection with the plans of opponents of the second class mail provision of the War Revenue Act to endeavor to secure its repeal by Congress at the next session in December, it is of interest to note the remarks of Senator Hitchcock, who owns the Omaha World-Herald, during the final discussion by the Senate of the conferees' report.

Senator Hitchcock took exception to Senator Hardwick's position and pointed out the delusions which the Georgia Senator has had all along on the subject. The remarks of those who took part in the discussion are (verbatim) as follows:

Mr. Hardwick—"I am confident that now that the correct principle has been applied to second class mail rates—that the day when we can give the people of the country 1-cent letter postage cannot be long delayed, once this war is over."

Mr. Hitchcock—"Mr. President, I want to say a word in answer to what the Senator from Georgia [Mr. Hardwick] has said. He has very strong convictions on this subject, but I am convinced that his convictions are founded on an entire misconception of the publication business."

"I will put my judgment now against his judgment, and predict that if this increase in postage under the zone system is carried into effect it will not lead to an increase in advertising rates, but will rather tend to lead to a reduction in advertising rates, because it will inevitably result in a reduction of the circulation of the publications."

"Advertising rates are not under the control of the publisher."

"Advertising rates are not based upon the results which advertisers derive from the purchase of publicity, and anything done to reduce the circulation of publications is inevitably bound to result in reducing advertising rates."

"Advertising rates were enlarged by the increased circulation of periodicals and newspapers inaugurated 30 years ago, when the rates were placed at their present standard as a part of our educational system."

"No one can predict exactly the result of what is to come, but this is inevitable:

"Those increased postage rates cannot be paid by most of the publications in this country. They cannot be paid by them, because their profits at the present time are not large enough to make it possible. Either the publications must pass on those additional postage rates to the subscribers, or the publications must go out of business, in a very large number of cases."

Mr. Hardwick—"Mr. President, why can they not be passed on to the advertisers, if they are all under that obligation?"

Mr. Hitchcock—"Because the publisher does not control the rate that the advertiser pays."

Mr. Hardwick—"But if you do not reduce his circulation or the number of his subscribers, and the advertisers must all have advertising, and all must pay more money, why cannot that be done?"

Mr. Hitchcock—"That shows how little the Senator knows about the publishing business."

"If he were the proprietor of a great food product he would advertise in the publications and pay so much per thousand of circulation, and his books would show at the end of the year, from the results obtained, whether he could continue to pay that rate or not."

"He cannot pay the rate simply because the publisher demands it."

"He can only pay the rate as the result of the sales which he makes, and he will make no more sales upon a publication paying a higher rate of postage than a publication paying a different rate of postage."

"The advertising rates are based upon the results that the advertiser gets. He buys publicity, and nothing but publicity. The publisher cannot raise his rates unless he gives the advertiser larger returns, and he cannot give him larger returns when his circulation is being restricted."

Mr. Hardwick—"I do not want to prolong the argument, and I am sure the Senator does not; but does it not seem to him that the man who is going to sell this advertising has something to say about the price at which it shall be sold?"

Mr. Hitchcock—"He has very little to say. I have been in the business for 30 years, and I know that I cannot raise my advertising rates unless I can give a larger return, and every publisher knows it."

"It is not a one-sided business."

"Advertisers pay for results."

"They buy publicity. If you reduce the publicity the advertising rates have got to come down. That is a delusion that the Senator has been laboring under all this time."

"I want to say that this great bonus that is talked about as being paid to the publishers of the country is not paid to the publishers of the country."

"The business of advertising is the most highly competitive business in the United States, and the publisher in that highly competitive business puts his subscription rates just as low as he can put them. Increase the cost of his distribution, increase the cost of his publication, and he must inevitably increase the cost to the subscriber."

Mr. Shafroth—"Mr. President, does not the Senator think that the Saturday Evening Post has something to say about charging $7,000 for a one-page advertisement in one issue?"

Mr. Hitchcock—"Why, Mr. President, it is cheaper to buy a page in the Saturday Evening Post at $8,500 than it would be to buy a page in some other publication for $1.50."

Mr. Shafroth—"Does not the proprietor of that periodical have something to say about fixing that amount?"

Mr. Hitchcock—"Very little; very little. It is only when his representatives can go to the purchaser of advertising and show him how many hundreds of thousands of readers he is going to reach that he can charge any such rate. Cut off the number of readers and his rate has to go down."

"The cheapest advertising in the country is in papers of great circulation. The delusion that a publisher can charge what he pleases for advertising is one of the most monumental delusions of those who know nothing about the business."

Mr. Hardwick—"If the increase in postage will reduce the circulation of publications, why will not the increase in price of print paper decrease their circulation?"

Mr. Hitchcock—"It has decreased it. It has tended to decrease it. Only the extraordinary demand growing out of this tremendous war has prevented a greater decrease. But publishers all over the country are raising their rates. Publishers in Chicago, in Philadelphia, in Pittsburgh, in Omaha, and in other places have raised their subscription rates."

Mr. Hardwick—"I will inquire if the Senator's own paper has not raised its rates, both on advertising and on subscriptions?"

Mr. Hitchcock—"We have only raised our rate on advertising as we increased our circulation."

Mr. Hardwick—"But you have raised your rate on advertising twice in the last 12 months, have you not?"

Mr. Hitchcock—"Oh, I have done that for the last 30 years as often as I could show that I had a larger circulation; but I cannot raise my rates without showing that I have a larger circulation. I have raised my subscription price on account of the increased cost of paper, and I will raise it again when the zone system and the higher postage go into effect."

Mr. Hardwick—"That is what they will all do."

Mr. Hitchcock—"You will not be taxing me by increasing postal rates. Every strong publication will pass on the increase to the reader; but you will kill off, meanwhile, all of the struggling publications of the country. I do not know what the percentage will be."

"You will make a path of wreck and ruin that will come back to plague you some day."

"I do not know how many, but I will venture to say that thousands of publications in this country that are not strong will die, and instead of having promoted the public interest by this course you will have injured it."

"You will not injure the publishers that are able to take care of themselves. You will ruin a lot of publishers that are in the struggling list—and the business is so competitive that a very large proportion of them are in the struggling list—and you will deprive a great many hundreds of thousands of readers of cheap literature that they are getting today."

Mr. Hardwick—"Some of it we could do without very well."

As has been heretofore explained, the Senate adopted the House's second-class increase in order to place the other provisions of the War Tax Bill in operation at the earliest possible moment.

As the second class provisions are not effective until July, 1918, it is the intention of Senator Hitchcock and other leading Senators to move for their repeal when Congress reconvenes in December.

THE PASHA CASE.

The French military court inquiring into the activities of Bolo Pasha has appointed a sequestrator for the money Bolo advanced to Senator Charles Humbert, owner of the Journal. Senator Humbert applied to the Tribunal of Commerce to have the contract annulled by which Pasha acquired 1,100 bonds of the Journal, but the Tribunal decided to postpone judgment until the conclusion of the military case against Bolo.

PAPER POSTAGE AND THE A.B.C.

RECEIVE ATTENTION OF THE INLAND PUBLISHERS AT CHICAGO MEETING.

The outlook for news print on equitable contracts for next year, the possibilities commercially in the deinking of newspapers, the second class postage rate under the war revenue bill and by-law changes proposed by the Audit Bureau of Circulations were big topics discussed at the meeting of the Inland Daily Press Association held October 16 at the Hotel LaSalle, Chicago.

E. P. Adler, of the Davenport (Ia.) Times, and president of the association, expressed the opinion that the urgent need of publishers at this time is not a plan whereby needs of dimly distant years may be met, but some plan by which present needs of publishers may be filled. The suggestion led to a general discussion of the news print situation that brought statements from publishers that rates ranging from $3.25 to $3.50 f. o. b. mills in the New York district were being freely quoted even by jobbers and that paper within that range of price could be easily secured.

On yearly contracts, however, these figures were not applicable and prices for a year ahead were being mentioned with qualifications by manufacturers and jobbers alike. It was the opinion of the majority of the publishers present that there is no immediate relief from prevailing prices in the news print field, but on the contrary a distinct likelihood of even higher prices before another year has passed.

The aid given to the A.N.P.A. by Lord Northcliffe has not seemed to alleviate the situation materially. President Adler announced, inasmuch as the print from the Northcliffe mills is being quoted at $3.40 f. o. b. New York, while a lesser price is being quoted by other large handlers of news print.

SECOND CLASS POSTAGE REVISION. A feature of the meeting was the postal report, through Urey Woodson of the Owensboro (Ky.) Messenger, of the committee consisting of Mr. Woodson and A. O. Peterson of the Waterloo (Ia.) Courier, which was sent by the Inland Daily Press Association to Washington to place before the Congressional committees, having the war revenue bill in charge, the claims of the publishers for consideration.

Mr. Woodson reported that the new War Revenue Bill, the second-class provisions of which do not become effective until July 1, 1918, was decided upon as a matter of compromise in view of the heavy pressure being put upon Congress by war demands. With others, he expressed the hope that the succeeding Congress may bring about a repeal of the second-class clause and the substitution of some more equitable provision.

None of the publishers subscribed to the view that the publishers might expect exemption from a war tax in some form or another, and the consensus of opinion at the meeting was that publishers should accept the zone system of postage as a justifiable tax and by a determined campaign pave the way for a revision of present postage regulations and the enactment of the zone plan at the next session of Congress.

Many of the publishers expressed the conviction that much of the sentiment in the second-class postage legislation has been due to a feeling of enmity among Congressmen toward the press in general, and the

I.N.S. BADLY SCOOPED!

On Saturday, October 13, 1917, the Governor of Connecticut gave out for publication a cable from the Colonel of a Connecticut regiment, stating that his troops had arrived safely in France. This cable was disseminated generally by news services which chose to ignore the War Department's repeated warnings that publications of this sort aid the enemies of the United States:

The entire incident has become a subject of government investigation. The New York Times on October 16th, printed the following:

The I.N.S. has been beaten on several stories of this character, and for the same reason.

The I.N.S. was "scooped" by the Associated Press on the landing of the first U. S. Troops in France.

The I.N.S. kept faith with the U. S. Government. The A.P. did not.

The I.N.S. will continue to keep the faith. It may be scooped again as a result of this policy.

The I.N.S. is the only American news service that has not suffered a reproof from the United States Government for spreading inaccurate or improper information about the U.S. Army or Navy.

The I.N.S. has "come clean." It will continue to do so.

BUT—

NOT ON THE WORLD'S SERIES.

Here are a few of the comments from I.N.S. clients on the service given on the biggest test of the game:

"Congratulations. World's Series handled in masterly manner, concisely and just exactly as we wanted it. Stories by Tad and Runyon particularly good." Miles Overholt, Mng. Editor, Salt Lake, Utah Telegram.

"World's Series service was immense and right up to the minute. We beat the town." W. M. Murphy, Sporting Editor, St. Louis, Mo., Star.

"Never in the history of the Boston American have you given us such splendid service as you have this year. The play-by-play bulletins, the stories of the games and the feature comment were handled promptly, thoroughly and brilliantly." R. C. McCabe, Mng. Editor, Boston American.

"Best ever."—Edwin Camp, News Editor, Atlanta Georgian.

"Finest in the world. From 2 to 8 seconds ahead competition and on street from 10 to 15 minutes ahead of competitors. Surpasses any World's Series service we have seen." Weiss, Mng. Editor, Montgomery, Ala., Times.

"By the use of carbon copies we gave to the crowd in front of our bulletin boards, to a crowd in the street by megaphone from an upper window, and to the printer at the same time, the quickest and cleanest World's Series report this or any other Lima paper ever had. For the first time in the history of baseball, Lima received the I. N. S. returns on Sunday by megaphone. In brief, we made a killing with it, and Lima friends are telling us so." Howard L. Burba, Editor, Lima, O., Times Democrat.

"Your service on World's Series was fast and accurate and enabled us to beat all opposition in our field from four to seven minutes on the result of every game." E. R. Collins, Los Angeles Herald.

"The International News Service reports on World's Series were the best I have seen in five years. The abundance of good readable stuff enabled us to make our pages outrank all others in Kansas City." Freeman Alford, Kansas City, Mo., Post.

"Day and night service on World's Series uniformly excellent. Afternoon opposition couldn't begin to compete here. Runyon real hit. Struwe very good, too. It was just what was expected from the I. N. S." Warren, Pa., Chronicle.

"American gave our soldiers at Camp Mills and Camp Upton the full details with the I. N. S. wire. Everybody tickled to death at wonderful service. Also had total crowd of 150,000 in six days before N. Y. American-I. N. S. bulletin board at Columbus Circle, New York City. Largest crowds ever gathered there." F. C. Spayde, New York American.

"Your World's Series service was so good we used every word of it. We had the big edge on this big story here." W. U. Christman, Mng. Editor, Pittsburgh, Pa., Post.

"World's Series service was very good and very rapid work." Baltimore, Md., Star.

"The World's Series service this year was the best the Herald has ever had. The statistical side with daily box and composite scores answered the demands of the delving and rabid fans while Mr. Runyon's stories pleased those who like a humorous and human interest touch. If more World's Series stuff had been sent we would have needed another newspaper to run it." C. L. Remington, Sport Editor, Rochester, N. Y., Herald.

"Service was entirely satisfactory to us. Believe we were constantly ahead of Associated Press here." New Bedford, Mass. Times.

"Your World's Series job was a credit to the I. N. S. That ought to satisfy." Baltimore, Md., News-Bulletin.

"We found the World's Series service up to the minute and adequate in every respect." Editor, South Bend, Ind., News-Times.

"World's Series service very satisfactory. No room for improvement." Marion, O., Star.

"The I. N. S. service during the World's Series ball games could not have been better. It was quick, accurate and easily handled. Jack Veiock particularly wrote splendid stories, before, during and after the games." J. R. Downs, Zanesville, O., Signal.

"World's Series service first class. Tad's stuff went big." Indianapolis Times.

"Very excellent service." San Diego, Cal., Tribune.

"Struwe and Veiock best ever. Our sport page sickened A. P. dope of opposition." Hutchinson, Kan., Gazette.

"World's Series service very satisfactory. In early and handled authentically. Thank you." Memphis, Tenn., Commercial-Appeal.

"We found the I. N. S. World's Series articles punchy, original and accurate." San Diego, Cal., Union.

"Service all that could be desired and writers did themselves proud in covering every detail, even to the minutest. Congratulations." Tulsa, Okla., Morning Times.

"World's Series service fine." Waco, Tex., Tribune.

"The I. N. S. gave bang-up service. Veiock, Runyon and Struwe are a trio that can't be beat. If I were offering suggestions next year simply say 'do it again same writers, same style, same everything.'" Charleston, W. Va., Leader.

HALE DENIES BOLO PASHA CHARGES.

WELL KNOWN NEWSPAPERMAN EXPLAINS CONNECTION OF NAME WITH RECORDS.

Dr. William Bayard Hale, formerly International News Service correspondent in Berlin, has been one of the persons examined in the investigation conducted by Merton F. Lewis, New York state attorney general, to determine the extent of Bolo Pasha's connection with the embargo.

A "Dr. Hale" was mentioned in the Bolo Pasha documents made public by the State Department last week. He was mentioned in one of a series of telegrams that were sent by Count von Bernstorff to the German Foreign Office, which, with telegrams to the Ambassador, from his government, disclosed a plot to destroy munition factories in America by sabotage and the destruction of Canadian railways. The reference to "Dr. Hale" in the ambassador's message was:

"The Embargo Conference, in regard to which earlier fruitful cooperation Dr. Hale can give information, is just about to enter upon a vigorous campaign to secure a majority of both houses of Congress favorable to Germany and requests further support."

Dr. W. B. Hale denied that he had ever been questioned about the Embargo Conference by any one in Germany. He was in Germany representing the Hearst newspapers in September, 1916, when von Bernstorff sent the telegram to the Foreign Office. In the seized documents of Heinrich Albert, the German spy, made public in August 1916, the name "Dr. Hale" also figured in connection with this same organization, some of whose leaders were German agents.

Dr. W. B. Hale swore that he had never met the spy, had never seen him, had never communicated with him in any way, and that, naturally, he did not have any documents in his possession relating to Bolo Pasha. He said the first he heard of Bolo was when the newspapers told of his arrest in Paris.

The assistant state attorney general then showed Dr. Hale what purported to be a record of telephone calls to Academy 316 from Bolo Pasha's apartment in the Hotel Plaza, where he stopped when in this city plotting with Count von Bernstorff for moulding French public opinion to the end that France would be forced into making a separate peace with Germany.

Dr. Hale said that Bolo Pasha never telephoned his apartment, and added that there were forty families living in the house.

What purported to be a record disclosing the sending of messenger boys from Bolo Pasha to 362 Riverside Drive during the months of February and March of 1916 was next shown to Dr. Hale. Again he said he could not explain them, and that he was certain Bolo Pasha never sent any messages or anything else to him.

Dr. W. B. Hale made this statement, when asked if he knew anything about the "Embargo Conference."

"Yes, I know something of it. After the armistice was declared, I left for Europe in 1915 (more than two years before the United States entered the war). I was surprised by a visit of a gentleman from Chicago, who had seen an article or two of mine deprecating war. He asked me to make a speech in Chicago before an assembly of labor and gentlemen who agreed to preserve peace and who, as I remember, he thought would form an organization to fight for peace and the opinion against the further shipment of arms and munitions to America.

"I expressed some sympathy with the idea, but declined to go to Chicago to speak. A few months later I was asked to lend my name, printed on the stationery of the American embargo conference, as chairman of the national board."

"I am now, in my letter files, I find that on December 1, 1916, I wrote to the executive secretary of this organization expressing surprise that they had used my name and asking them to withdraw it from their stationery."

"Some correspondence followed, as I gleaned from a hurried review of my letter files, but the executive officers of the conference apologized for the unwarranted use of my name and withdrew it from their stationery."

"On my part I expressed sympathy with their movement so far as I was acquainted with it, but declined to associate myself with the organization."

"These perfectly proper and innocent events took place in the closing months of the year 1916, two years ago."

"I never saw Count Bernstorff and had never communicated with him either directly or indirectly until May 21, when, on my way for Europe, I called at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel and spent probably two minutes and a half on receiving from him a perfunctory standardized letter such as is given to all newspaper correspondents. It bore my name as a reference for the embargo conference. It must have been purely upon the unauthorized letterhead. Furthermore, nobody in Berlin ever mentioned this obscure organization to me."

DETROIT NEWS OPENS A NEW YORK OFFICE

The Detroit News, in connection with the many innovations and arrangements for the collection of news it proposes to inaugurate, will open a New York office and James Swinehart, has been selected from among the members of the News staff to take charge of the undertaking. Mr. Swinehart is already in New York and will establish himself in temporary quarters until he opens a permanent office.

The Detroit News aims to have as complete a news gathering force as any paper in the United States and there are rumors to the effect that it has made plans to add another floor to its new building for the sole use of a special wire and cable department.

It is also reported that the News will send four or five writers of its own to European centers.

The new office in New York will be in addition to that of I. A. Klein, who represents the News in the Eastern advertising field.

LLOYD GEORGE STOPS SUITS FOR LIBEL

The libel actions brought recently by Premier Lloyd George of England against the Exchange Telegraph Company, the Westminster Gazette, and the London Daily News for publishing the statement that he left London when an air raid warning was given, has been withdrawn, the terms being an apology for the publication and the payment of a certain sum, the amount of which is not mentioned, to indemnify the Premier for his costs in the action.

HIGHER WAGES TO PRINTERS.

COST OF PRODUCTION STILL GOING UP IN BUSINESS OF PUBLISHING.

A number of higher wage scale contracts are reported by publishers, notably in the West and Northwest.

An increase of $4 per week for hand compositors and $3 for machine operators in the book and job branch has been agreed to in contracts signed in Toronto, Can. This makes the scale $24 per week and was agreed to through local arbitration.

The book and job scale at Seattle, Wash., has been increased $1.50 per week. The contract is for one year from September 1, 1917, and can be opened on the request of either the union or the employers at the end of each one-year period. This makes the present scale in the book and job branch $28.50 per week.

A new newspaper scale has been negotiated at El Paso, Texas. An increase of 50 cents a day over the old scale was granted, the agreement to be in force for five years. This makes the pay of printers employed on the two El Paso daily papers $34.50 per week for night work and $31.50 for day work.

In Santa Rosa, Cal., floor men are receiving 50 cents a day more. This makes the scale as follows: Foreman, $24; operators, day, $24, night, $27; job and ad men, $21.

In Miles City, Mont., where union members had asked for an increase of approximately $6 per week over the old wage, employers consented to an increase of approximately $3 per week and a settlement was made on that basis.

Fresno, Cal., employees have been granted an increase of 50 cents per day for every one, all signed up from August 1, 1917, to December 31, 1918.

An average increase of wages of 10 per cent for all employees, skilled and unskilled, in the state printing office at Sacramento, Cal., has been put in force. Under the new schedule hand compositors will receive $30 per week, and machine operators employed at night $37.50, and those working daytime $34.50 per week. Employees of this office are also allowed an annual vacation of fifteen days with full pay.

In Winnipeg, Man., in a contract to be in force for one year an increase of $3 per week is given to the book and job printers, making the scale $25 per week.

The four daily papers of Portland, Ore., are now paying $35.70 per week for night work and $32.70 for day work. This is an increase of $1.95 per week over the old scale. The book of laws of the International Union for 1917 has been incorporated in the agreements, thus applying the present six-day law and the priority law in the newspaper composing rooms of Portland. The working week is based on a seven and one-half hour day, with the privilege of two eight-hour days. Only in one or two mining communities, where unusual conditions prevail, is there a higher scale.

TRADE PRESS WAR CONFERENCE.

PROSPEROUS FUTURE FOR NATION, OPINION OF CHICAGO MEETING.

Four hundred representatives of various trade and technical publications attended the twelfth annual convention of the Associated Business Papers, held October 11-12-13 at the Congress Hotel, Chicago.

The general idea back of the convention, this year was that indicated by the program as a "War Conference of Business and the Business Press." Practically the entire program was given over to a discussion of the problems presented by war conditions in this country, with special reference to their application to the trade press.

In the main, the publishers and editors expressed the conviction that nothing but prosperity looms ahead for the trade press, but here and there one might have heard a pessimistic note regarding the sudden upturn of normal business and publishing conditions due to the abnormal business situation as it exists today.

In addition to making a comprehensive survey of war conditions, the association chose new officers for the ensuing year.

Arthur J. Baldwin of the McGraw-Hill Publishing Company, New York, was re-elected president.

The office of vice president was created and A. C. Pearson of the Dry Goods Economist, New York, was elected to that post.

F. D. Porter of the National Builder, Chicago, was chosen secretary, succeeding E. A. Simmons of the Simmons-Boardman Publishing Company, New York.

Jesse H. Neal of New York was re-elected executive secretary.

The executive committee for the year includes: A. C. Pearson; W. H. Ukers, Tea and Coffee Trade Journal, New York; Charles Allen Clark, American Paint and Oil Dealer, St. Louis; C. A. Tupper, International Trade Press, Chicago; R. Marshall, Concrete, Detroit; H. G. Lord, Textile World Journal, Boston.

The opening session was devoted to generalities, a discussion of the postal situation created by the new war revenue bill occupying a considerable share of the morning session.

BRIGHT OUTLOOK.

Horace T. Hunter, vice president of the McLean Publishing Company, Toronto, discussed the war problems as Canada has found them and the means by which Canadian publishers are meeting their problems. Mr. Hunter asserted, as daily newspaper publishers in Canada have frequently said, that the war conditions have really been a genuine lift to the publishing trade in the Dominion.

J. George Frederick, editor of Advertising & Selling, devoted his attention to publishing conditions as the trade press now finds them in the United States and to an outline of future conditions, based upon the prospect of a long war with Germany. His forecast was, in the main, hopeful.

At the editorial session, Professor Walter Williams, dean of the University of Missouri's school of journalism, was the principal speaker. In his topic, "Continuous Educational Training for All Editors," he not only urged the importance of preliminary training for editors through schools of journalism, but a frequent and ever-recurring broadening of editorial knowledge through special attendance upon journalistic lectures arranged for that purpose.

TRAINING TRADE EDITORS.

Dean Williams spoke at some length concerning the strides made in the newspaper world by the graduates of schools of journalism and vouchsafed the opinion that the day would come when the journalist would be fitted for his career just as lawyers, doctors and dentists are now trained.

F. M. Feiker, editorial director of the Electrical World and Electrical Merchandising, New York, told of the growing value of the trade press as a moulder and leader of public opinion. He expressed the belief that the function of editorial leadership, once possessed almost entirely by the daily press, is now being taken over, especially in lines of business thinking, by the trade press. He pointed out many instances of authoritative leadership achieved and maintained by leading trade publications. The business man, Mr. Feiker declared, is now learning to rely implicitly upon his trade journal and he is being influenced in general lines because of his faith in his trade paper.

B. E. Carroll, editor of Textile World Journal, emphasized the great advertising return to be expected from the business press. He also had a good word to say for the advertising returns of the daily newspaper. Space in either daily or trade press, Mr. Carroll declared, is a good investment and the returns are usually magnificent as far as the advertiser is concerned.

Samuel O. Dunn, editor of the Railway Age Gazette, Ray W. Sherman, editor of Motor World, New York, and David Beecroft, editor of the Class Journal, New York, were also speakers.

At the advertising session, W. L. Ware, editor of Dry Goods Reporter, Chicago; R. Marshall, Concrete, Detroit; Charles G. Phillips, Dry Goods Economist; H. E. Cleland, McGraw-Hill Publishing Company, New York, and Harry Tipper, the Automobile, New York, were among the speakers.

The "Business of the War" session was a program of listening, so far as the trade press folks were concerned, the speakers being men not in the publishing trade. The object of the program was to acquaint the publishers and editors with national issues and to permit them to form some concrete idea of the best manner in which they and their publications might serve the government in this national crisis.

Waddell Catchings, chairman of the United States Chamber of Commerce committee on cooperation with the National Council of Defense, discussed the "Co-ordination of Business and Government." He gave his hearers an inkling of the great national responsibility and of the enormous burden being imposed upon the executives of the national government by the war. Recognizing the broad influence of the business press, he enjoined his hearers to lend their hearty aid in securing for the government the fullest approval and loyalty from their readers.

R. H. Aishton, president of the Chicago and Northwestern Railways and chairman of the "war board" of the American railways, discussed the problems of transportation faced by the railroads of the country in moving military forces and supplies in addition to a greatly enhanced general traffic. Mr. Aishton lauded the daily press, as well as the business press, for the full cooperation that had been granted the railroads in their efforts to secure the cooperation of the shipping public.

Professor A. E. Swanson of Northwestern University, Chicago; Professor H. G. Moulton of Chicago University; and Carl H. Fast, president of the Fast System Company, of Chicago and New York, were also on the program.

The stellar event of the entire convention, however, was the annual banquet held in the "Gold Room" of the Congress, at which Arthur J. Baldwin was toastmaster.

Governor Charles S. Whitman of New York discussed the war duties of business and the business press, emphasizing the importance of all-round cooperation and coordination of all interests in behalf of the national weal.

Douglas Malloch, poet-orator of the American Lumberman, devoted his time to a discussion of "The Seven Sinners of Business."

John W. O'Leary, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, was on the program to discuss "The Nation's Business."

An added and unexpected feature at the banquet was a happy address by "Tay Pay" O'Connor, the eminent Irish editor and author. "Tay Pay" paid his compliments to the flourishing line of the publishing industry represented by the men present and urged them all to put a shoulder to the national wheel at this time.

The place of meeting for the next annual convention will be decided upon later by the executive committee.

TRADE AND CLASS PRESS.

Secretary of the Interior Redfield was the guest of honor on Tuesday at a luncheon of New York trade paper publishers held at the Automobile Club. He spoke on the subject of "The Trading With the Enemy Act and Its Application," and after he had concluded the editors present expressed by a rising vote their confidence in the administration which he represents.

P. B. Ingraham, formerly with the Dan A. Carroll Special Agency, is now on the advertising staff of Printer's Ink, New York.

Robert S. Kennedy has been placed in charge of the service department of Motor Life and the Automobile Trade Directory, New York. He was formerly with the advertising agency of Street & Finney, New York.

Earl H. Emmons, conductor of a column of verse in the American Printer, New York, and member of the Veteran Corps of Artillery, New York, has written a book of humorous verse, which he calls Versified Adventures of the V.C.A. The book is illustrated by half-tone engravings and pen sketches by the author and tells of the trials and tribulations of an army rookie. Mr. Emmons at one time issued a strange newspaper known as the Burglar's Gazette.

The following publications have been admitted to membership in the Associated Business Papers, Inc.:

Chicago Gas Record; Electrical Merchandising; McGraw-Hill Publishing Company, New York; Western Undertaker; Periodical Publishing Company, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Chicago Embalmer's Monthly; Des Moines (Ia.) Furniture Merchants Trade Journal; and Kansas City (Mo.) Retail Lumberman.

FROM GERMAN TO ENGLISH.

The Appleton (Wis.) Volks Freund has stopped publication, and an English language daily will be started in its place, according to Richard Meyer, president of the Volks Freund Company.

This is on account of the stringent law compelling publishers of German papers to submit a correct translation of all war news, editorials, or comments on the war to the postmaster before publishing.

The Volks Freund has communicated with its subscribers and according to replies received they are willing to stand by the paper and subscribe to the English daily, although many say they cannot read English, but will have their children read it.

A MINNESOTA MERGER.

Archie Whaley, founder of the Hawley (Minn.) Clay County Herald, has bought the Barnesville (Minn.) Headlight from Charles Colby and sons. The paper will be consolidated with the Moorhead Independent to form the Clay County Leader.

CHANGES LOCATION.

The Northern Union Reaper, an Adventist paper, has moved from Minneapolis to Hutchinson, Minn., and will be edited by M. L. Anderson.

WAR NEWS LEAKS THROUGH.

ARMY AND NAVY INQUIRE INTO CASES—BAN ON NAVY BUREAU.

Following the heralding by Connecticut newspapers on October 13 and 14 of the news that Connecticut's former National Guardsmen are safe in France, the Government began action to punish the senders of the information and officials who let it come through. The news was published in spite of the fact that the War Department refused to countenance such infraction of its regulations.

Several private cablegrams had been received by Connecticut relatives of guardsmen on Saturday, followed by one which read like this:

"Governor, Connecticut, Hartford: All safe and mill [well]. Publish. 'ISABELLE.'"

As finally corrected by the telegraph company this was made to read:

"All safe and well; publish. 'ISABELLE.'"

Senator Isabelle of New Haven is the colonel of the 102d United States Infantry, which is composed of the Connecticut National Guard regiments. When this message, which had passed both the French and American censors, was given out by the Governor's office, with the significant special request for publicity, the Connecticut newspapers felt justified in going ahead in printing the news.

An official of the Committee on Public Information said:

"You may quote this committee as saying that the War Department feels this matter very keenly. Officials of the department think the information should not be published. The case of the New England colonel is the most flagrant case of the kind yet brought to their attention. Instant and drastic action will be taken."

An investigation is being made by the War Department, and the Navy Department has begun an inquiry to ascertain why the American cable censors passed the two dispatches without notifying the authorities in Washington. It was from the New England Governor that the department learned of the colonel's cablegram.

Precautions to prevent a repetition have been taken, Secretary Baker said. While the voluntary censorship rules, to which the press of the United States has agreed, forbid the publication of such messages, Mr. Baker said he does not know of any restriction upon officers informing their families privately of their arrival abroad.

The War Department has most urgently requested that nothing whatever be printed about arrivals of troops abroad, promising at the same time to report promptly any casualty. Friends who know troops have sailed and hear nothing further may assume they have arrived safely.

All troops abroad now are under the Federal government and not longer are state control. By reason of this fact the government can exercise what the War Department regards as a necessary censorship over news of their movements.

The newspapers have been requested by Secretary of the Navy Daniels not to publish matter sent out by the Navy Publicity Bureau. He says that all news concerning the Navy, given out by any branch of the service, must pass through the hands of the Committee on Public Information.

The Secretary explained that the Navy Publicity Bureau was organized for recruiting purposes, and when that work was completed there was nothing further for it to do in that line. The bureau had authorized the publication of stories that others in the department thought ought not to have gone out, and the Secretary therefore ordered that thenceforth all publishable information should go through one channel.

The Navy Department, Mr. Daniels said, is planning to have more publicity than it has had in the past, but all must pass through the hands of the Committee on Public Information.

In its work to stimulate Navy recruiting the Navy Publicity Bureau put out recently an article describing the work of American destroyers abroad. It was not submitted to the Creel bureau.

Mr. Creel is understood to have complained to Secretary Daniels that his commission from the President gave him exclusive jurisdiction over all such matters and that before any report of this kind was published it should be submitted to the Bureau of Public Information. The result was that the Navy Publicity Bureau was obliged to suppress another article it had prepared dealing with naval activities abroad.

The Bureau of Public Information is now giving its attention very largely to the Army and Navy and has given up its earlier plan of assigning men to every important department of the Government to turn out news stories of their activities. The result has been a shrinkage of the bureau until it is a mere shadow of its former self.

The State Department all along has maintained its own publicity bureau, through which have come all of the recent diplomatic disclosures.

NEW WOMAN'S PAPER.

The Woman's Press, "America's only official weekly newspaper for women," is now being published in Chicago. The publication is edited by Fred E. and Mary D. Fisher and claims to officially represent the Emergency League, the Fashion Art League of America, the Woman's Committee of the State Council of Defense, and the Chicago Chapter of the American Red Cross.

Many notable women of America, including Ella Flagg Young and Anna Catherine Green, are contributing to the Women's Press.

PRESS OF FRANCE, JAPAN AND AMERICA UNITED.

SIGNIFICANT BANQUET IN NEW YORK BODES WELL FOR ALLIED NATIONS AND ILL FOR THEIR ENEMIES.

The Southern Commercial Congress, composed of the leading business men of the South, came North and met in New York this week to further its aim at "international reconstruction." Principally the holding of the meeting in the North showed that America's peoples are all united in the war against Germany.

It was international in the aspect of bringing together in council, luncheon and banquet representatives of various nations allied with the United States in the war.

Its most notable international function was a luncheon on Monday in the Hotel McAlpin, at which the guest of honor was Stephane Lauzanne, editor of Le Matin, Paris. This was attended by prominent newspaper and advertising men of the North and South and of our ally, Japan.

Steps to gain the lasting friendship of France, America and Japan were taken at the luncheon, which was addressed by newspaper leaders of those three nations.

Herbert S. Houston, chairman of the National Advertising Advisory Board and former president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, presided. He declared that it was a "fitting opening for the Southern Commercial Congress that a dinner should be given to the press of the Allies."

REMARKABLE RECEPTION.

M. Lauzanne received a warm welcome when he arose to speak. He declared that the press of France—no matter what was its opinion before—is now devoted one and all to the welfare of France. He said:

"France is fighting for an ideal—like the United States has done in the past—and that ideal is the recognition of international law. The spirit symbolized by Prussian militarism must go. Germany must not be allowed to dictate her peace terms, but must be made to agree to the terms of peace offered by the Allies."

"France is fighting to uphold the supreme law of humanity and for that she will fight to the end. We prefer to die rather than live in a degraded humanity such as there would be if Germany should be victorious and rule the world. We have given you our hand—the hand of an unsubdued nation. The fight is not now 'France for all the world,' as a French statesman said, but all the Allies for all the world—including our friend Japan."

"Victory for justice, humanity and civilization" was M. Lauzanne's closing exhortation that brought every man and woman in the room to their feet amid wild applause.

And Mr. Houston added: "In the war and through it, with France to the end."

STONE LOOKS FOR EARLY PEACE.

Chairman Houston introduced Mr. Stone as "the American newspaper man best fitted to respond to M. Lauzanne for 'The Press of America'."

Mr. Stone announced that he had no prepared speech, and anyway he was not commissioned to speak for the American press. But he was very glad to be present, he said, to do honor to "a newspaper man of newspaper men—M. Lauzanne, the nephew and godchild of France's greatest newspaper man."

Mr. Stone declared that Le Matin of Paris in the past had done and at present is doing great things for France, including saving France from one war and freeing General Dreyfus of the charges that had dishonored him and making him again an honored member of the French Army.

Mr. Stone declared that the press of America had proven itself loyal, zealous and earnest. He told how the 1,100 members of the Associated Press had voted unanimously to stand behind President Wilson and with the Allies.

Mr. Stone said he believed that America's entry into the war meant an early peace for two reasons:

"In the first place Germany had no idea that this great nation—the melting pot of peoples that it is—would ever put through conscription. It is a wonderful thing how America's machinery has operated. There has not been one bit of disturbance and Germany is paralyzed by the rapid developments in this country."

"Secondly, the embargo declared by President Wilson is going to make Germany suffer without measure."

"No trust can ever be placed in a government that treats treaties as 'scraps of paper,' like the present government of Germany has declared them to be."

JAPAN OUR COMRADE.

Dr. Toyokichi Iyemaga, director of the East and West News Bureau, made a bitter attack on American "yellow" journals, which, he said, had almost succeeded in stirring up eternal enmity between the United States and Japan. Between 1905 and 1915, he said, Japan had been the sole target of these malicious attacks, with the result that the jingo press of Japan, unrepresentative of that country as the "yellows" of this, had replied in kind. He continued:

"The extraordinary march of events since the outbreak of the war has completely altered the situation."

"America and Japan are comrades—brothers—in arms. America's enemy is Japan's enemy."

"As a result of the Trading with the Enemy act of the United States, Japan fears no longer the influence of the unwarranted attacks."

"The causes of America and Japan are now definitely understood to be one and the same. The person who serves the interests of either nation serves the interests of both. Japanese residing in the United States are as loyal to America as they are to Japan."

"The American public is coming more and more to rightly appreciate the Japanese nation. Japan and America are forging ahead toward the same destination—victory and lasting peace."

"The sanctity of international treaties must be respected—not treated as mere 'scraps of paper'."

Dr. Iyemaga stated that the conferences of Viscount Ishii, head of the Japanese Mission, with Secretary of State Lansing had already had "profound and far-reaching" results.

them from laughter to tears by descriptions of scenes in the war zones. In the latter role he said:

"In one engagement the Germans captured a number of Ally troops. They ordered them to strip naked and then told them they might return to their own side. As the men started to run across 'no man's land' and reached a distance of about seventy-five feet the Germans turned their machine guns on them and shot them down."

"In another case an Ally soldier captured a fountain pen from a German trench. When he sat down afterwards to write to his mother and unscrewed the top of the pen it exploded and blew away the greater part of his face."

"That's the kind of a foe we must fight."

TRADE INQUIRY BY A.N.P.A.

ADVERTISING COMMITTEE
- NOW ON IMPORTANT WORK
—ROGERS NEW MEMBER.

William A. Thomson and Thomas F. Moore, director and associate director of the A.N.P.A. Bureau of Advertising, have been vigorously prosecuting a policy of trade investigating calculated to give the national advertiser concrete information regarding their relation to specific consumptive fields overlooked or neglected up to the present time.

At the meeting last week of the advertising committee in charge, this policy as developed so far together with the recommendation that it be more intensely pursued, was submitted and met with enthusiastic approval and support. It is confidently expected that newspaper publishers as well as present and potential advertisers will greatly benefit by the bureau's activities in this particular direction.

Owing to the resignation of Richard Waldo as a member of the committee in charge, he having joined the army, President H. L. Rogers of the A.N.P.A. has appointed William Rogers of the Boston Transcript to fill the vacancy.

POSTAL CAMOUFLAGE BARRED

A recent ruling of the Brooklyn (N.Y.) Post Office on the envelope sent out by the Mergenthaler Linotype Company, New York, may similarly effect other publishers and advertisers' mail matter.

The envelope was designed to enclose one of the company's booklets, which reproduced a number of telegrams and carried out the idea of the booklet by reproducing a facsimile of a Western Union Telegraph blank.

The Post Office declined to handle the envelopes, basing its decision on Section 470, Paragraph 3, of the Postal laws and Regulations which provides that "envelopes used for advertising purposes, upon which are printed the words 'Lettergrams' or 'Special Rush Service' or envelopes having the appearance of a telegram, are objectionable to the Department by reason of such misleading statements."

BANK TRUSTEES.

The trustees of the North Adams (Mass.) Savings Bank, one of the leading financial institutions of northern Berkshire, have elected James A. Hardman, editor of the Transcript, and Thomas A. Haggerty, editor of the Herald, to be incorporators of the institution, as an indication that the North Adams banking institutions appreciate the value of newspapers to the community.

McCLURE BACK HOME.

S. S. McClure has just returned from a six months' study of conditions in Japan. In passing through San Francisco on his way East, the publisher was the guest of the Press Club at a banquet given in his honor.

CANADIAN LOAN ADS BEGIN NEXT WEEK.

The display newspaper advertising on Canada's Fourth Domestic War Loan—to be known as Canada's Victory Loan—will be commenced next week in upwards of 1,300 publications and there will be inaugurated at the same time an efficient news, editorial and feature service with exclusive rights to each publication in its place of publication or field.

The handling of the press publicity in connection with the loan has been entrusted by the Finance Minister to the Canadian Press Association. It is being looked after by an advisory board of publishers, with the cooperation in the display advertising end of an advisory board of advertising agents consisting of five of the leading agents selected for the work by the Canadian Press Association, Inc.

The expenditure on the advertising end of the campaign will be approximately $200,000.

WAIVES EXEMPTION.

W. A. Donohue, for the past five years editor and publisher of the Okato (Minn.) Enterprise, has waived his claim for exemption from national service and has leased the Enterprise to E. C. Clasen.

BIRMINGHAM NEWS MOVES.

The Birmingham (Ala.) News, one of the largest dailies of the South, has just established itself in a new home.

The News celebrated moving into its new building with a seventy-six page "housewarming" number, in which itself, its equipment, intellectual and physical, its city and the South at large are exploited, the whole a convincing demonstration of achievements in journalism, keeping step with the extraordinary development of the iron and steel industry, of which Birmingham is the capital.

A fine reproduction of Marshall's portrait of Rufus W. Rhodes, founder of the News in 1848, a gift by Mrs. Rhodes to the News, and of the tablets on the building, bearing, in addition to his name those of Publisher Victor H. Hanson and Editor Frank P. Glass, are features of the first of the seventy-six pages.

DAHL COMES BACK.

SPLENDID PROGRAM AWAITS CONVENTION IN ROCHESTER NEXT WEEK.

The assembly of members of the Advertising Affiliation in Rochester, N. Y., on October 26 and 27 promises to be a very beneficial convention for the ad men. The affiliation is composed of the advertising clubs of Cleveland, Buffalo, Syracuse, Rochester and Canton, Ohio.

Merle Sidener, chairman of the national vigilance committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, has agreed to address the session on vigilance work. He is leading the campaign against fraudulent and misleading advertising, and has been a big factor in the movement to make advertising better.

Homer J. Buckley, for fifteen years associated with Marshall Field & Co., has accepted an invitation to speak on circular letters.

Other speakers obtained include: William H. Taft, ex President; Ivy L. Lee, of the Rockefeller foundation; Douglas Mallock, Chicago, author, editor and poet; Frederic W. Gandy, designer of type faces; George W. Hopkins, sales manager of Columbia Grafonola Company; J. George Frederick, of the Business Course, New York; Gilbert Farrar, typographic specialist; O. M. Brod-fucher, of the Chicago Tribune, and many others.

The business session will be held in the rooms of the Rochester Ad Club and will be open to all business and advertising men.

At the banquet on Saturday night former President Taft is to make an address on "After the War—Everlasting Peace."

BOONE LOW SCORE MAN

Perley H. Boone, night editor of the Chicago Tribune, had low score Monday in the qualifying round for the H. C. Chatfield-Taylor trophy, which carries with it the championship of the Chicago Press Club, at the Edgewater course in Chicago. Other low scores were made by Carl Marston, telegraph editor of the Chicago Herald, Paul P. Pomeroy of the Associated Press, Paul Hammett of the Drovers' Journal, D. J. Lavin of the Tribune art department, Leslie O'Rear of the Associated Press and Frederick Donaghey, musical critic of the Tribune.

AN IOWA CONSOLIDATION

A merger of Webster City (Ia.) Freeman-Tribune and the Journal to form the Freeman-Journal took effect on October 15.

W. F. Hunter, for years editor of the Freeman-Tribune, will conduct the editorial page.

George C. Tucker, formerly of the Journal, will be city editor.

C. H. Haeger, also of the Journal, will be business manager.

MAKING A GREATER SOUTH BY ADVERTISING.

HOW AND WHY CAMPAIGN SHOULD BE LAUNCHED NOW—THE NATION NEEDS WIDER PUBLICITY.

In connection with their important business discussions, the members of the Southern Commercial Congress, meeting in New York this week, gave a large part of their attention to the consideration of advertising as a means of making a greater nation and a greater South.

The discussion resulted in the passage of a resolution:

To raise $1,200,000, in levies of $25,000 a year for the next three years from each of the sixteen Southern states, for the purpose of advertising the South, under the direction of a committee consisting of the governors of the states and another member appointed from each state by the president of the Congress.

The campaign will be for the purpose of setting before the people of United States—the tourist, the investor, the inventor, the merchant, the settler, the young farmer or business man who seeks a freer field than the one in which he has grown up—the possibilities of all sorts offered by the South.

A special press and advertising section was presided over by Herbert S. Houston, chairman of the National Advertising Advisory Board and ex-president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World. The speakers included Edwin Bird Wilson, St. Elmo Massengale, Mayor Preston of Baltimore and Lindsay Russell, president of the Japan Society.

Chairman Houston said that if the Congress adjourned without a definite plan to give wide and effective distribution to the information about the South that was presented there it could be likened to a high-power dynamo with no machinery to run. He said:

"The South has been advertised to its hurt and disadvantage more than any other section in the world.

"The news of a lynching will travel further than the news of all the work the South has done in building up the black man so that he may be a useful member of society. A Frank case will get more publicity, to the great damage of the South, than the factories you are building, the colleges you are endowing, the progress you are making on all constructive lines. Why shouldn't this congress see that the whole truth about the South is told?"

PLAN FOR SOUTHERN ADVERTISING.

Mr. Wilson presented a plan for a three-year advertising campaign, to be conducted by the congress, at a cost of $1,000,000. The slogan, he said, should be "Success in the Sunny South," and most of the advertisements should be in the form of stories of success.

He recommended the use of magazines, newspapers, agricultural and trade publications, moving pictures, and art posters in the campaign, and a clearing house for information, to be established by the congress, which should not only answer queries and conduct follow-up work but prepare booklets of information and clear the literature of publicity and information of all the business and industrial bodies of the Southern States. He said:

"A great and far-reaching economy could be effected in this national emergency by directing the efforts of farmers and manufacturers to the fields of the Southland, where farming and manufacturing can be carried on uninterruptedly the twelve months of the year; where several crops instead of one can be grown between January and December; where raw materials are at hand in unlimited abundance, and where the labor problem is less complicated than in most parts of the country. In this great crisis the nation cannot afford to waste the efforts of its agriculturists on barren ground under unfavorable climatic conditions. It cannot afford to waste the efforts of its manufacturers in places far remote from raw supplies and under unfavorable labor conditions."

WHY SOUTH SHOULD ADVERTISE.

Mr. Massengale undertook to present the variety and extent of Southern resources and their great growth in recent years, as well as the varied appeal which the South makes, not only to Northern money, but to Northern settlers. He said:

"The South should advertise for the same reason that any business firm should advertise—because she has the goods and knows it, but all the world doesn't know it. She was the poor relation of Uncle Sam's family a few years ago, but now, praise Providence, she has grown up and learned to make a living for herself, with a little left over for the rest of the country!"

(Mr. Massengale's reasons why the South should advertise are given in full in another column of this issue of THE FOURTH ESTATE.)

WHY A CITY SHOULD ADVERTISE.

Mayor Preston told of the work Baltimore had done in advertising her great improvements in public utilities, transit and terminal facilities and harbor and dock conditions and said that this campaign had resulted in the acquisition of $100,000,000 worth of new industries and additions to old plants for the city. He said:

"An intelligent, active, and discriminating follow-up is in the minds of advertising men the most important and perhaps the most difficult. Now a city government rarely contains in its municipal activities an agency suited to carefully follow up prospects that have come in reply to advertisements, and the jealousy among manufacturers and the membership of trade bodies often will prevent a satisfactory examination and exploitation of the prospects as they come in. This question of follow up is embarrassing and difficult. In practice we have had to depend on the multiplicity of our agencies in getting good results."

NATION NEEDS ADVERTISING.

Mr. Russell made a plea for publicity work by the United States to put trade conditions in this country before the world in the years to come, and discussed the publicity methods of other nations. Mr. Russell said:

"A nation, like a business corporation, stands in need of good will. It cannot in this age live to itself alone. It becomes vitally necessary for us to anticipate what Germany, as an outlaw nation, and other nations may do after the war in further national policies through publicity, legitimate and otherwise. Our national security demands at least defensive measures. Educational publicity is especially needed in Russia just now to combat the influences working against us.

"The establishment in foreign countries of clean and progressive weekly American newspapers, such as we have in the Japan Advertiser in Tokio, published daily primarily for their influence on the vernacular press and to create a bulletin service of brief news items in each country, supplemented by direct advertisements in vernacular papers, are points to be considered.

"Great Britain has freely used publicity to promote her interests in foreign countries. Reuter's News Service has been one of the agencies employed.

"Even China maintains a news bureau in New York.

"But one may publish any misstatement or canard regarding Japan; one may write a muck-raking article flagrantly unjust to the Island Empire, with comparative impunity. There is no loss of subscriptions to the publisher; there are no wrathful advertisers. In the entire United States there are only a few Japanese who can or will write effectively in defense of Japan. There are but few Americans who have the knowledge and the inclination to do so. Why, it may be asked, do not the Japanese adopt the tactics of other nationals?"

Mr. Alloway has been employed in newspaper work on various papers and was for two years editor of the Printer and Publisher, Toronto.

No successor to Mr. Alloway has been appointed by the C. P. A., according to word just received from Manager John M. Imrie, who, incidentally, declares "there is nothing in the report that I am to resign to become manager of a new Liberal paper in Toronto."

BALTIMORE STAR CHANGES.

Walter H. Hough, who has been city editor of the Baltimore Star since it was founded in 1908, has been appointed managing editor to fill the vacancy caused by the death of John Martin Deponai on October 11.

W. Oscar Anderson, political reporter of the Star, has been made city editor.

EMPLOYEES ARE OWNERS.

The Bismarck (N. D.) Tribune, which boasts of being the oldest daily in the state, has been purchased by George D. Mann, its editor, and Enaley A. Weir, its business manager.

BARNHILL GOLF VICTOR.

W. Roy Barnhill of New York won the gross prize in the autumn tournament of the New York Metropolitan Advertising Golf Association at the Siwanoy Country Club on October 12, with a score of 80.

TOMES LIST TO MULLIGAN.

Ralph R. Mulligan of 30 East 42d street, New York, has taken over the national advertising representation of the newspapers formerly represented by the late Robert Tomes of New York.

NOW IS THE TIME FOR THE SOUTH TO ADVERTISE.

HAS THE GOODS AND KNOWS IT, BUT ALL THE WORLD DOES NOT KNOW IT—COUNTRY OF VAST WEALTH.

"The South should advertise for the same reason that any business firm should advertise—because she has the goods and knows it, but all the world doesn't know it." She has her products to sell, she has land to offer farmers, she has out-of-door winter to attract tourists, she has cheap water power and ample transportation to offer investors—and above all she has money to spend and plenty of it.

"She was the poor relation of Uncle Sam's family a few years ago, but now, praise Providence, she has grown up and learned to make a living for herself with a little left over for the rest of the country.

"We people of the Southern States are not selfish. We do not desire to keep all these goods things to ourselves. There are vast tracts of field and woodland still untenanted and unproductive, and we have these to offer the farmer from the rock-ribbed hills of New England or the snow-bound plains of the Middle West at prices which seem insignificant beside the cost of fancy farm land in the prairie belt.

"For we want more people, more sturdy Americans who will come to live with us and cultivate these lands and add to the crops that feed and clothe the world; new citizens who will benefit themselves in this sunny land and benefit the South by their presence. For more people means more money to spend, more business to be done, more manufactured articles to be bought, more taxes in the treasury to pave the highways that stretch like a spider web from Virginia to the Gulf.

"We have room for all who will come, and there is a living and more for all who will work.

"Therefore, the field is ripe for a great national advertising campaign that will let the whole country know what Dixie has to offer."

Thus was the Southern Commercial Congress, meeting in New York on October 15, 16 and 17 advised by its best known advertising authority St. Elmo Massengale of Atlanta, Ga., who is president of the Massengale Advertising Agency, president Association of Southern Advertising Agencies, member board of governors Association of American Advertising Agencies, and member National Advertising Advisory Board.

"And the South's advertising should be a campaign to arouse the interest of capital, which will establish factories of every kind," declared Mr. Massengale, "to attract the young farmer in other sections who grows up, looks about him, and finds the lands pre-empted by an older generation and held at a price beyond his means; to attract the increasing thousands of business men who have left their investments in safe hands and are in search of a climate where they can play golf three hundred and fifty days in the year and poker on the remaining fifteen."

"It has been my good fortune to have had a small part in a step toward this national advertising of the South, through the medium of a long series of full page advertisements in certain magazines and advertising journals covering two years past setting forth some of the prosperity of the Southern States.

"This advertising, I take pleasure in explaining, was paid for (some $50,000.00) by the leading daily newspapers of the South. They have been loyal to their section—and our Southern papers will rank in power and prestige and enterprise with any of the East—but the great campaign which alone could do justice to the South and her advantages could not be borne by the newspapers or any other one class of business.

"You must remember that in the Southern states we have 35,000,000 inhabitants—practically one-third the population of the United States. There is a large proportion of negroes, the best adapted of all farm labor to the land in which they work. But besides the negro, there is an infinitesimal proportion of foreign-born inhabitants.

"Nowhere else in all this country can you find such a population of purely Anglo-Saxon citizens, descendants of the pioneers who came to America before the Revolution, whose blood has been unmingled with the Slav or the Teuton or the Latin. We have no Scandinavian vote in Dixie; no Italian question, no great foreign element to consider in politics or patriotism. There are no hyphenates here, and the I. W. W. is merely a name we read in the papers.

"We are not all Southern-born. In my home city of Atlanta we have thousands of splendid men and women from New York and Boston and Chicago and the Pacific Coast, and they are among our best and most public-spirited citizens. The same holds true of all the South. But those who come to make profits remain to live among us, and within a few years we absorb them into the family and they become true Southerners like the rest of us. There is no more enthusiastic booster for Dixie than the erstwhile stranger within our gates.

KING COTTON DETHRONED.

"In making notes for these remarks about the South of today, I found myself involved in a maze of figures and statistics which make even some of the nation's war expenses look like small change; figures on crops and valuations which stretch into such sums that they are meaningless to the ordinary mind and interesting only to the statistician. I probably shall inflict a few of these upon you before I have concluded, but at this moment I want to speak of a bloodless revolution through which the South has passed and emerged triumphant.

"King Cotton, at once the protector and the despot; King Cotton who gave us a few fat years and many lean ones; King Cotton, whose royal income too often went to enrich the treasuries of others than his own subjects; old King Cotton has been dethroned.

"He has not been exiled. Indeed, he is permitted still to rule over many thousands of his fair acres. But no longer is King Cotton a monarch undisputed. His is a constitutional kingdom now, and his prime minister is Lord Corn. In his cabinet are those great commoners, Wheat and Pork and Beef and Peanut, and the well known potato brothers, Sweet and Irish.

"We are learning to let these do the work and pay the grocery bills, and King Cotton, a generous monarch now, furnishes us the automobiles and the phonographs and the new machinery which once were beyond the reach of the Dixie farmer. We honor the old King, and we are proud that we have a monopoly on him, at least, or he on us, but we have learned to keep him in his place at last.

"Do not believe, however, that the South has banished cotton. And do not think that the boll weevil of which you have heard so much has put an end to successful cotton raising. The boll weevil has done great harm to some sections, but there are many who consider him an angel in disguise. He left desolation in his wake in those first years, before our scientists had learned his habits, but it was not long before new corps sprang up in the fields left vacant by the weevil—food corps which fed the farmer without his asking favors of the groceryman, without his mortgaging his eternal future for a winter's food.

"In some portions of the South they had learned the lesson before the invading army of the boll weevil reached their soil, and when he came there was no cotton for him to live upon. Instead there was corn and cane and a dozen other corps, good for cash at the nearest town and independent of the vagaries of the cotton market.

"The boll weevil appears to be defeated now. The South is perfecting a variety of cotton which does not agree with his digestion. He refuses to feed upon it, even when it is shoved under his nose. When this variety is generally grown there will be no further danger from the boll weevil.

"In 1914 the Southern cotton crop amounted to 16,000,000 bales, but it brought only $523,000,000. That was a bad year in Dixie, for we had depended too much upon cotton.

"Last year the crop reached only 11,000,000 bales, but it brought the colossal sum of $1,073,000,000.

"There is some difference, my friends, between 6 cent cotton, which we remember in that summer when the bottom fell out, and the 25 cent cotton of the past year. It meant the difference between having to sell the mule to save his feed, and being puzzled to choose between six or eight-cylinder car or a twelve.

"The Department of Agriculture estimates that this year's cotton crop will amount to $1,815,000,000 without counting the seed.

"That by-product, which used to be hauled out and thrown away, brought in just $278,000,000 last year. We all used some of it. The farmers fed it to their livestock to fatten them for the market or to increase the yield of milk and butter. We put it on our salad, with an olive oil label on some of it, but with the greater part traveling honestly under its own name.

"We have found it an excellent substitute for animal fat in cooking. And a large share goes back into the land in the form of fertilizer, enriching the soil to raise more crops.

"But, as I have said, we no longer permit ourselves to be at the mercy of King Cotton. When the farmer of other days raised nothing but cotton, he had to sell it at the buyer's price, for in no other way could he pay for the flour and meal and meat that came from the West. The farmer of today raises his food at home, and if the price of cotton doesn't suit him he can hold on until the price goes up. And it always does.

AGRICULTURE VALUES.

"So, the cotton crop of today is a minor note in the Southern symphony.

"We are raising this year $1,009,000,000 worth of corn, nearly $1,000,000 more than last year.

"We are raising $243,000,000 worth of wheat, which is $122,000,000 more than last year.

"We are raising $140,000,000 worth of sweet potatoes, and $126,000,000 of Irish potatoes; $123,000,000 worth of oats, and $164,000,000 worth of hay.

"These seven corps will have a value of $4,287,320,450, an increase over 1916 of $1,710,974,650.

"These crops by no means cover the field—I have not mentioned the hundreds of trainloads of Georgia peaches which go flying Eastward and Westward every summer; the vast shipments of watermelons, the great crops of tobacco from Kentucky and Tennessee and Virginia, the apples of the lower Appalachian mountains, the tremendous citrus fruits of Florida.

"They will add more than $600,000,000 to the farmers' buying power this fall. But more than all else, they will serve to feed us all, and we need ask King Cotton only to clothe us and give us the luxuries to which we are becoming accustomed.

"There have been many fortunes made in the South this year and in the year before, and they were not munition profits. They came off the farm. The Southern farmer was never so well off as he is today. Why, a tenant farmer in a county close to Atlanta reported a week or two ago that he had cleared $3,000 this season, after feeding himself and his family all the year—and he was one of the small renting class, conducting a one-mule farm, hiring one farmhand in the busy season, and on a tract of land so small that he paid only $140 rent for a year. You can imagine what some of the big plantation owners have been doing.

OTHER GREAT ASSETS.

"I gave passing mention a few moments ago to the citrus of Florida. There is a state that is surprising the country. A few years ago we looked upon it as a source of early fruits and vegetables and an excellent country for invalids to spend their winters. It is both. But you may be surprised to learn that Florida this year produced $35,000,000 worth of corn, $4,000,000 worth of cotton, and $1,000,000 worth of tobacco.

"Her total agricultural output amounted to more than $113,000,000. "Her fish and oysters brought $2,000,000 and her lumber $50,000,000.

"The men of America smoked $50,000,000 worth of Florida cigars last year.

"Many of you, perhaps, look upon the South as purely an agricultural region, but you are far mistaken in this. Of the 37 useful minerals mined in the United States, the South mines all but two—platinum and borax.

"Virginia has a greater coal area than Great Britain and Germany combined.

"Kentucky has enough coal to provide fuel for the world for generations to come.

"The South's coal production in 1916 was 27.6 per cent of the coal mined in the whole country, including Alaska.

"Alabama mines pig iron more cheaply than any state in the Union, and the South possesses one-half the total iron resources of the nation.

"Look about you here in New York. You will find Georgia marble lining the interior of your subway stations. St. Cecilia church, over in Brooklyn, is built of it.

"You will find its beautiful white and gray coloring adorning the interiors of many of your great buildings. It is used for monuments and buildings everywhere in the country. The Corcoran Art Gallery in Washington is built of it.

"Our Georgia granite, because of its close grain and enduring qualities, is in demand everywhere. We have a mountain of it at the doors of Atlanta, one solid boulder two miles long and a mile wide and as tall as the Woolworth Building. They have been chopping it away by the trainload for year after year, and yet they have seemingly made no more impression on the bulk of Stone Mountain than would a mouse gnawing at the Washington monument.

"About ninety per cent of the country's sulphur comes from the South, Louisiana leading in the production. Louisiana has wonderful cane and rice plantations.

"Two counties in Arkansas produce ninety per cent of the bauxite, from which the world's aluminum is made.

"An old philosopher has declared no nation less than a thousand years old could produce a great picture or a great cheese. But this year North Carolina, in addition to its millions of dollars worth of agriculture, is also making a million pounds of cheese. And she is the second important state in the Union in the production of cotton goods and tobacco.

"Texas produces the most valuable crops of any state in the Union. Her productions last year were more than $684,000,000.

"Tennessee's crops of $229,000,000 exceeds the two Dakotas.

"South Carolina, with a crop of $274,435,000 surpasses Wisconsin, Minnesota, and California. South Carolina holds the world's record in the production of corn, and has held it for years, a Marlboro County man having produced 255 bushels of shelled corn to the acre.

"Believe me, 'that's going some.' But even a boy in Florence County, South Carolina, has raised 228½ bushels to the acre. South Carolina also holds the world's record for corn at 182 bushels to one acre and a York County man, in South Carolina has raised four bales of cotton to one acre which is an illustration of the intensive sort of cultivation that can be accomplished in any other part of the South if the planter tries hard enough and uses scientific methods of agriculture.

"Georgia, with a farm output of $348,924,000, while considered a great cotton state, exceeded the farm productions of such empire states as New York, Pennsylvania, Indiana and Ohio.

"The percentage of agricultural increase for the entire country, outside of the South last year was 29.9 per cent. But the percentage of increase in the South was 41.4.

"One of the most remarkable and significant features of the awakening of the South to the value of food products was the development in the past few years of the livestock industry. Southern farmers are importing blooded cattle by the trainload. The state and county fairs each fall are marked by the sale of fancy beef stock at prices which would open the eyes of the farmer of a decade ago.

"We are turning rapidly to the raising of hogs, building packing houses to provide a market, feeding the farmers and the city dwellers upon Southern bacon instead of bringing it from Chicago.

LIVESTOCK.

"The quantity of livestock production has been decreasing in some sections of the country formerly famous for that industry. The number of stock hogs in the United States, the Department of Agriculture reports, decreased 8.2 per cent in the year ending September 1.

"Iowa, the leading hog raising state showed a decrease of 10 per cent, as did Illinois, Missouri and Kansas.

"But Virginia and Mississippi showed an increase.

"There are in the South $380,057,000 worth of dairy cows, beside $431,257,000 worth of other cattle; $338,629,000 worth of horses; $240,844,000 worth of swine; $87,061,000 worth of sheep and $439,912,000 worth of mules, making the grand total of livestock in the South at the present time amount to $2,095,860,000.

"There was a time, my friends, when we of the South raised cotton, shipped it to Massachusetts, brought it back in the shape of cloth, and paid the bills. But that was changed years ago. The cotton mills came to the cotton fields and more of them are being built every year. I counted no less than 20 new cotton mills under construction one day last week from the window of a Southern Railway train between Atlanta and Greensboro, N. C.

"The South has awakened to her manufacturing possibilities, but they are by no means exhausted. One Atlanta steel company, which was hard pressed for funds a few years ago, will earn $150 a share on its common stock this year.

"Our cities are being circled about with manufacturing plants. We are making things we need and a surplus to ship away.

WATER POWER.

"One of the greatest developments of the South, and especially of the Southeast, is found in the harnessing of water power through Georgia and Tennessee and the Carolinas.

"You will see the great steel towers of the high tension electric wires stretching across the country like giant sentinels, bearing the power of a thousand waterfalls to the wheels of a 100,000 mills.

"One company, which has turned Tallulah Falls, in Georgia, into a willing slave which lights Atlanta's streets and operates her cars, has found even that gigantic plant too small for the demand for power, and is beginning another $5,000,000 development.

"The Carolinas have interurban electric lines from the great water powers of those states like a network connecting hundreds of great cotton mills, etc. Why, the South's manufacturing products in 1914, the latest figures at hand, were valued by the government at $3,686,000,000.

"That was more than the value of the agricultural output of the South last year, and yet the South is 83 per cent rural.

"We still have a long way to go before our agricultural resources are fully developed—and that is why we want a greater population, more sturdy men and women to clear new farms and raise new crops and new babies.

"I and I have not mentioned the timber resources of the Southern States. The South is virtually the nation's lumber yard, for 55 per cent of the nation's supply is cut in the Southern forests. We have a monopoly of yellow pine, that monarch of all timbers. We cut more than forty varieties of woods used for manufacturing purposes. Our pine forests supply an enormous amount of turpentine and resin, known in commerce as naval stores, and their value, shipped from the great naval store ports of Savannah, Jacksonville and other markets, is over $25,000,000 a year.

NEW BLESSINGS.

"A new industry, linked with the timber, has sprung up in the past year along the coasts of the South Atlantic and the Gulf—or rather it is the revival of an industry as old as the Phoenicians—the building of staunch ships. The cry for shipping has exhausted the supply. Ancient hulks which had lain in the mud of two oceans for years have been hauled out and patched up and sent over seas with cargoes. The demand still was unsatisfied, and now, in the ports of the South the ship-builders are laying keels and building the hulls of hundreds of good vessels. Many of these have been launched and loaded and sent across the seas.

"This industry will not end with the close of the war. American shipping will be dominant in the years following peace, and Southern shipyards will be busy for the next decade, at least.

"There is another source of profit to the South today, a factor caused by her climate. All over the Southern States are tented camps and wooden cantonments of the new national army, thousands upon thousands of soldiers in the making.

"They have been sent to the South from many states, upon the advice of General Leonard A. Wood and other army officers who realized the advantage of a healthful climate where a soldier could be drilled twelve months in the year. The building of these camps has turned millions of dollars into new channels, has given tens of thousands of workmen employment at high wages. The salaries of officers and men are being poured into the South at the rate of millions a month.

"Some of this influx of wealth will be temporary, but a great part will be permanent, for it is the announced policy of the War Department to maintain these cantonments long after peace is declared, as training quarters for the soldiers who will keep that peace—the new army of the system of universal training.

"War may be what Sherman said it was and it once ruined us, but to any country now like ours uninvaded by an enemy, and with millions of dollars turned loose by the government, it is proving a blessing.

MONEY NEVER SO PLENTIFUL.

"Money—real money—was never so plentiful in the South as it is today. The banks are running over with it.

"The farmers are no longer taking their hats off at the bank door and begging for a loan on their next year's cotton crop. In one small county of South Georgia the banks had total deposits a few days ago of more than $1,500,000.

"To quote a few definite figures, the bank clearings in Atlanta alone amounted in September of this year to $129,734,000 an increase over the previous September of more than $37,000,000. The deposits on September 15 had increased more than 50 per cent over the same date a year before.

"From these facts and figures of the Southern States you can form some idea of the prosperity which has come to us, of the opportunities we have to offer to new citizens and new capital.

"There could be no better chosen time than now to launch a great campaign of publicity which will let the world know of the South.

"We have the fertile soil, the raw material. We need new blood.

"We need strong hands and willing hearts and able minds, to develop the resources which still lie dormant.

"We want more residents in our attractive climate—a climate in which sunstroke is unknown, where the zero mark on a thermometer is a convention rather than a utility.

"We can offer the farmer lands which will make three crops a year, lands he can till nine months in every twelve.

"We have room for everybody; and every man who comes to us to turn new furrows in our soil, to set new wheels to spinning, to inspire new industries in country or town or city, will find that a Southern welcome is something more than an empty phrase."

EDITORS SPEAK AT SOUTH'S CONGRESS.

A. S. Hough, editor of the Jacksonville (Fla.) Times-Union, proposed at the meeting of the main body of the Southern Commercial Congress that disputes between nations after the present war should be settled by trial by jury.

Mr. Hough would have a panel of jurors selected from all the nations of the earth, to serve for life at the neutral spot named for the sittings of the international tribunal. No jurymen would sit on trials affecting his own land or against any land against which he felt a prejudice.

John Temple Graves, editor of the New York American, speaking on "The South and the New Republic," said that the spirit of patriotism in this war was like that in the Spanish-American war, when "the States south of the Mason-Dixon line gave more men to the service of the country in proportion to population than any other section."

Another publisher prominent at the Congress sessions was D. D. Moore of the New Orleans Times-Picayune.

SPACE SELLING EFFICIENCY.

SYSTEM OF GRAPHIC CHART FACTS PRESENTATION THAT REDUCES TIME.

Advertising space buyers in New York and other big advertising centers recently were shown a brand of newspaper space selling solicitation by C. E. Coling, advertising manager of the Winnipeg Free Press, that he declared to be just about the "best ever."

Mr. Coling a few weeks ago started on a business trip to the states and the larger cities of Canada carrying a handsome black leather portfolio containing the results of a year's work he had been compiling to try as an experiment in selling space for the Free Press.

When he called on his prospects, instead of sitting down and exhibiting voluminous complicated batches of figures and comparisons and having to verbally explain them, Mr. Coling opened up his portfolio and showed his auditor graphic chart illustrations of what he was talking about, accompanied by simplified figures that explained every point in just an instant's glance.

The portfolio's first page carried a map of the world, showing Winnipeg city's and Manitoba Province's relation to the United States and Canada and the rest of the world, with their facilities for importing and exporting. It illustrated at a glance the reason why the territory in which the Free Press circulates is getting wealthier all the time and showed how it is preparing for a great future boom that is coming when the export facilities are simplified by the opening of new railroads now being built, which will allow export exit through the Hudson Bay, closed only two months of the year, straight to Great Britain and other parts of Europe. This will provide a route much cheaper and shorter than coast points used at present.

Map No. 2 showed the high altitude of the Free Press territory, which opens the seasons there for clothing and supplies much earlier than most other parts of Canada—a point which, Mr. Coling says, few advertisers know about. It thus illustrates why advertising should be started earlier in Manitoba than other places.

Another notable map showed the forests of the territory—why Manitoba offers a fertile field for selling tree pulling machinery, blasting powders, etc.

Others showed the origin of population—as an aid to the preparation of the right appeal copy—list of occupations, etc. The population of Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan is English speaking; Manitoba having about a half-million, Alberta about 400,000 and Saskatchewan about a half-million.

Supplementary is a graphic chart showing population density so that a man who doesn't know anything about it can look at the chart and at once get his knowledge from heavy and dark sepia spots.

The Isotherms of the year are illustrated in another chart, showing that the prairie provinces are not frozen over all year, as many people think. The country's best crops come in June. Winnipeg's average daily hours of sunshine are 15 to 16 hours; Manitoba has fertile producing land going north to 17 hours of sunshine.

Then there are maps showing cities of the Provinces of Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan population, according to age and sex; proportion of improved and unimproved areas in Canada.

The lands of Canada are shown to be 78 per cent undeveloped. Manitoba's land is about 70 per cent undeveloped.

More charts show the live stock value, manufacturing information, wage earners (to the extent of number of blind people per thousand, deaths and insane), rolling stock statistics for the prairie provinces' territory.

The live stock, dairy and root grain crops for 1917 reached a value of $700,000,000, which meant in dollars and cents $3,783 per farmer family (five people) in the three prairie provinces (or $756 for each member of the family).

TOO MANY AUTOS TO COUNT.

Mr. Coling says it is impossible to supply the demand for automobiles in his territory. Based on licenses issued, there are close to 70,000 motor cars in the three provinces of Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Origin, religion, birthplace of the people; distribution (rural and urban); growth value of farm lands; buildings; implements; live stock; and a vast amount of other information vital to the space buyer's knowledge are plainly explained—with hardly a word of verbal explanation being necessary.

Mr. Coling's charts define the circulation of the three newspapers of Winnipeg even to duplication, comparative purchasing power, purchasing power in each section of the city (obtained through a census taken by Free Press men in a household canvass. Mr. Coling says the retail merchants have consented to cooperate in this cause each year hereafter); number of to whom particular kinds of products appeal, etc.

Graphic circles divide this information into 100 sections.

Maps show the comparative purchasing power of the four sections of the city of Winnipeg, illustrated by photographs of typical homes; number of home owners and renters in each; volume of advertising carried by newspapers, by months and years, in the local and national field. Comparative charts show the volume in each of the Winnipeg papers.

WHEAT REACHED 2.70.

Graphic circles show trade reports, and other charts show the fluctuations in the value of wheat and other products. In this connection it is interesting to note that wheat reached its greatest value in May of this year—2.70 a bushel. Since then the Government has set the price of 2.21 per bushel.

Incidentally, the Free Press holds yearly contests among its readers, offering substantial prizes for estimating which of the local papers goes into the largest number of homes and the percentage of homes for each paper.

CANADIAN BUSINESS CONDITIONS.

Mr. Coling's choice presentation of space buying argument ends with giving prairie farming statistics, and explaining the conditions in seven of the principal business lines in western Canada. They show that the year 1916 gave an increase over 1915 in every line of business done in the three prairie provinces, and the first quarter of 1917 showed a phenomenal gain over the same period of 1916. All the Winnipeg newspapers showed increases in volume of advertising.

The comparison of the last four years' business in the several principal lines shows:

DEPARTMENT STORE TRADE.

- 1—Last six months of 1914 against first six months of 1914—Decrease 18 3-8 per cent.
- 2—Gain of first six months of 1915 over last six months of 1914—45 1-8 per cent.
- 3—Gain of last six months of 1915 over first six months of 1915—40 per cent.
- 4—Total gain of 1916 over 1915—26 1/2 per cent.
- 5—Gain of first quarter, 1917, over first quarter, 1916—19 1-8 per cent.

For the five above periods the records of six other leading business lines follow:

WHOLESALE TRADE.

- 1—31 per cent decrease.
- 2—8 1/2 per cent decrease.
- 3—50 1/2 per cent increase.
- 4—43 per cent increase.
- 5—32 per cent increase.

HARDWARE TRADE.

- 1—10 per cent decrease.
- 2—5 per cent decrease.
- 3—15 per cent increase.
- 4—35 per cent increase.
- 5—46 per cent increase.

RETAIL SHOE TRADE.

- 1—22 per cent decrease.
- 2—8 per cent decrease.
- 3—26 per cent increase.
- 4—35 per cent increase.
- 5—20 per cent increase.

RETAIL JEWELRY TRADE.

- 1—13 per cent decrease.
- 2—5 per cent increase.
- 3—10 per cent increase.
- 4—15 per cent increase.
- 5—10 per cent increase.

RETAIL PAINT MANUFACTURE.

- 1—34 per cent decrease.
- 2—12 per cent decrease.
- 3—14 per cent increase.
- 4—3 1/2 per cent increase.
- 5—32 1/2 per cent increase.

RETAIL MUSIC TRADE.

- 1—42 per cent decrease.
- 2—10 per cent decrease.
- 3—23 per cent increase.
- 4—60 per cent increase.
- 5—23 per cent increase.

Mr. Coling says the great increase in business shown has been greatly due to the encouragement the Government has given.

EDWARD WALTON'S IDEA.

Mr. Coling got the idea for presenting his space selling data from the late E. A. Walton, formerly vice-president of the Association of National Advertisers and advertising manager of the Burroughs Adding Machine Company, Detroit. In speaking one day before the Winnipeg Advertising Club, Mr. Walton illustrated how advertising space buyers would like to have selling information presented to them.

Mr. Coling immediately took up the suggestion and spent over a year compiling his information in its present form. His next step will be to reproduce his data, maps, charts and figures in a form for the benefit of all interested.

His business trip, which took him through Minneapolis, St. Paul, Chicago, Buffalo, New York, Montreal and other Canadian cities, has made Mr. Coling feel more than compensated for the vast expenditure of time spent in preparing his data.

Mr. Coling has spent a number of years buying and selling newspaper advertising space. He first entered the business in Birmingham and London, England, seventeen years ago with the Borax Dry Soap Company. Fifteen years ago he went to Canada and became advertising manager of the Winnipeg Paint & Glass Company. Later he was connected with the McPherson-McCurdy Advertising Agency of Winnipeg and conducted his own agencies in Vancouver and Calgary, spending much time originating trade works.

He joined the Winnipeg Free Press in 1915 to inaugurate a service and promotion department, and subsequently was placed in charge of the advertising of the daily and weekly Free Press. In his latter work he has the close cooperation of Louis Klebahn of New York and Henry De Claque of Chicago, the national representatives of the Free Press.

THE PRINGLE INQUIRY.

The next session of the Canadian investigation will be held in Ottawa on October 29, at which time Commissioner Pringle hopes the full reports of costs from all the mills will have been received.

SORORITY MEETING.

The editors of the Sorority papers will hold their annual convention in Chicago on October 24-27.

BROOKLYN DAILY TIMES
appointment of the
L. H. CRALL COMPANY
Tribune Building, CHICAGO
AS ITS Western Representative

MEMBERS OF THE INTERNATIONAL CIRCULATION MANAGERS ASSOCIATION

I.C.M.A. AFTERMATHS.

A vote of thanks was tendered to "Cousin" Fred Houser, who last year attended the convention at Grand Rapids and offered the invitation to the I.C.M.A. in behalf of the city of Atlanta to hold the 1917 convention there.

One of the first things that President Sears did was to appoint James McKernan chairman of the general welfare committee and William M. Henry chairman of the transportation committee.

M. W. Hollenbacker of the Oklahoma City Times was elected a member of the I.C.M.A. just before closing the convention.

W. L. Argue, chairman; W. J. Darby and James R. Henderson were appointed as a Canadian postal sub-committee by the chairman.

Within twelve hours after the nineteenth annual convention of the International Circulation Managers Association was adjourned at Atlanta that city was practically deserted by the visiting newspaper men. Although a session was scheduled to be held Thursday afternoon, the final adjournment came about noon in order to let a large number of delegates make a number of side trips before returning to their homes.

Soon after the adjournment a large party, composed mostly of the delegates and their wives from the East and Canada, departed for Washington for a short visit.

About thirty-five others remained in the city until midnight, when they took a train for Birmingham for a short visit to that city as the guests of the Birmingham delegation. This party included I. U. Sears of Davenport, Ia., the new president; J. M. Schmid, the retiring president, and Mrs. Schmid, of Indianapolis; and J. A. Mathews, the secretary-treasurer, and Mrs. Mathews, of Oklahoma City.

During their last hours in the city the party going to Birmingham went sight seeing in Atlanta with local newspaper men as their guides.

At the closing session of the convention retiring President Schmid was presented with a handsome Oriental rug by the delegates. The presentation speech was made by Secretary-Treasurer Mathews. At a meeting of the board of directors following the adjournment of the convention Mr. Schmid was elected editor of the Bulletin, the official organ of the association.

Resolutions of thanks were also passed for the local entertainment committees that had in charge the entertainment features of the convention program.

H. H. Fris of the El Paso Herald won the honor this year of traveling the longest distance to attend the convention. However, Mr. Fris, who was accompanied by Mrs. Fris, had to be content with taking the credit for this feat without having the honor of raising the association's flag over the convention hall.

It is the custom of the association to allow the member coming the longest distance to hoist the association's flag, but this year when it was announced that the honor belonged to Mr. Fris, it developed that Secretary Mathews had left the flag, safely packed away in moth balls, away out in Oklahoma City. Mr. Mathews' forgetfulness cost him a box of cigars, which he paid for with a smile and joined with the other members in enjoying.

CIATION AT THEIR CONVENTION IN ATLANTA, OCTOBER 10-11-12, 1917

THE NORTHCLIFFE PAPER IN U.S.

"The management of Lord Northcliffe's mill is in decidedly capable hands. There, you will find materials stocked up well in advance, every possible manufacturing contingency foreseen and met.

"It is a mill where emergencies practically never occur and where everything is operated and managed on a smooth, efficient and economical basis. The entire staff of employees at the mill are most loyal to the company, due, without doubt, to the fact that the company takes them into its confidence very much more than American mills are in the habit of doing.

"They regard their employees' interests as essential as their own, with the result that there has been developed the best possible relations between the company and its entire staff.

"The difficulties which had to be overcome to make this a successful manufacturing institution have been almost unbelievable. A large town was built in the wilderness, supplied with every modern convenience, two short railways were built, docks at two different ports, in addition to the usual mill buildings and development.

"The point of particular interest to publishers is that the mill is able, under these present severe manufacturing conditions, to manufacture paper, paying the owners a very handsome profit and still be under the mill price set by the Federal Trade Commission as fair and reasonable.

"Very difficult shipping conditions have also been met and overcome in delivering this paper into the United States, which has been done regularly and very close to schedule. No loss or damage of any paper has occurred. Publishers using the paper have received the best possible service.

"This mill is the greatest possible argument for publishers protecting their own paper supply by an interest in mills of their own."

WILLIAMS MOVES UP.

Ray Williams, who has been circulation manager for a number of prominent newspapers, is now business manager of the Beaumont (Tex.) Daily Journal. Until recently Mr. Williams was with the Burlington (Vt.) Daily News, and prior to that was associated with the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

THE END OF "BULL."

Jeremiah O'Leary's New York magazine, Bull, which was barred from the mails by the Post Office Department for disloyal statements, suspended publication on October 16. The Bull Publishing Company in a formal statement denied any intention of disloyalty.

"BIG SIX" TO GIVE BALL.

The sixty-eighth annual ball of held on Thanksgiving eve, November 28, at Sulzer's Harlem Casino, New York City. The proceeds will be devoted to the union's hospital fund.

NEW COMMERCIAL ORGAN.

The Birmingham (Ala.) Chamber of Commerce has started to publish a house organ, of which Blanks Everett will be the editor. It will be devoted to news of the organization.

The Utah Labor News, official organ of Utah organized labor, has just been incorporated at Salt Lake City with H. Klenke in charge.

MAGAZINE NOTES

Pearson's Magazine was sold on October 13 by Peter B. Olney, receiver, to A. W. Ricker, president of the Pearson Publishing Company, who bid 2 per cent, on the amount of claims against the company, estimated at from $200,000 to $250,000, and the cost of administration, about $500.

Judge Mayer of the Federal District Court confirmed the bid of Mr. Ricker.

Frank Harris, editor of the magazine, bid $2,500 for the good-will, trade-mark, and circulation list, and $400 for the office furniture. The appraisers estimated the value of the property at $2,500. Pearson's Magazine is published at 34 Union Square, New York.

Archer A. King, Inc., People's Gas Building, Chicago, has succeeded W. J. Macdonald as Western representative of Physical Culture.

The King Agency has also become Western representative of the New Century Teachers Monthly and Cook's Weekly Trio of Elgin, Ill.

C. Frederick Carrington, formerly Western advertising manager of the Continent, has joined the Western advertising staff of the Metropolitan Magazine, with offices in Chicago.

Carroll B. Merritt, advertising manager of the Scribner publications, has been appointed a member of the board of managers of the New Jersey State Reformatory for Women.

LANDER SELLS OUT.

F. D. Lander, Sr., has disposed of his interest in the Hattiesburg (Miss.) News and Herald to a stock company and will retire from the newspaper business.

N. Y. CIRCULATORS WORK ON ARMY CAMP PROBLEMS.

The New York City Circulation Managers Association held meetings last Saturday and Wednesday to discuss the handling of papers at the Army Camps. The committee on ways and means, recently appointed, is still engaged in its work, and one member has been appointed to it by Chairman McKernan in the person of Joe Mansfield of the Evening Journal.

President McKernan says newspaper delivery conditions at the camps are working themselves out gradually in spite of the many obstacles raised by the constant moving of men and delayed mail service.

CAR SHORTAGE THREATENS CANADIAN PAPER MILLS.

The Paper Trade Journal for October 18 says:

"The car situation in Canada has again become acute. In fact, the shortage is now as bad as at the worst period last winter.

"Several of the most important of the Canadian pulp and news print mills have advised their customers that they will have to shut down this week unless cars are supplied. The news print mills have all available storage piled up with news print which they cannot ship out, and unless relief comes before the end of the week, they will simply have to stop producing until cars arrive for shipping out their produce."

A WASHINGTON STATE SALE.

S. L. Moorhead, for twenty-three years editor of the Junction City (Ore.) Times, has bought the Colwitz County Advocate at Castle Rock, Washington.

GOVERNMENT IN CONTROL OF SEDITIOUS PRESS.

TRADING WITH ENEMY ACT GOES INTO EFFECT—UNLESS LICENSED FOREIGN PRESS PUBLISHES TRANSLATIONS.

President Wilson issued an executive order on October 13 by which he put into effect practically all of the great powers vested in him by the Trading with the Enemy act, one of the most drastic pieces of legislation ever passed by Congress.

To throw every possible safeguard around information which might get to the enemy, the President has created a Censorship Board to administer such regulations as he may prescribe as to the censorship of cable, telegraph and mail communications between the United States and foreign countries. This board is composed of representatives, respectively, of the Postmaster General, of the Secretary of War, of the Secretary of the Navy, of the War Trade Board, and of the Chairman of the Committee on Public Information.

The Trading with the Enemy Act provides that every paper printed in a foreign language shall furnish translations to the Postmaster General, of the matter concerning the war printed by it, unless a permit to omit doing so is granted to it. The administration of this provision is committed to the Postmaster General.

The censorship section of the Trading with the Enemy Act follows:

CENSORSHIP BOARD.

14. I hereby establish a Censorship Board, to be composed of representatives, respectively, of the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, the Postmaster General, the War Trade Board, and the Chairman of the Committee on Public Information.

15. And I hereby vest in said Censorship Board the executive administration of the rules, regulations, and proclamations from time to time established by the President under Subsection (d) of Section 3 of the Trading with the Enemy act, for the censorship of communications by mail, cable, radio, or other means of transmission passing between the United States and any foreign country from time to time specified by the President, or carried by any vessel or other means of transportation touching at any port, place or territory of the United States and bound to or from any foreign country.

16. The said Censorship Board is hereby authorized to take all such measures as may be necessary or expedient to administer the powers hereby conferred.

THE POSTMASTER GENERAL.

22. I hereby vest in the Postmaster General the executive administration of all the provisions, (except the penal provisions,) of Section 19 of the Trading with the Enemy act, relating to the printing, publishing or circulation in any foreign language of any news item, editorial, or other printed matter respecting the Government of the United States or of any nation engaged in the present war, its policies, international relations, the state or conduct of the war or any matter relating thereto, and the filing with the Postmaster at the place of publication in the form of an affidavit of a true and complete translation of the entire article containing such matter proposed to be published in such print, newspaper or publication, and the issuance of permits for the printing, publication and distribution thereof free from said restrictions.

And the Postmaster General is authorized and empowered to issue such permits upon such terms and conditions as are not inconsistent with law and to refuse, withhold or revoke the same.

23. The sum of $55,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby allotted out of the funds appropriated by the Trading With the Enemy act, to be expended by the Postmaster General in the administration of said Section 19 thereof.

24. The Postmaster General is hereby authorized to take all such measures as may be necessary or expedient to administer the powers hereby conferred.

WIFE OUT SEDITION IN 30 DAYS.

While four or five newspapers are being summoned to appear before the Post Office Department every day to show cause why the privilege of the mails should not be denied to them under the Espionage Act, officials are confident that within a comparatively short time such publications will have ceased to print seditious and treasonable matter.

"I believe that within the next thirty days," Postmaster General Burleson has predicted, it will not be necessary for the Post Office Department to take action against newspapers and periodicals publishing matter aimed at the Government's war measures.

"The number of such violations is steadily diminishing, and the publishers are fast realizing that they will not be permitted to publish seditious and treasonable matter and enjoy the benefits of the United States mails."

Mr. Burleson admitted that a large number of foreign language and Socialist papers had been refused mailing privileges—a much larger number than was generally supposed. The figures, he said, would not be made public until the department had concluded its work, if then. The law is so elastic, he declared, that all cases of seditious publications are covered and the department is enforcing all the provisions.

Considering the number of publications in America, those guilty of seditious articles were few, but all taint must be wiped out, he declared. Mr. Burleson informed the Cabinet that he had been besieged by publishers of Socialist papers through various Senators and Congressmen to permit these publications to continue.

"In each instance, however," he declared, "the department has made it plain that no political influence will be allowed to becloud a strict interpretation of the law."

Government supervision of the foreign language press began on October 16. Effective from that date all such publications not granted special licenses must file with their local postmasters before offering for circulation by mail or otherwise true translations of all articles respecting the Government of the United States or any other nation at war.

Postmaster-General Burleson has announced that more than a thousand papers have been licensed.

Printed in English in heavy type across the top of the first page of licensed German newspapers is this legend:

"Published and distributed under permit (No. —) authorized by the act of October 6, 1917, on file at the Post Office of New York, N. Y. By order of the President, H. S. Burleson, Postmaster General."

In unlicensed newspapers, and those whose applications have been filed but not yet reached by the licensing corps, appears in English this announcement over matter relating to the war:

"True translation filed with the Postmaster of New York on October 16, 1917, as required by the act of October 6, 1917."

Mr. Burleson said his department would not give out the names of such publications.

American censorship of mails, Postmaster General Burleson explained on October 16, will be limited to mail passing between the United States and certain countries to be designated by the President, and will not duplicate any phase of the elaborate censorship system already operated by the British and French Governments.

This means that mail for European neutrals will give the censors here little trouble, as virtually all channels of communication with those countries are controlled by the Allies.

Members of the new Censorship Board, authorized by the Trading With the Enemy act, were appointed on October 16 by the Post Office Department and the Committee on Public Information. Robert L. Maddox, superintendent of foreign mails, was named by the Postmaster General, and Edgar Sisson, former magazine editor and now head of the information committee's vice division, by Chairman Creel.

Pending the return of Mr. Maddox, who has been in France directing organization of the postal service for the American Expeditionary forces, Otto Praeger, second assistant postmaster general, will serve in his place.

Appointment of a representative of the War Trade Board will complete the list of censors.

Major General McIntyre has been appointed for the War Department, and Lieutenant Commander Belknap for the Navy.

PAPERS IN TROUBLE WITH POST OFFICE.

The use of the second class mails has been formally denied to the New Yorker Volks-Zeitung, official organ of German-speaking Socialists. The Volks-Zeitung publishers recently refused to run a Liberty Loan advertisement on the ground that it was propaganda assisting in the accumulation of war loans.

The Post office hearing in the case of the New York Call cited to show cause why the second class mail privileges should not be withdrawn from it, has been adjourned to October 24. The request was granted, but not until after it had been made to show distinctly and clearly in the record that the adjournment was at the request of the Call.

A mass meeting of Socialists was held in Madison Square Garden, New York, Sunday night to hear Morris Hillquit, their candidate for mayor, denounce the Government for moving to deny the mails to various Socialist newspapers, including the Call, the Volks-Zeitung and the Forward.

Mr. Hillquit declared the suppression of the Socialist newspapers would mean the repression of free speech and a free press. Such action, he declared, would be followed by the extermination of English newspapers the utterances of which might prove distasteful to the Government. He said the Post Office Department could not kill the Socialist movement any more than the Czar and the Kaiser could. Hillquit declared:

"I maintain that the proceeding is without any sanction in law and that it is in flagrant violation of the most fundamental constitutional rights of American citizenship."

No decision has been announced by the Post Office Department on the hearing of the New York Jewish Daily Forward publishers on why their publication should not be barred from the mails. The hearing was held on October 12.

Abraham Cahan, editor of the New York Jewish Daily Forward, declares that his paper will refrain hereafter from any discussion of the war news. Mr. Cahan has decided to remain silent on the war as the result of his recent visit to Washington, when he was called upon by Postmaster General Burleson to show cause why the Forward should not be suppressed for alleged seditious utterances.

Mr. Cahan said he had received no information that the Government had decided to revoke his mailing privileges.

"Hereafter," said Mr. Cahan, "we will print the news of the war, but will avoid all discussion of it. We do not agree with the interpretation that the authorities have placed upon the law. We think we have always obeyed the statute, even when we did say that capitalism had a great deal to do with the war. We believe it is not in any way interfering with any one's good American citizenship to voice an opinion, much less is it bad citizenship to criticize our allies, particularly in those points where President Wilson's policy is out of accord with their policy. But since all this is declared to be unlawful and since thinking and having your own opinion without expressing it has not yet been considered unlawful, we will just print war news without comment."

The Syracuse (N. Y.) Free Press, a Socialist publication, has been denied second-class mail privileges by Government authorities.

The Newark (Ohio) German Express has suspended publication because it was unable to operate at a profit and comply with the Federal law requiring an English translation of all matter printed.

An effort is being made to remove the ban excluding the Belington (W. Va.) Progressive, a weekly published by Fred F. Thompson, from the mails for the publication of articles criticizing war measures of the Administration.

W. P. Beard, editor of the Abbeville (S. C.) Scimitar, a weekly recently barred from the mails, was arrested on October 12 for violation of the Espionage Act.

Carl Nordstrom of the Tracy (Minn.) Herald has enlisted in the artillery.

FINE WORK BY THE I. N. S.

WINS PRAISE FOR REPORTS ON WORLD SERIES—CHANGES IN ORGANIZATION.

Many telegrams and letters of praise have been received by the International News Service as the result of the way that organization handled the World's Series baseball games. As in the past years, the I. N. S. was "on top of the play" from the time the first ball was pitched in Chicago, October 6, until the last giant batter was retired in New York October 15.

Barry Faris and Jack Veiock "toured" between New York and Chicago with the teams and filed the play by play story, as well as the leads and general comment. With W. J. ("Bill") Ryan at the key in New York, and H. W. ("Perk") Perkins pounding the brass when the play was in Chicago, the old reliable Morse code got the news of every hit, every strike and every play, and laid it down from coast to coast practically as soon as it had happened.

On the night side the series was covered with remarkable completeness. The wires carried stories each night by Arthur Struwe and Damon Runyon, together with full statistical details, the full box scores of each day's game and a composite box score as the series progressed.

Even the telephone "pony" clients served from different I. N. S. bureaus got every play almost instantaneously. All over the country I. N. S. clients were serving bulletin boards, or megaphoning the progress of the games, and for every fan that crowded into the parks there were a hundred who got their news this way. And got it almost as quick.

The New York American, using the I. N. S. leased wires, served the training camps at Mineola and Upton, and held crowds of soldiers before the bulletin boards continuously. The I. N. S. also ran a special wire to Columbus Circle, in New York City for the American's bulletin board there, and a total crowd of 150,000 for the six games resulted. This was the largest crowd ever gathered in the Circle.

The management of the International News Service Pacific Coast division has been changed.

J. W. Partridge, who has been in charge on the Pacific Coast, comes to New York to be assistant to Barry Faris, day news manager.

Perry Epstein has succeeded Mr. Partridge as manager on the coast. Before coming to the International News Service Mr. Epstein held responsible positions on the Los Angeles Herald and the San Francisco Call and is very well-known to newspaper men on the Coast.

The International News Service has opened a new bureau in San Diego, which is in charge of W. D. Berg.

Robert Prew, in charge of the Paris bureau of the International News Service, has been called to the British colors and will go to the front November 1. Mr. Prew is a British subject, but in view of the war alliance between Great Britain and the United States the International News Service has allowed him a furlough with full pay during the time that he is bearing arms. He has been the sole support of a wife, mother and sister.

E. P. Orr, who has been assistant in charge of the bureau, has been named acting manager during the military service of Mr. Prew.

H. G. Wales and Daniel Dillon will make up Mr. Orr's local staff in Paris, while the news of the Americans at the fighting front will be covered as heretofore by Newton C. Parke, who before he was sent to the front had won an international reputation as a cable and war news editor.

No announcement has been made concerning the troops to which Mr. Prew will be attached, but it is certain that his military record will be as good as his performance of his duties as a news gatherer, and this means that the British army has added one more real soldier to the force which is fighting the Hun.

F. J. Wilson, manager of the International News Service, has an arrangement under which nearly all of the employees (about 100 or more) have been able to take Liberty Bonds through an arrangement to pay $2 a week out of their salary.

DE-INKED PAPER INQUIRY.

THE INLAND AND ILLINOIS EDITORS INTERESTED IN WELSH PROCESS.

The principal subject discussed at the meetings of the Inland Daily Press and the Illinois Daily Press Association, held in Chicago on October 15 and 16, was the process of reclaiming waste news print through a de-inking process patented and perfected by John Welsh of the Green Bay Paper Company, at Green Bay, Wis.

Mr. Welsh, at the invitation of both associations, outlined his plan for de-inking paper in great particularity, assuring his hearers that the process can be made a great commercial success.

Roughly speaking the Welsh de-inking process is a plan whereby used news print is reduced to pulp and the ink rising to the surface of the pulp tanks, through special chemical action is cleared away, leaving the residue practically white—a faint bluish-white to be exact. The paper is given added whiteness by supplementing the de-inked pulp with 25 per cent, new wood pulp. The paper, in tensile strength and evenness of coating, is said to surpass the fresh news print and through the process the paper can be used again and again.

The inventor of the process estimates that the de-inked paper can be commercially produced at a cost under present day conditions not to exceed $1.25 per hundred and in normal times at a rate much lower than that.

Mr. Welsh expressed his willingness to convert his own plant into a plant for the manufacture of reclaimed news print upon some plan of mutual co-operation. His plant with its present capacity and some slight changes in equipment can produce 40 tons of reclaimed print daily.

Mr. Welsh answered a fire of questions put to him by the publishers.

Inasmuch as the Welsh plant's output just about meets the requirements of the Illinois Press Association, the plan struck the Illinois publishers as a possible panacea for their news print troubles. So strongly were they impressed with the possibilities of the plan that a committee was appointed to make an early and complete investigation of the situation and to report to the association.

The committee includes A. S. Leckie of the Joliet Herald-News, John Riley of the Rockford Star, and A. G. McIntyre of the paper committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, if the latter will serve in that capacity.

The Inland Association took no action upon Mr. Welsh's suggestions further than to share the expense of an investigating committee appointed by the Illinois Association. The committee will report to the Inland publishers at the next meeting.

De-inked paper is not entirely a new thing with the Illinois association. A. S. Leckie of the Joliet Herald-News has already used a carload of the reclaimed product with satisfaction and a special run was also made at Green Bay for D. B. Brede of the Freeport Journal.

The Illinois Daily Press Association, whose meeting took place on October 15, elected A. S. Leckie, Joliet Herald-News, president; George Shaw, Dixon Telegraph, vice-president; Fred Leroy, Streator Independent-Times, secretary; C. C. Marcus, Bloomington Pantagraph, treasurer.

The retiring president is John Sundine of the Moline Dispatch.

Among those present (most of whom also attended the meeting of the Inland Daily Press Association on the following day) were:

John Sundine, Moline Dispatch; George Shaw, Dixon Telegraph; D. B. Brede, Freeport Journal; A. S. Leckie, Joliet Herald-News; George F. Gray, Springfield Register; E. P. FOR THE WEEK ENDING OCTOBER 20, 1917

AD AGENTS MUST SEND MATS AND PLATES SOONER.

Newspapers in all parts of the country are particularly acute sufferers because of the slow-up of United States Mail service caused by the war.

So much matter necessitating immediate attention comes to newspapers by the mail that the least delay upsets their entire organizations.

Besides news matter transmitted by mail to newspapers, photographs, cuts, mats and lay-outs for the advertisements they carry go from agencies by way of postal service.

And it is in that detail that the papers make the most complaint.

Advertising agents doing business with newspapers do not seem to realize the up-set there has been in postal service due to the demands of war on railroads.

They send out their insertion orders and make-up material the way they did before the war.

The newspapers get the orders on time, but in most cases when the day for insertion comes along the cuts and mats have not arrived and they cannot fill them.

An untold amount of trouble is the result.

It will not only aid the newspapers, but it will help the agent and the advertiser if agents will work about four days ahead in sending the cuts and mats by mail.

It is absolutely impossible for newspapers to fill orders, if this is not done.

1917 MAINTAINS AD LEAD OVER 1916.

The American Newspaper Publishers Association reports that advertising in newspaper for September increased on a par with that for the same month in previous years, according to returns from 93 newspapers located in 21 cities in the United States giving the total aggregate number of agate lines of advertising, display and classified, for each month since January, 1914.

The month of August reflected the low point in the mid-year slump. This year the advertising business up to the end of August has shown a decided increase over the returns for the three previous years.

The advertising forms close on Thursday. Advertisements should be received as early in the week as possible to insure proper classification.

ADVERTISING RATES.

Advertisements in special position (not less than 28 lines in depth of column) double price.

September business shows a decrease of 2.07 per cent as compared with the returns for the same month last year.

On the other hand, however, the returns for the first nine months of 1917 showed an increase of 5.02 per cent, as compared with the corresponding period last year.

The returns for September from the Eastern cities as represented by New York, Philadelphia, and Buffalo, show an increase of 8.7 per cent as compared with the same month last year.

The returns from the Middle West as represented by Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, Cincinnati, Milwaukee, St. Louis, and Indianapolis show a decrease of 3.9 per cent as compared with September last year.

Returns from the Pacific Coast as represented by Los Angeles, San Francisco and Portland, show an increase of 5.6 per cent as compared with last year.

Returns from the Southern states as represented by Baltimore, Washington, Atlanta, New Orleans and Houston show a decrease of 31.4 per cent as compared with September last year.

The following is a statement of the total number of agate lines of advertising carried by these 93 papers during the years 1914, 1915, 1916 and the eight months ending August, 1917:

Nine months ending September, 1916,	480,236,641.
Nine months ending September, 1917,	504,370,624.
Total agate lines, 1914,	610,420,065.
Total agate lines, 1915,	601,503,293.
Total agate lines, 1916,	665,364,166.

BOUNTY BASKETS FOR THE HOME BOYS IN SERVICE.

The Detroit Journal, Toledo Blade and Newark (N. J.) Star-Eagle family of newspapers has developed many good ideas for the benefit of Uncle Sam's soldiers and sailors. The best is the "Bounty Basket," which is worked out about as follows:

On the day that the draft numbers were drawn by the Government these three newspapers conceived the plan of sending bounties to the soldiers and sailors from their three cities, no matter where they would be—in training camp, on the seas, or in the trenches in France.

The publishers felt that there were thousands of people who would want to send articles of all kinds to the boys, if opportunity were given them, and equally sure that the soldiers would be glad to receive various items that they would be unable to secure, even though they had the money.

The object of the "Bounty Basket" campaign is to give the general public an opportunity to put in these baskets any articles that may be of service—such a tobacco, pipes, cigarettes, chewing gum, playing cards, talking machine records and a thousand and one other things that make life cheerful.

Arrangements were made with department stores, candy stores, drug stores and tobacco stores to make a prominent display of these baskets and the clerks were urged to ask their customers to buy extra articles and drop them in the baskets.

Instantly the idea met with the hearty approval of the public. Hundreds of letters from the soldiers show that they have most heartily appreciated the articles sent to them. The plan has also been very popular among the store-keepers where the baskets are placed, as they have meant a considerable increase in business for them.

To date, on the three newspapers, more than 150,000 items have been collected and distributed to the various units that have left the three cities. Every unit, no matter how large or small, was sent its share of the bounties.

Another "Bounty Basket" drive has already been launched.

It is just another way in which newspapers can be of service in their community.

NOTE AND COMMENT.

Japanese advertisers are as courteous in their letters declining invitations to occupy space as they are in supplying the solicitor with cups of piping hot, green tea when he calls. The following letter was received by a New York magazine from a Tokio "importer, exporter and manufacturer of fertilizers":

"Whilst thanking for your esteemed suggestion, inviting us to occupy some space for our Advertisement in your Illustrated Magazine, we deeply regret, having to inform you that our Advertising Clerk has asked us to write that he is not disposed of availing himself of your service, just for the time being.

"We have filed, therefore, your application form for future reference, and shall be pleased indeed to revert to it, when needed in the coming days.

"Twice thanking you for your courteous invitation and regretting our present inability to meet you in this instance, we have honors to be, respectfully yours,

"Assist. Secretary."

Out of six reporter candidates for the National Army examined in Chester, Pa., only one has passed the medical test. Heart trouble was the major ailment of the rejected newspaper men.

Elwood (Ind.) newspapers have announced that they will receive no more war poems. The poetic urge is so strong among "Hoosiers" that the editors had to give up more important work to read the poetic offerings.

An idea as to the volume of inquiries handled by a big city newspaper can be gained from the announcement of the Chicago Tribune that 25,000 people called up in four hours on the day of the baseball world series opening game to determine the outcome of the first contest.

The official board of St. John's Universalist Church, Muncie, Ind., announces that newspaper advertising has increased the church attendance more than 400 per cent within a year. The church is now outlining a bigger advertising campaign.

Three hundred newspaper writers attended the world series baseball games in Chicago, a larger number than ever before represented at a similar event.

Twenty-one newspapermen, called to military service under the selective draft law, have been exempted by the appeal board of the northern Indiana conscription division on the ground that their publicity work is of greater aid to their country than their service as individual soldiers.

The New York Evening Mail on October 17 issued a 14-page fashion supplement, which contained much desirable advertising.

The Literary Digest has placed a 680-line advertisement in 358 newspapers in various parts of the United States and Canada for today.

Three of the leading Japanese dailies of Tokio are reprinting in full, or in large part, the Gerard series from the Philadelphia Public Ledger, and report that information reaching them from their readers is to the effect that it is one of the most popular series of articles ever published in Japan.

The staff members of one or two Tokio dailies have adopted the habit of calling each other "Doctor," as a token of esteem and high respect.

DO YOU GET YOUR PAPER ON TIME?

Subscribers to THE FOURTH ESTATE who do not receive their paper through the mails in the proper time are hereby advised that it is no fault of the publishers.

You are requested, therefore, to write a personal letter to the Postmaster General at Washington each and every time there is delay—so that the head of the department may realize what the conditions are—in the hope that they may be improved.

By pursuing this course you will not only help yourself but will help the publishers.

It is to be expected that the Post Office Department will welcome definite knowledge of present unsatisfactory service.

PURELY PERSONAL.

The Wichita Eagle has just issued a "Wichita Fair edition."

Paul Kienzie, who was country circulation manager of the Springfield (Ill.) News-Record, has succeeded T. L. Wood as circulation manager of that paper. Mr. Kienzie started in as carrier boy on Springfield papers.

W. B. Baker of the Charlotte (N. C.) Observer and J. V. Simms of the Charlotte News gave a dinner to their carrier boys on the evening of October 12, at which Mayor Frank McNinch delivered an address and Sidney D. Long of the Wichita (Kan.) Eagle talked on service, collections and promotions.

The affair was held in the assembly rooms of the Chamber of Commerce.

The Worcester (Mass.) Post has just commenced an automobile prize circulation campaign under the management of the William L. Betts Company, World Building, New York. The prizes are worth $5,200 and include six automobiles. The campaign will run thirteen weeks.

The William L. Betts Company, World Building, New York, is running contest campaigns for the Charlottetown (Prince Edward Island) Guardian (the second for the paper in the past year and a half and the third in the city in the past four years); the Staunton (Va.) Daily News, with two automobiles and other valuable prizes; the Selma (Ala.) Times, with two automobiles and other prizes; and the Portsmouth (N.H.) Star with three automobiles and other prizes. In each case all who do not win one of the prizes will be awarded ten per cent commission on the subscription money they collect.

So well pleased are the publishers of La Notizia, of Boston, with the subscription and advertising campaign directed for the paper by J. J. McGinny and C. H. Berrigan that they have contracted for a larger campaign next year by the same combination. Emanuel Le Presti is editor and Jerome Pettiti is treasurer of La Notizia.

The New York Evening Mail broke all its records in getting the paper to the important points of the city and suburbs during the recent World's Series baseball games and sold more copies than at any time in its history.

In less than two minutes after receiving the last play of the first game the paper was on the street with full box score and a description of the full nine innings. This game was played in Chicago.

The second game was played on Sunday, there being no issue of the Mail on that day.

The third game was played in New York on Tuesday. The last play was received at 3:58 p.m. The first press started at 3:59 and the papers were at the Brooklyn Bridge at 4:00, with full box score and description of every inning. Circulation managers T. W. Clay's force duplicated this feat in every game of the World's Series.

A big "Army Post" edition of the Vanguard, the National Council of Women Voters' official organ published in Tacoma, Wash., is being issued.

NEWSDEALERS ASK SIX CENTS FOR SUNDAY PAPERS.

At a meeting held in Cooper Union, New York, the members of the National Association of Newsdealers and Tobaccoists adopted resolutions calling upon newspaper publishers to print 6 cents instead of 5 cents as the price on Sunday papers and to reduce the price of 2 cent papers to newsdealers to at least 1½ cents.

NEW PAPER MACHINES

The Pacific Paper Mills, Ltd., of Ocean Falls, B. C., have recently received one of the largest news print machines ever made in America. Another machine is under construction and will be completed in a short time. Each of these machines is 204 inches wide; will run from 700 to 800 feet per minute and produce 70 tons per day each.

NEWSPAPER MEN WITH THE COLORS.

The service flag of the New York World, now displayed on the Pulitzer Building, tells of the seventy-five men gone from departments of the newspaper to serve their country on land and sea.

These men have entered many branches of the military service, with varying ranks, but all animated with one purpose, to serve well. The World is proud of them.

The New York Tribune "broke out" on the front of its building a service flag with thirty-seven stars. Each of these represents a man from one of its departments who is bearing arms, ashore or afloat, against Germany.

Thirty-five of the men are volunteers. The two others were drafted in the first call and waived all exemption.

A large percentage has commissions.

The Atlanta Journal's service flag shows fifty employees have gone to the war.

CADE PRESIDENT IN MONTANA.

PRESS ASSOCIATION STARTS INQUIRY INTO PAPER SITUATION IN STATE.

At the annual convention of the Montana Press Association, held at Missoula, the school of journalism of Montana state university was authorized to act as the representative of the association in conducting an inquiry into the paper pulp situation in the state. The inquiry will be made with the cooperation of the United States forest service.

The association also voted to ask the state legislature to provide funds for a further equipment of the school of journalism.

George H. Cade of the Kalispell Times was elected president and Miles City was selected as the seat of the 1918 convention.

Other officers elected were: Joseph D. Seanlan, Miles City Star, first vice-president; A. L. Stone, State University, second vice-president; Joseph Whetsone, Glentana Reporter, third vice-president; E. C. Peterson, Great Falls, secretary; and H. B. Mitchell, Great Falls Tribune, treasurer.

BURLINGTON CHANGES.

The editorial and business staff of the Burlington (Vt.) Daily News has been reorganized, following the departure of Editor D. G. Babbitt for an army training camp and the retirement of Business Manager J. B. Taylor because of ill health.

The general management of the News is now in charge of John H. Lawton of Westfield, Mass., who has been connected with daily newspapers for sixteen years. The managing editor is Carl S. Upham, late of the Boston Journal.

WOMEN SELL BONDS.

Fourteen New York newspaper women sold Liberty Loan bonds Tuesday afternoon at the booths of the Women's Liberty Loan Committee in the hotels.

This was the opening of a campaign to rouse interest in the bonds among all classes of women, from those who read the woman's page to the political experts who hunt only for suffrage news.

TIMES MEN CELEBRATE.

Members of the classified advertising department of the New York Times celebrated the attainment of seven pages of classified advertisements in a single issue of the paper last Saturday night in the Times Building. There were songs and talks by the chief of the department, Harold L. Goldman, and by B. F. Butterworth, S. W. Meek, E. S. Friend, Arnold Sanchez and C. O. Johnson, a member of the National Army, who obtained a furlough from Camp Upton, Yaphank, in time to permit his arrival toward the close of the evening.

HEADS JEWISH PAPER.

Leo G. Wiedenthal, for many years a member of the editorial staff of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, has become editor of the Cleveland Jewish Independent. A banquet was tendered Wiedenthal by newspaper men, public officials and police department executives on the occasion of his change of position.

LEMMON IN NAVY.

Theodore B. Lemmon, son of Ben S. Lemmon, city editor of the Los Angeles Tribune, is now a gunner's mate in the Navy. The lad's mother is Mrs. Ione Griffith Lemmon, formerly a well-known Kansas City newspaper woman.

WILSON NAMES WOLLEY.

Robert Wickliffe Woolley, director of publicity for the first Liberty Loan, has been nominated by President Wilson as a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

NEWSMAN NOT PRIVILEGED.

E. E. Wolfe, a reporter for the Lincoln (Neb.) Star, has been ordered by Judge T. C. Munger of the Federal Court to answer questions before the Federal grand jury as to where he got the information contained in a newspaper article written by him charging that United States District Attorney T. S. Allen had released certain men held for expressions of disloyalty without orders from the government.

The judge ruled that newspaper men are not privileged to withhold the sources of their information from the court.

FREIE ZEITUNG CONTINUES.

The Newark (N. J.) Freie Zeitung whose second class mail privilege was revoked after its publishers, Benedict and Edwin S. Prieth, and several members of the staff were arrested on charges of publishing seditious matter, has announced that the ownership has been transferred to "a number of the staff who will have exclusive control."

The announcement states that the policy of the paper will be continued as laid down by its founder.

The Washington Publishing Company has been incorporated to take over the Freie Zeitung by James C. Nolan and Hans von Hundelshausen of Newark and George Shierholz of East Orange. The capital stock is stated to be $100,000.

The Society of Weekly Newspaper & Periodical Proprietors has changed its name to the Weekly Newspaper & Periodical Proprietors' Association.

THE PHILADELPHIA BULLETIN ADVERTISING SERVICE.

During "International Window Display Week," October 8-13, a striking booklet was sent to a large list of retail stores in Philadelphia covering the various trades, such as grocers, druggists, cigar dealers, haberdashers, clothiers, etc., and also to all local Philadelphia advertisers, together with a letter regarding "National Newspapers Window Display Week."

The booklet contained a list of products advertised in the Bulletin. The suggestion was made to all of these retailers that they make window and store displays of newspaper advertised goods handled by them and it was pointed out to them that as practically every one of their customers is a reader of the Bulletin, they would naturally prefer to buy from their regular dealer goods which they saw advertised in the Bulletin.

Naturally the Bulletin played a big part in increasing the Philadelphia sales of nationally advertised products during the week.

In using the Evening Bulletin every day, national advertisers have the benefit of going into nearly every Philadelphia home, as is shown by Bulletin's sixth October circulation report to the Post Office statement—a net paid daily circulation of 363,115 copies.

MILWAUKEE PAPER BACK TO ORIGINAL PRICE.

The price of the daily Milwaukee Free Press went back to 1 cent per copy in Milwaukee and the suburbs on October 15, with the following explanation by the publishers.

"Some months ago the Free Press, in common with other newspapers of the country, was, because of the almost prohibitory price of print paper, forced to advance the street sale price of the publication to 2 cents a copy.

"Within the last week, with the supply of print paper again approaching the demand and with prices easier the publishers are enabled through the making of a favorable contract with the paper manufacturers, to offer the Free Press at the old and popular price of 1 cent.

"The Free Press gives the public the benefit of the reduced cost of print paper."

Great Britain Agrees to 3-Cent Postage Rate.

Great Britain has agreed to a modification of the postal treaty which fixed a 2 cent letter rate from the United States so as to increase it to 3 cents for practically all foreign letters now taking the 2 cent stamp. That will bring a large quantity of foreign mail into a class where the United States may collect the additional 1 cent letter tax imposed by the war revenue bill.

The 3 cent rate also will apply to the Bahamas, Canada, Cuba, Barbadoes, British Guiana, British Honduras, Dominican Republic, Dutch West Indies, Iceland, Ireland, Wales, Scotland, Newfoundland, Mexico, Newfoundland, New Zealand and Panama.

The new rate becomes effective November 2.

H. PARKER LOWELL.

Akron Adcraft Club, president of the Holy Cross Alumni Association of Northern Ohio, and Grand Knight of Akron Council, 547, Knights of Columbus.

His successor as advertising manager, H. Parker Lowell, was a member of the copy staff maintained at the B. F. Goodrich factories at Akron by the William H. Rankin Company of Chicago.

Mr. Lowell began his newspaper career on the Des Moines (Ia.) Register after being graduated from Northwestern University in 1910 and later served in the editorial departments of the Waterloo (Ia.) Courier and the Chicago Examiner and was associate editor of the Corn Belt Farmer, Waterloo, Ia. He is a member of the Sons of Veterans, Sons of the American Revolution and a Mason.

A joint arrangement between the Detroit Board of Commerce and the Detroit Ad Club will in the future permit young men under the age of twenty-eight to become members of these organizations upon payment of $10 to the Board of Commerce and $5 to the Ad Club, making the cost $15 for the first year instead of $55 under the old plan.

This offer will probably result in the formation of a Junior Ad Club in Detroit.

E. P. Perrine of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, Denver, Colo., has been elected chairman of the program committee of the Denver Advertising Club bureau, succeeding A. Paul Porter. He will direct the work of arranging a series of interesting Tuesday noon events for the season.

nyingham, Chicago, has been made advertising sales manager for Thomas E. L. Wilson Company.

Stanley Twist, who was formerly advertising manager of the Smith Loan & Truck Company, has been made advertising manager of the Redden Motor Truck Company, Inc., Chicago.

At a recent luncheon of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., James Quirk, publisher of the Photo Play Magazine, and Judge William I. Ransom, Union candidate for District Attorney of New York, were speakers.

President Arthur James called attention to the fact that the use of superlatives in motion picture advertising, especially by the representative companies of the industry, was fast being discarded and predicted that the time is not far distant when they will be discarded altogether.

As a result of the discussion on dishonesty in advertising, as well as at the request of the board of review, Victor Johnson was appointed a committee of one to confer with the members of the board of review and with the vigilance committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World with the idea of inaugurating an active campaign to stamp out dishonest advertising even to the extent of bringing criminal prosecutions when advisable under the law.

It was decided to hold a breakfast dinner on November 8, which is to be the first of the monthly breakfast dinners to be held by the association during the winter months.

A. T. Harfela, formerly with the American Woolen Company, is now connected with Charles Chipman's Sons Company, Inc., New York, as advertising manager.

James Inrie, for some time editor of Economic Advertising, published by Norris-Patterson, Ltd., Toronto, has been made advertising manager of R. S. Williams & Sons, Ltd., musical instrument house, Toronto. He is succeeded as editor of Economic Advertising by William Colgate, formerly with Gagnier Advertising Service, Toronto.

At a recent meeting of the Advertising Film Producers Association it was voted to call a special meeting in the Statler Hotel, Detroit, Mich., on October 26, 1917.

"Be individual, be persistent and let everything you undertake carry with it a goodly portion of common sense," was the message brought to the Advertising Club of Baltimore by Bert Moses of New York at last week's luncheon.

The club heard an appeal on behalf of the library fund for Camp Meade, and it was decided that members desiring to contribute to it might enroll after the luncheon, although the club refrained from taking any official action.

Ralph Gibson, who was connected with the Illinois Pure Aluminum Company, Lamont, Ill., as sales and advertising manager, has joined the mail-order advertising staff of the T. L. Olson Company, Ltd., Toronto, Ont.

At its first dinner this season the Winona (Minn.) Advertising Club heard Irving S. Paul of the Jones &

Kroeger Company discuss the building up of home trade "by cooperation between home merchants in meeting the wants of customers."

H. Tyler Kay, advertising manager of the National Radiator Company, Johnstown, Pa., has been called to the National Army and has gone to Camp Lee, Petersburg, Va.

R. E. Warden, general manager of sales, has taken the advertising management for the present.

Arnold A. Sheuerman has been elected vice president of the Hyle (Mont.) Ad Club in the place of John A. Brophy, who has entered an officers training camp. Colonel E. Marshall Taylor is the new secretary of the club, succeeding H. T. Snyder.

Another member of the Chicago Junior Advertising Association to go "up the ladder" is Henry J. Stephens, the new assistant manager of domestic advertising for the J. Rowland Kay Company of Chicago, an international advertising agency with a London branch.

Stephens was formerly with the advertising department of the Smith Motor Truck Corporation. He was educated in the Chicago schools and is now attending the Northwestern University Commerce School.

Members of the New York Advertising Club were addressed at luncheon on Tuesday by the noted William Jennings Bryan. He was in his best form with the advertisers, and kept the room in a roar before he finally got down to the business of suffrage.

"Mr. Bryan," said Llewellyn E. Pratt, chairman of the dinner, in introducing the speaker, "there are men in this room who have voted for you three times, and there are men here who have burned red fire three times in celebration of your defeat."

"Mr. Chairman," retorted Mr. Bryan, "it would be impossible to find an audience in New York that did not contain at least those last mentioned."

Mayor Mitchel was a speaker before the club on October 17, discussing issues of his campaign for reelection.

On Thursday, C. C. Martin of the National Paper and Type Company delivered a talk before the Export Division on "The Use of the House Organ in South America."

B. B. Greenburg, formerly in the advertising department of the American Tobacco Company, has been appointed advertising and service manager at the Detroit Universal exchange a newly created position for the purpose of aiding Michigan exhibitors to procure better publicity.

K. P. Drysdale, who has been in charge of the advertising for the Cadillac Motor Company for twelve years, is now director of sales promotion for the Cleveland (Ohio) Tractor Company.

The forty United States Senators and Congressmen who will soon cross the continent on a trip to the Hawaiian Islands as the guests of the Legislature of Hawaii, will be the guests of honor of the San Francisco Ad Club at its weekly luncheon on October 31.

The members have unanimously decided to make their future luncheons meatless ones. Fish will be substituted for meat.

Frank A. Kapp has been appointed advertising manager for the Mitchell Motors Company at Racine, Wis. He was formerly with the advertising department of the Willis Overland Company at Toledo. As advertising manager for the Mitchell Company, Mr. Kapp will have charge of distributing the million-dollar annual appropriation for the company's advertising, most of which is placed through the Lord & Thomas Agency in Chicago.

President Sidney S. Wilson of the Cleveland Advertising Club addressed a meeting of the Kent (Ohio) City Club, on October 12.

Bayard S. Scotland, for the last six years with the Cleveland Macaroni Company, will terminate his connection with that company as vice-president and director of sales and advertising on December 31, 1917.

Charles Edward Russell, journalist and member of the United States Commission to Russia, was the speaker at the noon meeting of the Cleveland Advertising Club on October 17.

The speakers' division of the club resumed its season's sessions on October 18.

J. R. Hamilton, who created the idea of extensively advertising the Chicago Opera Company by offering season tickets through page ads in all the Chicago newspapers, reports that early results have been extremely encouraging.

The Western Advertising Golfers' Association wound up its season last week in Chicago with a final session at the Lamour Country Club. The president's cup, donated by Paul H. Faust of Mallory, Mitchell & Faust was won by T. T. Kester. The Rankin cup, offered by William H. Rankin was won by Ray G. Maxwell.

The League of Advertising Women of New York City held its first program meeting of the season on October 17 and it was a huge success. About seventy-five men and women prominent in the advertising field attended.

T. H. Moore, associate director of the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, described the interesting work of the bureau in introducing national newspaper advertising to the manufacturer who has a salable, advertisable product.

Norwood Weaver, who is connected with the Commercial Research Division of the Curtis Publishing Company, spoke on the constructive development work done by the Curtis Publishing Company in helping magazine advertisers grow from steps to strides and showed interesting charts.

F. Wilson-Lawson, sales manager of the Welch Grape Juice Company and associate director of the United States Food Administration, related facts in regard to Uncle Sam's economy campaigns. Mr. Lawson urged that jams replace butter; that lamb and veal be eliminated entirely from diets and that all luxuries be tabooed. He said that the real economy campaigns are going to be waged by those taking into consideration war's aftermath.

Mr. Wolfe of Scott & Scott described the possibilities for advertising in the navy publications, the returns from same, as well as the possible field for army papers.

Harold P. Sorenson, an advertising selector who disappeared recently, is alleged to have left a shortage of several thousands in the accounts of the National Industrial Publishing Company, 130 North Fifth Avenue, Chicago, of which he was president. Warrants have been issued for his arrest.

B. H. Badanes has been made advertising manager of the Liggett's Roken-Hegeman Drug Stores, succeeding N. Mitchell, who is now superintendent of display. The offices of Messrs. Badanes and Mitchell are in New York.

D. Webb Brown will direct the advertising of the newly combined Republic Rubber Company of Youngstown, Ohio, and the Knight Tire & Rubber Company of Canton, Ohio. Herebefore he has had charge of the Republic Company's advertising. The combination will operate under the Republic name.

A NEBRASKA COMBINATION.

The Loup City (Neb.) Northwestern, just sold to C. F. Reushausen, will be merged with the Loup City Times.

tentative plan outlined is to bring forcibly to the attention of Congress-sional candidates, as well as to present members of Congress, the views and claims of the newspapers on the question.

Such a campaign of preparedness, it was intimated, would do a great deal to secure a more favorable bit of legislation next winter.

The publishers were explicit in their statements that the press has no desire to escape its war responsibilities, but they were equally explicit in their determination to avoid, if possible, the payment of postage that should be chucked up against the magazines, the real reason for any postal deficit.

No formal action was taken on the postage situation, other than a tacit agreement that the publishers of the Inland Association should co-operate with smaller state, and even county, associations in presenting their claim before aspiring candidates for Congress as well as before present members of that body. Meetings will be called soon in each Congressional district in the territory covered by the association and the matter will be threshed out more at length in these neighborhood gatherings of publishers.
James Schermerhorn of the Detroit Times delivered an address upon the attitude of the press toward the war.
The Detroit publisher was a boyhood friend of General "Black Jack" Pershing, and expressed the conviction that the traits of leadership evinced by Pershing as a boy would lead the American troops to glorious victory abroad.

AGAINST THE A.B.C.

the Audit Bureau of Circulations was the topic for considerable discussion not without acridity. The referendum relates to a proposed revision of the out using the entire report, it being

MANY CHILDREN OWE THEIR SUCCESS TO MRS. SEITZ.

More than sixty orphans who have found good homes owe their good fortune to Mrs. Don C. Seitz, wife of the business manager of the New York World. Mrs. Seitz has adopted fully that many children and placed them where they were given a chance to grow up in the best environment to make them successful in life.

Very few people knew of Mrs.
Seitz' hobby until the papers in the recent adoption of two little girls by Mr. and Mrs. Finley J. Shepard were filed a few days ago, revealing a little more of the history of the two waifs.

One of them, now Helen Anna
Shepard was adopted by the former Helen Gould from the household of Mrs. Seitz. The papers show that Mrs. Seitz adopted the child on February 14, 1917. Further investigation revealed that many other children, too, owe their good fortune to her.

SOLDIERS' TOBACCO FUND IN ATLANTA.

The Atlanta Journal is also seeing to it that at least some of the American soldiers "over there" have their smokes between trips to the first lines trenches. The Journal has established what is known as "The Journal's Tobacco Fund." This fund is used in the purchase of small cardboard kits containing cigarettes and tobacco for the soldiers. In each kit there are three sacks of cigarette tobacco with papers, one tin of pipe tobacco and three packages of cigarettes containing twenty each.

The subscriptions to the fund range from 25 cents upward. For each 25 cents donated a kit is sent to a soldier in France. With each kit goes a stamped and addressed postcard on which the soldier receiving it can send his thanks to the donor.

The "boxes" on the Journal were the first to donate to the fund, but since its inauguration on August 28 the fund has attracted wide attention. Subscriptions have been received from all parts of Georgia and come points in several other Southern states. The fund up to October 19 are noted to $1,130.38, which means that almost 6,000 American soldiers have been supplied with tobacco through the Atlanta Journal.

RECEPTION TO CANDIDATES.

On October 9 members of the Brooklyn Press Club tendered a reception to their associates who are running for office this fall.

Edward Riegelmann, the Democratic candidate for borough president, and E. T. O'Loughlin, independent candidate, have been active members of the club for some years past.

CONNERS MAY DIRECT ARMY STEVEDORE BRIGADE.

William J. Connors, proprietor of the Buffalo (N. Y.) Courier and Empress and noted political leader, may add to the many honors of his picturesque career the distinction of wearing the shoulder straps of a high ranked military official. He has offered his services to the War Department as the commander of three regiments of stevedores—two white and one black—who soon are to be sent to France to assist in clearing the wharves in French ports of their accumulation of freight and in unloading the munition ships.

Mr. Connors' offer has found favor among War Department officials, some of whom regard him as the best qualified man in the United States to undertake the task because of his success in this line of work along the Buffalo waterfront.

Mr. Connors has made the boast that there is not a ship afloat that he cannot unload in twenty-four hours and most of the officials are willing to take him at his word.

Francis J. Oppenheimer, who has managed several "Budget Exhibits" for the City of New York, planned and executed the "City Government Exposition," which will open on October 24 in the City College and will remain there until a permanent home has been made for it in the old College Building on East 23rd street. This "Municipal Museum" will act as a sort of academic clearing house between the citizens of the city and those who govern it.

This will be the most ambitious exhibition ever given of municipal activities, and it will embrace every phase of those problems daily confronting the city officials.

The "City Government Exposition" is under joint auspices of the Public Welfare Committee and the City Government Exhibit Committee.

NOTED DRAMATIC CRITIC OF NEW YORK TIMES DEAD.

Edward Augustus Dithmar, for more than forty years prominent in journalism in this city and the United States and for eighteen years dramatic critic of the New York Times, died in Roosevelt Hospital on October 16 following an operation at the age of sixty-three. For forty years he had been a member of the editorial staff of the Times. Mr. Dithmar was at his desk as recently as last Sunday.

It was as a dramatic critic that Mr. Dithmar was best known to the outside world. His associates, however, knew him also as a keen student of British and American politics, and a vigorous and graceful editorial writer. As a dramatic critic, he was a contemporary of the late William Winter, and the two were considered the foremost authorities in their field.

He was born May 22, 1854, the son of Henry Dithmar, who was the foreman of the composing room of the Evening Post, and began his journalistic career on that paper in 1871. He went to the New York Times in 1877, and five years later was appointed night editor. Two years afterward he became dramatic critic. In 1901 he succeeded Harold Frederic as its London correspondent. On his return here in 1902 he became the editor of the Saturday Review of Books, and in this capacity Mr. Dithmar displayed the same critical faculties that had won him fame in the dramatic OLDEST EMPLOYEE OF THE N. Y. EVENING POST DEAD.

Henry Woodruff Polhemus, for fifty-five years a member of the staff of the New York Evening Post and the oldest employee of that newspaper, died of pneumonia on October 12.

The death of Mr. Polhemus ended a journalistic service that continued through the editorships of William Cullen Bryant, Parke Godwin, John Bigelow, Carl Schurz, Edwin L. Godkin, Horace White and the present Rollo Ogden. He was in his seventieth year and would have completed his fifty-sixth year of service with the Evening Post next April.

Mr. Polhemus was born in New York, and was employed by the Post in 1862, after completing a public school education. He served in various departments, but for many years had devoted his time entirely to the real estate field and was widely known among the brokers of the Metropolis. The only interruption in his service came when he went as a drummer boy to the front with the Home Guards during the Gettysburg campaign.

EDITOR BEACH DEAD.

Colonel Austin Beach, news editor of the Pittsburgh Dispatch and for many years one of the best known newspaper men in Pennsylvania, was found dead at his home on October 16 of apoplexy. Colonel Beach, who was sixty-two years old, was one of the newspaper correspondents who accompanied the "Commonwealth Army" of "General" Coxey on its march from Massillon, Ohio, to Washington.

OTHER OBITUARY NOTES.

HERBERT W. YOUNG, for many years well known in newspaper circles, died on October 11 in the Herioton Hospital, Chicago, from heart disease. He was buried at Kenosha, Ia., on October 13.
The deceased was a brother of Edgar H. Young, formerly of the newspaper representatives firm of Payne

JOBBER'S FORMS CHANGED.

The Federal Trade Commission is revising and simplifying the forms on which jobbers are required to report the paper they have in hand.
The jobbers sent a committee to Washington to show the Trade Commission how it could save time and expense in the reporting and several of their suggestions were accepted.

The commission has issued the following explanatory statement:

"As a result of conferences and correspondence with various paper jobbers the schedule for making monthly reports has been revised somewhat in order to reduce the amount of work involved and to make the information more specific.

"Informants are requested to fill out the schedule for the month of October and to mail it to the commission on or before November 5, 1917. Three days extension of time will be granted in cases where it is absolutely necessary. Give as complete information as possible in this first respect. Thereafter the reports must be complete.

"In answering question 3, on page 4, if a physical inventory was not taken on the first of October, stocks on hand at the beginning of the month need not be reported.

"But all informants should take an inventory on November 1.

"Any further suggestions for improving the schedule would be welcomed."

POSTAL RATES AND PAPER.

It is whispered about Washington that there may be circumstances during the next session of Congress when the week-by-week figures on newsprint production and consumption compiled by the Federal Commission may come in mighty handy.

Some of the publishers who have kept most closely in touch with the legislative situation are of the opinion that the best chance that the newspaper industry has to obtain relief from irksome newsprint conditions will be attained if this paper burden can be hooked up with that other threatened House extortion—the increase in the second class rates.

The theory of the publishers who take this view is that these two evils should be held up to Congress as the twin loads under which the whole publishing industry is being crushed.

Then, if the opponents in Congress are able to make good on their promise that the second class rate increase shall receive reconsideration ere it would go into effect on July 1, 1918, there will be a chance that any relief afforded in that quarter can be coupled with some form of regulation or control that will protect publishers from profiteers who are willing to manipulate the market on the most important raw material required by publishers.

Obviously, however, quick action will be necessary in all this if publishers are not to be, as Commissioner Clover says, "plundered" because many newspapers will be called upon to renew paper contracts soon after January 1, 1918—that is before Congress has fully gotten its stride in the regular session.

Only a small proportion of publishers have contracts that will carry them through 1918 and long-term contracts that run into 1919 or 1920 represent an insignificant proportion of the total consumption.

that the newsprint situation "will be

Here is a menace that may supply just that measure of justification for

What About CHICAGO?

There is THIS about Chicago:

The Daily News, which the London Chronicle says is "by far the best evening newspaper in the world", offers advertising advantages seldom encountered in population centers.

The Daily News, with 94 per cent of its immense circulation in Chicago and its suburbs, sells more papers in this territory than any other newspaper, Daily or Sunday.

This means that very nearly every worth-while family in Chicago and suburbs reads The Daily News six days a week.

Advertisers buy more space six days a week in The Daily News than in any other Chicago newspaper.

This condition has obtained for years.

The Chicago Daily News

SEDITIONARY MATTER AGAIN DEFINED.

POSTMASTER-GENERAL AGAIN OUTLINES TO EDITORS WHAT WILL GET THEM INTO TROUBLE.

The scope of the Espionage and Trading with the Enemy acts, in so far as they affect the Postal Service, and how they are to be enforced against disloyal publications are again explained in a letter to publishers made public on October 23 by Postmaster General Burleson.

The laws were made necessary, Mr. Burleson said, by a nation-wide propaganda, intended in every possible way to interfere with the successful prosecution of the war. He added that no publisher who was at heart loyal to his country should have any apprehension of embarrassment or inconvenience from their administration.

"No one connected with the Government," said the letter, "from the President down, seeks by reason of these laws to avoid criticism, or even attack, but no publication containing matter which falls within the prohibition of the law will be permitted to circulate."

As interpreted by the Post Office Department, the acts make it unlawful for any person, firm, corporation, or association to mail, or to transport, or carry, or otherwise publish or distribute during the war any printed or other matter:

1. Advocating or urging treason, insurrection, or forcible resistance to any law of the United States.
2. Conveying false reports or false statements intended to interfere with the operation or success of the military or naval forces of the United States or to promote the success of its enemies.
3. Intended to cause insubordination, disloyalty, mutiny, or refusal of duty in the military or naval forces of the United States.
4. Intended to obstruct the recruting or enlistment service of the United States to the injury of the services of the United States.

5. The circulation or publication of which involves the violation of any of the numerous other criminal provisions of the Espionage act, but which are not of special interest to the publishers.

6. Printed in a foreign language containing any news item, editorial, or other printed matter respecting the Government of the United States, or of any nation engaged in the present war, its policies, international relations, the state or conduct of war, or any matter relating thereto, unless the publisher or distributor thereof, on or before offering the same for mailing, or in any manner distributing it to the public, has filed with the postmaster at the place of publication a true, complete translation of the article.

7. Referred to in the preceding paragraph for which publishers have received a permit to circulate, free of restrictions named therein, but which does not bear at the head thereof in the English language the fact that such a permit has been granted.

PRINGLE HOPES TO CLOSE INQUIRY

SESSION ON OCTOBER 29 MAY BE THE LAST—PAPER MAKERS' NEW PROTEST.

Commissioner Pringle, in charge of the Canadian Government news print probe, has named October 29 as the date for the next hearing, when he hopes to wind matter up.

To a deputation of paper manufacturers who appealed to the Minister of Finance to act immediately on the report of his special auditor, Geoffrey Clarkson, who said that paper could not be made to sell at 2½ cents a pound, the reply was given that an interim ruling could not be made until Commissioner Pringle had reported and that his report could not be in the hands of the Government before the first of November.

It is probable that no action will be taken before the election, which is slated for either December or January.

The manufacturers are complaining that "the Government did not hesitate to act on the plea of the newspaper publishers without the slightest attempt to secure evidence beforehand, but now that the manufacturers ask redress based on final evidence all manner of excuses are thrown in the way."

NEW KANSAS CITY DAILY.

It is reported that three Kansas City (Mo.) newspaper men will soon start a daily morning oil journal in that city.

A CANADIAN PAPER MAKER REDUCES PRICE.

A feature of the re-opening of the Canadian news print inquiry before Commissioner Pringle has been the statement submitted showing that the Ontario Paper Company of Thorold, Ont., has reduced the cost of its news print since March last by $13 per ton. One of the chief causes of the reduction was shown to be the fact that this company is making its own sulphite.

The Ontario Paper Company is now making news print at $45.32 per ton. In the first quarter of the year the cost was $38.98 per ton.

When Commissioner Pringle asked the manufacturers if they were prepared to do as the Federal Trade Commission of the United States was requesting the American manufacturers to do—supply a weekly or monthly report of production, it started a bitter criticism of the Federal Trade Commission's figures of $2.50 per 100 lbs. as a fair news print price.

G. F. Henderson K. C., figured most prominently. Commissioner Pringle said he was not going to criticize the American figure. It might be a fair rate and there was a possibility that the same rate would prevail in both countries.

EASTMAN REBUKED.

Women's societies of Chicago have notified Max Eastman, editor of the Masses, a defamed paper, that they have cancelled his engagements to lecture during the coming winter, even though Mr. Eastman had promised to be decidedly moderate and patriotic in his addresses.

POSTAL RATES GO UP ON NOVEMBER SECOND.

DEFICIENT MAIL WILL BE RETURNED IF POSSIBLE, OTHERWISE ADDRESSEE MUST PAY AMOUNT LACKING.

Increased postage rates on letters and postal cards will go into effect on November 2.

The rate on letters, except drop letters, will be 3 cents for each ounce, instead of 2 cents as now.

Drop letter postage will be 2 cents. Those are letters destined for points within the local post office jurisdiction.

Souvenir post cards will require a 2 cent stamp.

The present Government postal card bearing a 1 cent stamp must have a 1 cent stamp added.

After the date of the new ruling it will cost 3 cents to mail letters to the Bahamas—including Fortune Is. and Inagua—Canada, Cuba, Barbados, British Guiana, British Honduras, Dominican Republic, Dutch West Indies—including Aruba, Bonaire, Curacao, Saba, St. Eustatius and the Dutch part of St. Martin—England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, Leeward Islands, Mexico, Newfoundland, New Zealand, Panama and Shanghai City, China.

Postal cards and post cards—private mailing cards—for all foreign countries will be subject to the 2 cent postage unless they fulfill the conditions for "prints," in which case they will be payable for 1 cent each.

Cards which bear no more writing or typewriting than is authorized upon printed matter will be subject to the 1 cent rate as "prints."

All letters which do not bear the 3 cent stamp will be returned to the writer for an additional cent in case the sender's name is known. If the sender's name is unknown the letter will be dispatched to its destination and the addressee must pay the deficient postage.

Citizens of New York need not hope for a modification of the three-cent postal rate between Manhattan and Brooklyn until the new postal law has been amended by Congress. Postmaster Patten said on October 25.

Mr. Patten, who has been in Washington discussing the law, reached the conclusion that the provision of the act was specific, even though it did not take into consideration the peculiar political subdivisions of the Greater City.

Action may be taken by New York representatives in Congress to have the law as affecting New York City amended as soon as Congress convenes, Mr. Patten said.

The postmaster emphasized the importance of sending Christmas gifts to soldiers as soon as possible. "The limit is November 15," he said. "Parcels for the expeditionary forces mailed after that will not reach the men in time for Christmas."

FOREIGN LICENSES.

Complaints that the Post Office Department is consuming much time in issuing permits to foreign language newspapers are being made by editors who have not yet been able to obtain their licenses.

It is declared by the department that they are being granted just as rapidly as possible, however, and that every effort is being made to relieve the foreign language publications of the expense and trouble involved in filing translations of war matter with postmasters.

The first foreign language publication to be granted a permit was the Texas Wochenblatt, a weekly newspaper published in Austin, Tex.

A Federal warrant has been issued for the arrest of A. H. Steinbeck, owner of the Union (Mo.) Republican Headlight, because of an alleged disloyal editorial which appeared in his paper.

PIONEER PAPER QUILTS.

The West Bend (Wis.) Beobachter, founded in 1880 has ceased publication.

Editor Carl Quickert of the Beobachter continues editing the News.

ANOTHER GERMAN DIES.

The Helena (Mont.) Staats-Zeitung is no longer being published. Before the entry of the United States into the war, the paper had sided with the German government.

NEW TEXAS PRESS CLUB.

A press club is being organized in Fort Worth, Tex. An active interest is being taken by Garfield Crawford.

POLITICAL SUITS IN N. Y.

A suit for alleged libel has been instituted against the New York World by Charles F. Murphy, head of Tammany Hall.

Another suit against the World has been begun by John F. Hylan, the Democratic candidate for mayor, in addition to the actions already started against the same paper and the New York Globe.

NEW OWNER RAISES PRICE.

The Belzoni (Miss.) Weekly Banner has been purchased by W. L. Toney of Belzoni and will be managed by T. L. Turner, who was formerly connected with the paper. The subscription price will be raised to $2 a year on December 1.

The retiring owner of the Banner is F. R. Birdsall of Yazoo City.

NEW TRADING STAMP LAW.

After January 1, 1918, all trading stamps and similar devices used in the state of Wisconsin must be redeemed in cash only by those who issue them.

LANSTON MONOTYPE MACHINE CO.
 PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.

Gentlemen:

I take pleasure in advising you that we have decided to retain the additional Type Caster recently installed in our Casting Room, as we find that this machine, together with the other casting and six composing machines, gives us exactly the equipment we need for handling our display advertising.

We have had an exceptional opportunity for testing out the availability of this equipment for our display advertising work since the first of the year, as we have had to take care of an increase of 739,907 lines of display advertising over the first nine months of 1916; the total amount of display advertising handled in our composing room between January 1st and October 1st amounting to 7,006,943 lines.

As you probably know, The Sun is one of the first eight papers in the United States in the total volume of advertising carried, and our ability to handle the steadily growing business has been due in a large measure to the adaptability of the Monotype equipment. Its flexibility, combined with the range of type faces which it makes possible, has enabled our composing room to turn out work highly satisfactory to our advertisers.

Again thanking you for the courteous and the prompt attention given to our requirements, I am,

Cordially yours,

(Signed) PAUL PATTERSON, Business Manager.

THE SUN is not only using Monotype Type & Rule Casters to provide material for the use of its hand compositors, but is also setting all of its display advertising on the Monotype Keyboards.

The Monotype equipment comprises six Keyboards, six Composing Machines and two Type & Rule Casters.

Are You ready to consider the Monotype and Non-Distribution in your Ad-room?

We are ready to help you.

SOUTHERN PUBLISHERS AND POSTAL REFORM.

THE STORY OF THE S.N.P.A. FIGHT FOR THE McKELLAR AMENDMENT—IT WILL BE CONTINUED.

The Southern Newspaper Publishers Association's Bulletin says:

"Waldon Fawcett, writing in THE FOURTH ESTATE, in commenting on the 'bug-a-boo' of an increase in the second class rate when it suddenly bobbed up once more when the War Revenue Bill 'went to conference' certainly didn't have a Southern publisher in mind when he said 'a number of publishers received the surprise of their lives,' they having labored under the impression that the whole subject was disposed of for good and all in the Senate.

"The committees of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association, realizing that the fight had only just begun, did not pack their grips and return home to look after their own pressing matters of deep interest.

"Instead they remained on the job. Members of the association in close touch with the situation, realizing that the time had arrived for reinforcements, held a conference by telegraph and long-distance telephone, with the result that a delegation promptly went to Washington, where for several days they rendered Major Stahlman and his committee valuable assistance.

"Other members who were made aware of the situation promptly followed suggestions made them, doing some telling and effective work.

"The activities of the S.N.P.A. in its fight against the excess profit tax and increase in second class postage rates was in the opinion of many not without helpful results, although the report recommending a new zone system in lieu of the House zone tax imposes burdens which, in the opinion of members of the association, should not be placed on newspapers.

"This fight had its origin in the S.N.P.A. when a motion was made at the meeting of the executive committee at Chattanooga, February 12, 1916, by Victor Hanson of the Birmingham News that telegrams of protest be sent the 23 Southern Senators against the rider providing for 1/2 cent per pound increase in second class rates, which was then incorporated in the Post Office and Post Roads Appropriation Bills.

"G. F. Milton, editor of the Chattanooga News, who met with the committee, was requested to prepare the telegram, which follows:

"Executive committee of Southern Newspaper Publishers Association, in session here today, begs to bring before you the fact that newspapers already have great burdens placed on them by enormous increase in cost of white paper, and in all other expenses of publication. Hundreds have been forced out of business and others probably will be if additional burdens are imposed.

"We protest against increase of pound postage under bill reported by post office committee in Senate. Subscriptions are paid for largely in advance and with no anticipation of such an increase in postage. If advance is found absolutely necessary on second class postage we believe zone system to be fairer and will not impose such unjust burdens."

WORK FOR McKELLAR AMENDMENT.

"The telegram, when read in the Senate by Senator Kenneth D. McKellar, made a strong impression. On February 13 the Senate, by a vote of 37 to 34, refused to suspend its rules and permit attachment to the Post Office Appropriation bill of the amendment increasing the second class postage rate.

"It was thought then that the matter was disposed of until the finance committee of the House reported a modified zone system changing in material points the original Moon proposition.

"No sooner had the Kitchen Bill been passed by the House, carrying the modified Moon proposal, than the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association began an aggressive fight to have a zone system adopted. This was begun by the introduction in the Senate of the old Moon bill by Senator McKellar of Tennessee as an amendment to the War Revenue Bill and as a substitute for the House zone plan.

"This McKellar amendment completely wiped out the excess profits feature and provided a reasonable zone system to the end that the present rate of postage of one cent per pound should not be increased within the first zone of 300 miles.

"At the annual convention of the association in Asheville, N. C., July 9-11, after discussing the sections of the bill relating to second class postage and excess profits, the following resolution was passed and put in the form of a telegram and sent to the members, to their Senators and Representatives of their respective states and to chairmen of committees, the National Editorial Association in session in Minneapolis, and to a number of others:

"The Southern Newspaper Publishers Association, composed of 105 of the leading daily newspapers of the South, in convention assembled today, unanimously passed a resolution expressing the keenest sympathy with the Government's needs in the present extraordinary financial situation; the most cordial willingness to cooperate in raising the necessary additional revenues, and their desire to stand their just and fair proportion of the increased taxation.

"The convention, however, unanimously voiced the opinion that the proposed extra tax on the net revenues of newspapers, which does not apply to other lines of business, is unjust, unfair and discriminatory.

"In reference to the proposed increase in second class postage rates, this association believes that it has no place in a revenue bill, and the proper rate or rates should be determined by an impartial investigation.

"If, however, an increase in postage rates is absolutely necessary at this time, this association believes that the only fair and equitable basis is the zone system, the theory of which is fully outlined in Senator McKellar's amendment, with the present rate applying for the first 300 miles, which investigation has shown already affords the Government a profit, and increasing rates for longer distances, in proportion to the cost to the Government for services rendered publishers."

THE COMMITTEE.

"A committee was appointed comprising Major E. B. Stahlman of Nashville; Colonel Louis J. Wortham of Fort Worth; Robert Ewing of New Orleans, assisted by Urey Woodson of Owensboro, Ky., and Lafayette Young, Jr., of Des Moines, Ia., who at once went to Washington and took charge of the fight.

"It encountered a gigantic and seemingly powerful lobby representing the magazines and periodicals and favoring the Senate plan.

"Led by Major Stahlman of the Nashville Banner, the ground work was laid. Major Stahlman during the last week of August prepared his brief, showing conclusively, based upon reports from the Post Office Department, that the newspaper postage did not cause a deficit for the Government, but, on the contrary, a profit, but that the carrying of magazines and periodicals caused the loss and was a dead expense to the Government.

"Major Stahlman took the position that the newspapers of the country were not and have never been wards of the Government, and are asking nothing except to pay their proportionate part of the expenses of the war and a dollar for a dollar's worth of service in delivering their publications, nothing more and nothing less.

"This brief of the committee created attention in both branches of Congress, and resulted in the McKellar Amendment being adopted by the Senate committee of the whole, though it lost by six votes when before the Senate proper.

"Undaunted by this temporary defeat, Major Stahlman remained on the ground and was again reinforced by Messrs. Wortham and Woodson and later by Messrs. Robert S. Jones, Asheville (N. C.) Citizen; John A. Park, Raleigh (N. C.) Times, and Wade Harris, Charlotte (N. C.) Observer, who remained until the fight was concluded.

MAGAZINE OPPOSITION.

"The magazines and periodicals used every device to warp public opinion, even insisting that the religious press of the country would be exterminated, when, as a matter of fact, the McKellar amendment did not affect it, such being excluded from its provisions.

"In conducting the fight the committee, led by Major Stahlman, worked incessantly and indefatigably. The briefs were distributed, every editor and publisher of a daily newspaper in the United States, some 1,800 in number, was written a personal letter, and the forces of the newspaper world mobilized to secure justice and to escape the onerous and unjust rate and tax proposed.

"At the same time, the association headquarters office, in close touch with the committee, kept the membership advised through the Bulletin of the association; letters and telegrams as to the situation securing undivided or collective cooperation whenever necessary.

"The newspapers of the country owe a debt of gratitude to Major Stahlman and his committee, who have thus far waged the contest at their own expense and outlay, paying out of their own pockets for printing, postage and distribution of the briefs and the present enormous hotel bills in Washington.

"The newspapers of the country owe a particular debt to Senators Hoke Smith of Georgia; Shields and McKellar of Tennessee; Robinson of Arkansas; Bankhead and Underwood of Alabama, and Martin of Virginia, for the valiant fights made to secure justice to the newspapers. That the fight will be continued along even more vigorous lines there is no doubt.

"The newspaper publishers in the Senate as a rule opposed the McKellar Amendment, doubtless following this course rather than bring criticism upon their course.

"The Senators from big magazine publishing centers, such as Senators Wadsworth of New York; Lodge of Massachusetts, opposed the McKellar amendment, and, led by Senator Weeks of Massachusetts, favored doing nothing at this time."

NO MORE DELAY IN WAR NEWS.

HOLDING BACK OF ANTILLES REPORT BRINGS PROMISE FROM SECY DANIELS.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels has taken occasion to express his regret that when the news of the sinking of the Antilles reached the Navy Department on October 19 there had been such an unwarranted delay in making the facts public.

He explained that it had been held up in pursuance to the departmental policy of not announcing casualties until the relatives of men dying in active service could be informed. In this instance he said this delay was wholly unnecessary and that different instructions would guide his publicity advisers in the future.

The first news of the disaster came to the War Department in a brief cable message from General Pershing between 3 and 4 o'clock p. m. Secretary Baker gave directions that the message should be given to the press immediately.

Shortly thereafter the Navy Department received the longer message from Vice Admiral Sims. Secretary Daniels went immediately to the War Department for a consultation with Secretary Baker, and as a result of this it was announced that no statement concerning the news would be available until 7 o'clock.

At the time this announcement was made nothing was known as to the exact nature of the news except to a few officials of the War and Navy Departments. It was indicated that bad news had come, but officials declined to say anything further. They would not confirm the general supposition among newspaper men that a transport had been sunk or furnish even a hint as to what had happened.

Prior to 7 o'clock, however, the substance of the information received from General Pershing and Vice Admiral Sims had gotten out and the Associated Press was able to send a bulletin stating that a returning transport had been torpedoed and sunk and that 67 men were missing.

The War Department, the Navy Department and the Committee on Public Information declined to confirm this. Officials refused to go further than to say that an announcement would be made by the Committee on Public Information at 7 o'clock.

A promise was given to explain the reason for the delay when the announcement was made. Before 7 o'clock the news room of the Committee on Public Information was crowded with newspaper men. They surrounded the official of the Bureau who was to give out the news.

At exactly 7 o'clock this official opened a drawer of his desk and took from it a bundle of mimeographed copies of Vice-Admiral Sims' dispatch, which he handed to the newspaper men. These copies had been prepared some time in advance.

When the promised explanation for the delay was asked for, an official of the Committee on Public Information said:

"Under the practice and custom of the Navy Department the information as to the Antilles was not made public until fair opportunity had been given to notify the next of kin of those lost in the disaster."

AWAITING PAPER MAKERS' PROFITS DISCLOSURES.

PUBLISHERS ARE CONFIDENT THAT THE WAR REVENUE BILL WILL CAUSE CONGRESSIONAL ACTION.

BY WALDON FAWCETT.

A new ray of hope has been discerned on the Washington horizon by some of the newspaper publishers who are praying for relief from current news print prices.

The latest sign of succor is found in the disclosures that will shortly be made as to the profits of American paper manufacturers. The logic of the optimists is that once Congress has a peep at the gains of the news print producers that body will be more kindly disposed toward some plan of Federal price fixing or price regulation.

As though good were to come out of evil, it is the workings of that self-same War Revenue Law that imposes such a burden upon publishers who use the second class mails that is counted upon to shed new and convincing light upon the profits of the paper makers.

Under the corporation tax system that has been in force for several years past the United States Government has, of course, had more or less data as to the net incomes of all corporations, including the firms engaged in the manufacture and sale of print paper. However, the information heretofore on file is as nothing, on the score of completeness, with that which will now become available through the tax returns covering "excess profits," surplus, etc.

Furthermore, Uncle Sam is going to scrutinize with a rigor heretofore unknown the items of good-will, trade-mark valuation, etc., which manufacturers are wont to deduct in figuring net income. In other words, the searchlight is to be turned upon "intangibles" in order to make sure that there have been no slips in figuring profits.

Publishers who have followed closely the Federal Trade Commission investigation and the whole controversy over news print prices are confident that when we get down to brass tacks it will be revealed that the toll the paper makers have been taking from the publishing industry has been and is today much heavier than the average Congressman has any realization of.

What is going to make the disclosures especially convincing is that under the system to be followed by the Bureau of Internal Revenue in computing and collecting "excess profits" or "war profits" taxes it will be essential to figure and compare profits in the pre-war period with profits made by manufacturers since the war began.

That means that the earnings of American paper mills in the supposedly normal years of 1911, 1912 and 1913 will be set in deadly parallel against the rake off during 1916 and 1917, when news print prices have been in the clouds.

PUBLIC PROPERTY.

The publishers who are counting on the moral effect upon Congress of the tale that the tax figures will tell are not supposing, you may rest assured, that these figures will become public property and thus be brought to the attention of the national lawmakers.

It is realized full well that the information obtained by the Internal Revenue Bureau in connection with the assessment and collection of the new tax will be held confidential. At the same time it is believed that if the statistics afford evidence as important as is anticipated a way may be found for the Treasury Department to, under seal of secrecy, transmit the fact to those members of Congress or those committeemen with whom must originate any move for legislative regulations of the paper industry.

Newspaper publishers who have been on the firing line at Washington during the time that the news print dilemma has been under discussion are well aware that nothing has seemed to more deeply impress both Congressmen and officials in the executive departments than evidence as to the profits the paper making and distributing interests have been drawing down.

To be sure, only a limited amount of such evidence has thus far been available but such "exhibits" as have been available have struck home.

Readers of THE FOURTH ESTATE who have read the report on Government control and regulation of the print paper industry made by Senator Smith of Arizona from the United States Senate Committee on Printing could not fail to note the stress that was laid upon the "vast profits" of the paper companies.

The citation of the 1916 profits of the International Paper Company and the Laurentide Company of Canada was not any chance reference, but was intended by Senator Smith as perhaps his most damning evidence. Incidentally this peep at profiteering is shrewdly designed to bestir general curiosity in Congress as to whether the lavish profits of 1916 have been further increased in 1917.

Whereas the report made to the Senate in the closing days of the special session took account only of the International's phenomenal spurt in net earnings during the year 1916 it is no secret that the joint committee on printing has been going deeper into this subject and has obtained some illuminating figures with respect to the inflated surplus that the International Company has piled up since the war-time prosperity hit the industry.

PAPER COMPANIES' SURPLUS.

According to information in the possession of Senators the surplus of the International has jumped from $814,000 in the year 1908 to considerably more than $16,000,000 at the present time. It was because of this that Congressmen only smiled when President Dodge, ordered to supply news print to the Government at the price of 2½ cents for use in printing the Official Bulletin, protested that the figure named "is not a price which will give this company a profit."

It is anticipated that more fuel will be added to the flames when the Federal Trade Commission issues in the near future its full report on the book paper industry and shows in detail the swollen profits made by this class of producers.

An incriminating evidence on the profits proposition the Federal officials have recently come into possession of interesting balance sheets covering what is accounted one of the best-equipped and most modern paper mills in the country.

This shows that in the case of the concern mentioned—with a capital stock of only $300,000—the net earnings jumped from $15,000 in 1912 to $30,000 in 1913; to $58,000 in 1914, went back to $50,000 in 1915 and soared to nearly $150,000 in 1916, when, as publishers grimly appreciate, there began the "fireworks" of which one paper manufacturer wrote so gleefully.

Nor must it be forgotten that the exalted net profits that most of the paper-producing properties have lately been returning represent "velvet" after the deduction of all interest charges.

One of the experts of the Federal Trade Commission recently told the writer that in some instances paper mills have bonds outstanding in amounts in excess of the total valuation of the plants thus covered by mortgage. That is to say, the public is holding the bag.

NEWSPAPER CENSORSHIP.

From the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

Mr. Burleson might do better if he were not to attempt too much detail in prescribing the rules of censorship which the Postmaster General may enforce under the new "trading with the enemy" act.

Censorship is unpleasant, but it is necessary in the circumstances of war. Broadly stated, it generally is recognized that publication which is calculated to defeat or obstruct the purpose of the Government in carrying on the war is improper and should be prevented.

But it is not easy to formulate in advance a complete category of such improper publication, or even to illustrate definitely what may, or may not, be put in print, especially in the expression of opinion and in the course of discussion.

Generally, the American newspaper press has passed careful judgment on its publication, either of opinion or news, since the war began, and such occasion as there has been for interference from Washington has been in a very limited group of papers, where deliberate motive has at least seemed so apparent that repressive and even punitive measures have no excuse or argumentative justification.

But for the great body of printed publication in the United States, there is little need of officious restraint, and the less that is said of censorship, the better. Such discipline as shall be required for necessary restraint and regulation can be far more effectively administered as individual cases shall warrant than by the promulgation of a code which cannot be comprehensive in detail without being unjust and oppressive.

HUTCHINSON STAFF SHIFTS.

Chester Leasure, former advertising manager of the Hutchinson (Kan.) Gazette and previously publisher of several small dailies and weeklies, has become managing editor of that paper, succeeding John Schwinn, who is attending the officers training camp at Fort Sheridan, Ill.

Leo Baddely of the advertising force is now advertising manager.

Helen M. Hayes, society and general assignment editor, has become telegraph editor, succeeding Herbert Waggoner, who has enlisted in the Ambulance Corps.

Nellie May Schall from the Lawrence Gazette is filling Miss Hayes' position.

"DRYS" TO DO BIG ADVERTISING.

SEVERAL HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS TO BE SPENT IN NEWSPAPERS.

Several hundred thousand dollars in newspaper advertising will be spent within the next few months to further the abolition of all manufacture of alcoholic beverages within the United States. The money has been contributed by prominent prohibitionists.

Ten men in Philadelphia will be named as a central committee for the advertising campaign.

These ten will select the others, and the ten so named will each have the right to nominate ten additional. A committee of one thousand will thus be formed to carry on the work.

TO OBTAIN FOOD PLEDGES.

Samuel G. McClure, publisher of the Youngstown (Ohio) Telegram, has been appointed chairman of a committee to obtain householders' pledges of support to the state food conservation movement.

TO REPRESENT OHIO.

George F. Burba, editorial writer on the Columbus (Ohio) Dispatch, was one of Ohio's representatives at the national testimonial dinner to Samuel Gompers in New York on October 17.

E. K. Jenkins has purchased the Medora (N. D.) Herald from L. G. Warner.

THE VALUE OF NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING SPACE.

A NATIONAL ADVERTISER TELLS WHAT EIGHTY-NINE MILLION READING POWER REALLY MEANS.

"I do not know any better way for the advertiser and the seller of a reputable article to get to the man on the piazza or in his back office than to go to him with the thing that he takes to his piazza or his back office, that represents the human interest of his own town, and that is a newspaper."

"I think that is a strong argument in favor of the newspaper.

"There is no newspaper in the world that has a circulation maintained that has not got a reason for that circulation. It is the reason that makes the paper successful."

This is what Nat Olds, sales and advertising director of Julius Kayser & Co., told the members of the advertising staff of the New York Times at their luncheon meeting last Saturday in advising them on the value of newspaper space and how to sell it. And he added:

"I do not have to tell you men that I have always been, and still am a believer in newspapers.

"I believe that the newspaper is today the legitimate advertising medium for commodities that are worth advertising and the reason that I use newspapers is not because salesmen tell me to. They helped me a good deal, but I had to get a better reason.

"How was it going to profit me and my concern to use the newspaper? I scratched the surface and looked underneath.

"I did not know until I began to learn by facts and figures. I began to see that the newspapers today have a power that is astounding.

"In this country, the United States of America, there are 11,035 towns; in each one of them there are one or more newspapers.

"There are in the United States also towns, from 1,000 population up to New York—five or six millions—and they number 5,043, which leaves newspapers published in towns under 1,000—5992.

"In those 11,035 towns there are published, daily or weekly, 23,367 newspapers.

"The dailies number 2,514 and the country papers and weeklies, 20,000.

"The circulation of the dailies is 28,436,000 and the circulation of the weeklies is 45,000,000, which makes a total of 73,436,000 circulation.

"Add 570 Sunday papers—16,446,000—and you get a grand total that is a little over 89,000,000 circulation.

"This is 89,000,000 human beings with human wants, human desires, that are reading these papers to get those human wants and human desires satisfied.

"That is almost one paper—more than one paper—to every man and woman in the United States.

"There are 1,054 newspaper published in New York alone—but just consider 89,000,000 human beings all wanting something.

"They got the newspapers to satisfy their needs. My experience has been that when I do business with a merchant I can do business a great deal better with him if I can get inside his front page and sit on his plaza with him or in his back office and talk business with him there.

"If I can know how he thinks; know his relations with his fellow townsmen, I can talk his own language.

"I think a newspaper makes a mistake in quoting figures alone. I say to an advertiser 357,000 and he doesn't know what I am talking about.

"Three hundred and fifty-seven thousand dollars would mean something.

"Suppose I said 357,000 women. A man thinks of a suffrage parade or a great demonstration—some women or group of women he knows. I have often thought about that electric sign of the Times. It says 357,000. Well, I thought if you put under that 'people' you would have a better advertisement than you have now.

"I think if you inject the thought that the Times is asked for and demanded by 357,000 people who are going to demand some human want there would be more appeal. We do business for profit; the woman who reads the Times reads it for profit. She likes it better than some other paper. Salesmanship, as I said, is dealing profitably with other people and the minute you leave the people out—the human interests or the human demands, you lose your contact point and the current gets short-circuited.

"I think that mass business is big stuff. People like to think of enormous masses. Eighty-nine million people buy newspapers—what a force that is.

"I read in some magazine not long ago that in 1916 newspapers in the twelve largest American cities carried 424,000,000 lines of advertising. That does not seem very illuminating, but I analyzed it and found it meant this:

"If that space could be cut out in column width and pasted together, it would reach from where we are sitting today in Yokohama, via San Francisco. I think if you can make a picture in a man's mind you have him thinking."

AD MEN IN ROCHESTER.

The meeting of the Advertising Affiliation, composed of the ad clubs of Rochester, N. Y., Buffalo, N. Y., Detroit, Cleveland and Canton, Ohio, is in session at Rochester at the time of going to press.

BANQUET OPENS SEASON.

The Chicago Press Writers Club will open its season tomorrow with a dinner.

EASTMAN WOULD BE GOOD.

Max Eastman, editor of the New York Socialist magazine, the Masses, recently barred from the mails, has applied to the Postmaster General for the restoration of second class privileges, adding that the editors will be "perfectly willing to abide by the regulations recently laid down by Postmaster General Burleson in a letter to President Wilson." A new issue of the magazine is sent with the application, and a statement given out by Mr. Eastman says publication will be continued until the courts decide whether exclusion from the mails bars distributing agencies from handling it.

Eastman's letter to the Postmaster General promises that he will refrain from publishing any matter detrimental to the interests of the United States in its prosecution of the war, but says the magazine will reserve the right of criticism as far as it does not give aid to the enemy, and that it will discuss the demand for peace with freedom of seas, peoples and markets, world union, and disarmament.

PALMER GETS APPOINTMENT.

A. Mitchell Palmer, publisher of the Stroudsburg (Pa.) Times-Democrat and former Representative in Congress, has been appointed Government alien property custodian, under the Trading with the Enemy Act.

He will act as trustee for all enemy property within the United States and issue licenses exempting enemy concerns from his supervision. He may require the transfer to himself of any property held for any debt owed to an enemy or an enemy ally, and any person holding such property or owing such money may transfer the property or pay the money to the custodian with his consent.

The alien property custodian will hold such property or money until the end of the war, and then deal with it as Congress may direct.

SPECIAL EQUIPMENT EDITION.

The publishers of the Decatur (Ill.) Daily Review printed a special 40 page number on October 21 to introduce to its readers and advertisers the up-to-date features of the Review's composing room, prompted by the recent edition of two Ludlow Typographs. The edition was all slugset—not a line of foundry type was used.

"We find our advertisers much interested in anything we do that tends to make better advertising," B. C. Whitesitt, the Review's advertising manager, tells THE FOURTH ESTATE.

NO McKITTRICK SUIT.

The libel suit brought by James McKittrick of New York against his father, George McKittrick, for $10,000 damages has been dismissed for non-prosecution.

George McKittrick is publisher of McKittrick's Directory of Advertisers and his son was at one time connected with his directory business. The suit was the result of a business disagreement.

THE A.A.A.A. PLANS.

The Association of American Advertising Agents has not yet opened its New York central office, but Executive Secretary James O'Shaughnessy of Chicago is expected here next week to take up his work. It has not been announced yet where the office will be located.

BUSINESS TROUBLE.

The Springfield (Mass.) Homestead Newspaper Company publisher of the Homestead, a semi-weekly, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the Federal Court here on October 20 showing assets of $18,679, and liabilities of $19,067.

CORRECTION FROM N. Y. CALL.

EDITOR THE FOURTH ESTATE.

SIR: In your issue of October 20 you carry a news item to the effect that the hearing in the case of the New York Call, cited by the Post Office Department to show reason why it should not lose its mailing privileges, had been adjourned until October 24. This is a mistake.

You may be interested in the following brief resume of the facts:

On Monday, October 8, the Call received a citation, dated October 2, citing us to appear October 9 at Washington. This notice was delayed in the New York Post Office for five days. We wired Third Assistant Postmaster General Dockery and he postponed the hearing to October 15.

On October 12 we published our reply to the Post Office and the following day, October 13, we received a telegram from the Post Office authorities stating we would be given a bill of particulars at the hearing October 15.

The next night, Sunday, October 14, 35,000 people tried to get into Madison Square Garden to protest against what they believed was an attempt to suppress their paper.

At the hearing in Washington October 15 we were given seven days from the receipt of a transcript by us of the proceedings in which to reply. We received this transcript last Friday, October 19, and our reply will be ready and in Washington on October 26.

We are publishing daily a very interesting exhibit of the articles and pictures which the Post Office Department takes exception to.

RAYMOND WILCOX,
Business Manager, of the New York Call.

POST OFFICE STATEMENT ON THE N. Y. CALL.

Officials of the Post Office Department were indignant on October 25 over a charge by the New York Call that a decision in the case brought against it by the Government, on which decision rests the suppression of the paper, was being held up until after the mayoralty election in New York.

When told that the Call had made this charge, the department made the following statement:

"The New York Call, which was recently cited by the Post Office Department to show cause on October 16 why the second class mailing privilege should not be revoked on account of the publication in it of alleged non-mailable matter, under the espionage act, published on Tuesday a statement to the effect that for political reasons the Post Office Department was deferring final action in the case until after the mayoralty election in New York City.

"Final action in this case by the Post Office Department has not been possible for the reason that at the hearing the attorney for the Call applied for and received permission for time within which to file an answer and brief in the case. Up to this time the Call has not filed these papers, which are expected to be received in the next few days."

SECRET SERVICE BY NEWSPAPER.

AMERICAN REPORTERS OUT- WITTED BEST BRAINS OF GERMAN EMPIRE.

How "just a plain everyday garden variety of American newspaper reporters was able to outwit the best brains of the entire foreign service of the German Empire" in obtaining facts concerning German plotting in the United States before this nation's entry into the war, was told by John R. Rathom, editor of the Providence (R. I.) Journal to the members of the Philadelphia Association of Credit Men on October 23.

Some of the instances of the secret service work done by members of the Providence Journal staff, as related by Mr. Rathom, follow:

"At the beginning of the war we were fortunate in having in the Providence Journal two sets of wireless apparatus. From the day that war was declared in Europe we had ten men, working in relays of twos, who took and copied every wireless message that went to Germany from the Sayville and Tuckerton wireless stations. We got more material than can ever be used.

"The Germans used three codes, all of which were very difficult. One of them we have never been able to decipher. The other two we worked out after an effort of several months. After we had been collecting these messages for a few months we presented what we had to President Wilson and gave him certain facts about the wireless situation.

"In a number of the messages we caught there was a reference to the death of 'Little Emily.' Each time she died she was buried in a different place and different relatives attended the funeral. I told the President that I doubted if little Emily could die eight times in two weeks, and he said he did too.

"Then we began a search and made careful investigations from the Atlantic to the Pacific. But it was essential to get on the inside. We were fortunate in having a representative in the German Embassy in Washington. He was one of our reporters. He had been there seventeen months.

"In other cities we had our men in the consular branches of the German and Austrian Governments.

"Then Dr. Albert came over with a $40,000,000 slush fund. He was going to bring this country to the side of Germany. When he arrived in New York he discovered that Count von Bernstorff was in the Adirondacks. He at once wrote the Count a letter. Our man in the embassy opened it.

"We then went to Dr. Albert just to talk to him. He spent an hour trying to persuade us that he was really Dr. Albert and gave us the basis of much of our material which we used in the future disclosures. He had $4,000,000 in cash with him.

"When Bernstorff returned to the embassy on the following Tuesday he opened the letter which had been opened by our embassy man the Sunday before and sealed up again. He never knew what had happened until he sailed for Halifax.

"In July, 1915, one of our men brought in a copy of a conversation sent by Ambassador Dumba to Count Bernstorff saying that Mr. Bryan had told him that the President didn't mean what he was saying and to go ahead. Mr. Bryan has never denied this, although he has assailed the Providence Journal."

SORORITY MEETING.

A conference of Sorority editors was held in Chicago on October 24, 25 and 26.

PROVISIONS FOR REPORTERS AT CAMPS.

Commanding generals of nine of the National Army camps have telegraphed the War Department that they can accommodate newspaper correspondents in camp.

These posts are Camps Travis, Lee, Pike, Dodge, Taylor, Jackson, Grant, Sherman, Devens, and Upton.

Quarters will be provided for correspondents at Camp Gordon, but they will be admitted to officers' mess only if all news sent out is censored.

Camp Dix offers to turn over some farm houses when barrack construction is finished.

Camp Meade will have some farm buildings available after November 1.

Camp Lewis has made no provision for correspondents.

Camp Funston offers a dormitory without mess when space becomes available.

Camp Custer will have space when the cantonment is completed and transfers effected.

Camp Upton will have room in barracks.

PUBLISHERS FALL OUT.

Edward Doty of Tuscaloosa, president of the Alabama Press Association, one of the best known newspaper men in the South, is not expected to survive an alleged attack, which he says was made on him by fellow publishers of the Tuscaloosa News.

Three prominent Alabamians are in jail on charges. The quarrel followed an argument over the control of the newspaper, so it is said.

ON TRADE COMMISSION.

Ernest N. Judd, formerly of the Columbus (Ohio) State Journal business staff, has been appointed a special representative of the Federal Trade Commission and assigned to duty in connection with the coal situation in Ohio and Indiana.

FRENCH NEWSPAPER'S SALE SCANDAL UP AGAIN.

The arrest on October 25 in Paris of Pierre Lenoir and William Desouches, charged with trading with the enemy, has again brought scandal to the fore in the French newspapers.

According to newspapers, the money received by the men amounted to $2,000,000, and it came from Switzerland in such a manner that the customs authorities could not examine it. It is asserted $1,800,000 was used to purchase the Journal from its original proprietor, Henry Letellier, and $200,000 was kept by Lenoir as his commission.

The newspapers also say that Lenoir held a position in the censor's department dealing with foreign telegrams, which enabled him to communicate with Switzerland without restriction, and that he frequently went to Switzerland for week-ends, sending word to his chief that he was ill and unable to report for duty.

EMPLOYEES' INSURANCE AND NEW AD MANAGER.

Every employee of the Brooklyn (N. Y.) Standard Union has been insured by the publishers for a total amounting approximately to a quarter of a million dollars without cost of any description to the employee, under a plan of what is known as group insurance.

William F. Reynolds has been appointed advertising manager of the Standard-Union.

COVERED CHURCH COUNCIL.

T. T. Frankenburg, a newspaper man, was responsible for the publicity for the Council of Congregational Churches recently held in Columbus, Ohio, covering both the advance stories of the meeting and furnishing reports to the newspapers while the convention was in progress.

THE ORGANIZATION OF A DAILY NEWSPAPER.

ARTICLE XV

COMPLETING THE COST ACCOUNTING—FINDING OUT EXACTLY WHAT EACH INCH OF AD SPACE COSTS.

BY EDMUND WALKER.
Herald Building, Chicago.

In each mechanical department we now have daily time sheets, as already described and these having been passed by the foreman are turned over to the accounting department to form the basis of our cost calculations and also to permit the calculation of the weekly pay roll.

Each column in the separate time sheets is added and each employee's account is posted from these sheets. The sheets used for this purpose are divided into six columns—one column for each month.

Each column is then sub-divided into three parts—the first will show the total number of non-productive hours each day of the month; the second the total number of productive hours; and the third will be ruled to record the weekly payment made.

A separate sheet is now prepared, which will show in total the number of productive and non-productive hours in each of the mechanical departments. The individual employees' record does not appear on this recapitulation statement. This sheet will at the close of the month when added up tell us that 774.7 productive hours have been spent in the hand composing room and that 648.7 productive hours have been spent in the machine composing room and so on for the press and stereo rooms.

We now wish to know the cost of one productive hour and if we could eliminate the question of overhead expenses it would be arrived at by dividing the total number of hours into the total of that particular department's expenses for the month.

However, each of these productive departments must bear its pro rata share of the overhead. This is achieved by setting out the monthly "Profit & Loss Account" on a special prepared form, which will display all the non-productive departments—first in columns, one along side of the other across the sheet and then the productive departments.

The total of the non-productive departments will then be added and spread over the productive departments each productive department being "burdened" with its pro rata amount of the on-cost expense.

We will see then that whereas the direct departmental expenses of the hand composing room amounted to $2400 last month—the amount now charged to this department is $2700, making a total of $5100 into which figure we will divide the number of hours of time spent by the employees in that department to ascertain the cost of one pay roll hour—and the number of productive hours to ascertain the cost of one productive hour.

Having obtained this figure, we will carry out the same operation in each of the other mechanical departments—with the result that we now know the cost of one productive hour in the hand composing room, the machine composing room and in the press and stereo rooms.

The entire principle of newspaper costing should now be considered and the best method of describing the process will be to take an imaginary case and work it out.

Here is the calculation:

Total expenses this month	$10,000.00
Deduct circulation revenue	2,000.00
Deduct sundry revenue, discounts, etc.	5.00
	$7,995.00
Deduct:
774.9 hours hand composition @ $3.75	2,885.96
1,429.1 hours machine composition @ $2.64	3,772.82
	$1,986.22
No. of inches run, 24,750.
Cost of 1 inch composition	.240 cents
Cost of 1 inch space	.078 cents
Total cost	.318 cents

From this we see that our average cost of one inch of advertising space was .318 cents, and we therefore know that we cannot afford to sell any advertising at less than this figure.

You will say that we are not yet at the point where we can tell which class of advertising should be sold higher than the present rate—these are average figures.

Suppose we select the display advertisement of Marshall Field & Co., as an example. The operation will be as follows:

The composing rooms will be instructed to keep a record of the time spent on the setting and preparing of this particular copy. The time sheets will be marked by it accordingly. We will know exactly how many hours it required to set that particular copy.

It is now simple to calculate the cost of producing that advertisement, because we already know the cost of one pay roll hour in each department from the large recapitulation sheet—thus we will be able to go to Marshall Field's with an individual cost sheet dealing with his advertisement only and demonstrate how it cost us more to produce this particular copy than the amount paid.

The advertising department can now induce the advertisers to use machine composition work rather than hand, which costs more. It will know month by month exactly what ratio exists between the machine and hand production.

Next week we will take up the question of ascertaining the cost of any single issue of the paper—the profit or loss made "yesterday."

You will note that any costing system which is not based on an efficient accounting system is worse than useless. Some so called "cost experts" merely deal with a string of forms and rulings—and ignore the most vital point of all—the fundamental basis of costing which is the actual financial record.

REPORTER KEEPS MUM.

Robert E. Holloway, Jefferson City (Mo.) correspondent for the St. Louis Republic, has been remanded to jail by the Missouri Supreme Court for contempt of the grand jury.

Holloway printed a story in the Republic to the effect that the grand jury had voted seven indictments against John W. Scott, dismissed commissioner for the permanent seat of government, in connection with the state coal scandal. In all eight indictments have been returned against Scott, but at the time the article was printed the jury had not made any return.

When Holloway was called before the jury he refused to tell where he obtained his information. Thereupon he was remanded to jail for such period as he refused to make satisfactory answers to the queries of the grand jury, or until such time as the court adjourns for the November 21 term.

TO FILL WAR VACANCIES.

The American Association of Newspaper Managers announces from its Chicago headquarters that it has established a bureau of employment for the use of the members.

The plan is to keep a list of available men on file, with records, etc., for the use of the members of the association.

The department expects to be of assistance in furnishing reliable men to fill the numerous vacancies created by the present unusual conditions.

AUTOISTS, ATTENTION!

The New York Globe will award $100 in cash prizes to those of its readers who offer the best suggestions on how to employ economy in the use of gasoline for automobiles.

"Our government," says the Globe, "will doubtless require vast quantities of gasoline for war purposes, but it would be a calamity to place serious restrictions on the use of automobiles if the necessary economy can be effected by any other means."

DUBUQUE CHANGES.

Frank R. Morrissey is now the editor of the Dubuque (Ia.) Telegraph-Herald.

W. E. Wendt has become managing editor of the Herald succeeding J. H. Lowry.

J. E. Rock has become court reporter, succeeding Payson Berg.

Robert Stribley now has C. A. Wilhelm's old place as police reporter.

Miss Vivian Brandt is taking the place of Miss Nana Lowry as society reporter.

A CAMP SPECIAL.

The Columbus (Ohio) Athletic Club Journal has made its debut in the weekly field with a special "Camp Sherman Issue," which consisted of 100 pages bound in a gray paper cover, on which is printed the photo of Major General Glenn, commandant at the camp.

TRADE AND CLASS PRESS.

The New York Business Publishers Association on October 22, at a meeting in the offices of the United Publishers Corporation, elected officers as follows for the ensuing year:

President, Henry Lee of the Simmons-Boardman Publishing Company; vice-president, Roger Allen of the American Hatter; treasurer, Chester W. Dibble of the McGraw-Hill Publishing Company; secretary, Robert H. McCready of Playthings.

The above four officers and the following make up the executive committee: H. E. Cleland of the McGraw-Hill Publishing Company; David Beechcroft of the Class Publishing Company; and George H. Griffiths of Hardware Age.

The name of the Grand Rapids (Mich.) Western Undertaker, issued by the Periodical Publishing Company, has been changed to the American Funeral Director.

Candy and Ice Cream, published by the Modern Confectioner Company, Chicago, has been admitted to membership in the Associated Business Papers, Inc.

Kirk Taylor has been made Western manager of Printers' Ink and will have charge of the Chicago office as well as of the Detroit office, succeeding J. C. Ashley, who resigned as Chicago manager to enter into business for himself.

TRADE PAPERS AND SECOND CLASS POSTAGE.

EDITOR THE FOURTH ESTATE:

SIR: I want to express my personal appreciation of the intelligent and fair-minded way in which THE FOURTH ESTATE has handled the controversy about second class postage rates.

The publishers of trade and technical papers are particularly gratified at the refusal of THE FOURTH ESTATE to lend its columns to the propaganda of certain short sighted publishers who thought they had discovered the solution by attempting to shift the entire burden upon publications other than theirs.

Eventually these publishers will wake up to the fact that we are all in the same boat, with interests that are interdependent, and that we cannot afford, even from a selfish standpoint, to divide our forces.

Moreover, we have a still greater incentive in standing firmly for what is right and just at the hands of Congress. It is wholly beside the question for one set of publishers to attempt to tell Congress how they may burden another class of publishers.

So I say that it is a source of real gratification that THE FOURTH ESTATE has held out consistently for a fair and just consideration of this whole matter in the best interests of the entire publishing industry. It is quite evident that such a consideration cannot be undertaken as long as the question of postal rates is made a football of politics and is used as a weapon by disgruntled Congressmen to make publishers stand up, lay down, roll over and jump through.

Gentlemen:-

The automatic press blankets, which we have recently installed on our presses, are giving excellent satisfaction. We can already see a saving in press clothing of at least $2,000 per year.

We have also noted increased efficiency in our Press Room by fewer breaks, less print waste, better printing, increased press product and valuable time saved from the reduced number of press interruptions.

Yours very truly,

GERARD SERIES IN KANSAS CITY.

ANOTHER REPLY TO THE POST
FROM PUBLIC LEDGER SYNDICATE ATTORNEY.

EDITOR THE FOURTH ESTATE.

SIR: The Public Ledger would never have thought of publishing any article regarding its controversy with the Kansas City Post had it not been for the act of the Post in sending to your valued publication the article attacking the Ledger—an article which was so untruthful and misleading in character that the Ledger felt a reply was demanded.

Mr. Lowe's suggestion, therefore, that such issues are "ordinarily in the West" determined in courts and not newspapers is one which should be directed to his client, who originated the controversy in the newspapers.

I do not intend to prolong this discussion, but I desire to say very emphatically that the statements that the Kansas City Post honestly misunderstood the offer of the Ledger, which led to their counter-offer, accepted on August 13, is so wholly without foundation that it can only be characterized as an untruth.

The original offer to the Post, contained in a night letter dated August 6, was that the Gerard story was offered to the Post for release, "beginning September after series completed by Public Ledger."

It was this offer which led to the further interchange of telegrams, resulting finally in a contract.

I am not concerned about what "any enterprising publisher" would have done upon receiving such an offer, or with the extent of the circulation of the St. Louis Post Dispatch.

The facts are as stated above. I have never said that the giving of the bond was required by the Court at the request of the Public Ledger Company; what I did say, and now repeat, was that the amount of the bond was fixed by the court over the protest of the Kansas City Post, at $15,000 instead of the small sum the Post was willing to give.

Attorney for Philadelphia Public Ledger Syndicate.

Dr. Henry J. Waters, for nine years president of the Kansas State Agricultural College and formerly dean of the department of agriculture of Missouri University, is to become editor of the Weekly Kansas City Star.

Doctor Waters enjoys a national reputation in all matters pertaining to agriculture. He was successively assistant secretary of the Missouri state board of agriculture, investigator of the Missouri agriculture experiment station, professor of agriculture in Pennsylvania State College, dean of the college of agriculture and director of experiment station of the University of Missouri and president of the Kansas State Agricultural College.

In 1914, Doctor Waters was chosen by the United States Government as special commissioner to the Philippine Islands, where he investigated problems of agriculture and education. Lately, Doctor Waters has been placed on the Government board of food administration and has been made "wheat executive" of the Hoover board.

Dr. Waters will assume active charge of the Weekly Kansas City Star as soon as his successor as president of the Kansas State Agricultural College has been selected.

CREDITS LIBERTY LOAN SUCCESS TO AD MEN.

George W. Perkins attributed the success of the Liberty Loan to the splendid co-operation of the advertising men of the nation in an address on "Why Advertise," which he delivered Thursday at the luncheon of the New York Advertising Club.

"Without co-operation," he said, "where would the nation and the world be today? It was by the highest development of co-operation that Germany stands where she is today, and that is why it is taking half the civilized world to whip her. Furthermore, it has been by the valiant co-operation of you advertising men from coast to coast that this second Liberty Loan is being put over."

FIRST REPORT OF TRADE BOARD.

MORE NEWS PRINT MADE IN SEPTEMBER—IMPORTANT FIGURES GIVEN OUT.

Weekly reports for the last two weeks of September were obtained from 36 United States news print companies operating more than 56 mills.

The reports indicate that shipments increased more rapidly than production. The total stocks reported by these 36 companies on September 30, 1917, amounted to about 50,000 tons. This figure does not include the stocks of two companies not reporting and probably some stocks held at delivery points.

The total production of the companies reporting for the 9 months ending September 30, 1917, as compared with the corresponding period of last year, was:

9 months, 1917...950,847 tons
9 months, 1916...923,197 tons

Seventeen companies show an increased production this year over last year and 19 companies show a decrease due in some cases to increased production of other grades. One or two additional companies not reporting have gone off of news print entirely this year, but the figures show a net gain for the whole United States of more than 10,000 tons.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.

Imports of news print paper for the first eight months of 1917, which were almost entirely from Canada, show a gain over the corresponding figures for the preceding year, while exports show a decline.

IMPORTS.

4 months, 1917...358,160 tons
4 months, 1916...319,091 tons

EXPORTS.

8 months, 1917...49,456 tons
8 months, 1916...53,802 tons

Exports to the United Kingdom in particular fell off from 3,150 tons for the first eight months of 1916 to 734 tons for the corresponding period of this year.

Exports to Mexico, on the other hand, increased from 1,531 tons to 4,934 tons.

NEWS PRINT PRICES.

Available information indicates that most of the contract tonnage of roll news is being delivered at prices from $3 to $3.25 per 100 lbs. f. o. b. mill.

Reports from the 36 companies showed deliveries on old contracts at less than $2 mill and others were reported at $4 or more.

The 36 companies reported only nine new contracts for roll news print aggregating 3,475 tons. The prices ranged from $2.50 f. o. b. mill to $3.60, the average being $3.13.

The condition of the news print market is best shown by the fact that the current prices of both roll and sheet news were not far from the prevailing contract prices. Roll news in car lots was quoted at from $3.25 to $3.80 by a number of mills and sheet news in car lots sold as low as $3.25 less 3 per cent.

PULP PRICES.

During the month of September sulphite pulp was shipped on contract at prices ranging from $36.50 per ton f. o. b. mill low to $95.27 per ton f. o. b. mill high. The current prices reported were $44.25 f. o. b. mill low and $100 per ton f. o. b. mill high.

Ground wood was shipped in contract during the month at $24.38 per ton low f. o. b. mill low to $50 per ton high, while current prices ranged from $38 per ton low to $50 per ton high.

The figures on stocks and production given above cover not only standard news print but also similar grades, such as special news, novel news, hanging, poster, lining, tablet, etc.

DERNBURG — PAVENSTADT MATTERS EXPLAINED.

Bernard H. Ridder, son of the late Herman Ridder, who with his brother Victor is now publishing the New York Staats-Zeitung, has made the following statement (on Adolph Pavenstadt's testimony before the state attorney-general that Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, former German colonial secretary, paid $15,000 to his father to get the Staats-Zeitung out of financial difficulties and that $5,000 of Pavenstadt's own money was also devoted to the relief of the newspaper):

"In 1914 my father, the late Herman Ridder, borrowed money wherever he could procure it in a vain effort to pull through to success the International Typesetting Machine Company. He visited many banks among them the Guaranty Trust Company, the Metropolitan Bank and G. Amsinck & Co. At the latter institution he negotiated a loan of $20,000, making his notes payable to Amsinck & Co. and offering as security stock of the Staats-Zeitung Company.

"It now transpires that Pavenstadt, instead of lending my father the money of Amsinck & Co., went to Dr. Dernburg, interested him in the deal and from him procured $15,000, adding $5,000 of his own money to bring the sum up to the full quota. My father never knew this to his dying day, and we boys, who took hold of father's badly tangled affairs in an effort to straighten them out and pay off his obligations dollar for dollar, did not learn of it until Pavenstadt came to the Staats office one day last week and told us of his testimony before Attorney-General Lewis.

"The moment we heard of this phase of the case we at once got in touch with the Department of Justice and with the post office authorities. We frankly told them of our surprise to learn that we had been handling German money, but fortunately we were able to prove that not one dollar of this money was used by the Staats-Zeitung, for the simple reason the Staats never was financially crippled and needed no aid. Every penny went into the maw created by the International Typesetting Machine Company, which ruined my father financially and physically.

"I can state this without fear of contradiction. Knowing my father as I did I can assure you he never took a dollar of German money wittingly, nor could any one have prevailed upon him to do so after he so fearlessly and loyally proclaimed his attitude and that of his newspaper to this country."

V. H. Polacheck, speaking for the New York Deutsches Journal, has stated that the $30 check drawn by Adolph Pavenstadt in favor of his newspaper was in payment of advertising space in the twenty-first anniversary number of the paper. Mr. Polacheck accompanied his statement by a photograph of the cashier's slip crediting the Journal with the amount.

NEWS PRINT ASS'N PAPER REPORT.

PRODUCTION AND SHIPMENTS FOR SEPTEMBER AND NINE MONTHS OF 1917.

The news print manufacturers association's report of news print production, shipments and stocks on hand for September, 1917, says:

"Actual production in September was lower than the production in August, owing to the smaller number of operating days, but an amount equaling 100.7 per cent of maximum productive capacity was obtained against 99.5 per cent in August, 1917; 91.4 per cent in September, 1916; and 91.2 per cent in the whole year of 1916.

"The actual daily production in September, 1917, was 100 tons larger than in the same month last year, although the maximum productive capacity was 400 tons less.

"Shipments in September were in excess of maximum, although less than August, 1917, and September, 1916.

"Stocks on hand in the United States have decreased and are the smallest since May of this year.

"The increase in Canadian stocks was almost entirely represented by the increase in stocks at one of the large exporting mills."

The figures follow: (The News Print Manufacturers Association represents about 78 per cent of the total product of the United States and Canada):

$2 FOR NEW YORK WEEKIES.

At the quarterly meeting of the Central New York Publishers Association, at Syracuse, a resolution was passed favoring the $2 rate for all country weeklies. This action was taken as the result of discussion of a paper read by Willard C. Wheeler of the Tully Times, in which he expressed the belief that except in rare cases the $1.50 rate was about as high as was practicable in view of the competition of large city papers.

A resolution was passed favoring paid advertising for the next Liberty Loan.

It was also decided to enroll the members of the association in the National Editorial Association.

The guest of honor was Frank E. Gannett, publisher of the Elmira Star-Gazette and of the Ithaca Journal, who is president of the state press association. Mr. Gannett spoke on the print paper situation.

The next meeting of the association will be held at Syracuse on the second Saturday in January.

WRITERS HIGHLY HONORED.

"Seeing ourselves as others see us" is a diversion afforded Columbus (Ohio) newspaper editors, business managers and cartoonists in the current issue of the Athletic Club Journal, dedicated to the local fourth estate. AD MEN AND THE LIBERTY LOAN.

NATIONAL ADVISORY BOARD FURNISHES EVEN BETTER REPORT THAN BEFORE.

The splendid work of advertising men for the Second Liberty Loan is outlined in the October 20th weekly report of Vice-Chairman William H. Rankin of the National Advertising Advisory Board to Chairman Herbert S. Houston, which follows:

"Our New York office has received 302 requests for full page mats from newspapers as a result of the four-page advertisements prepared and illustrated by Mr. Rinehart and our Mr. Faul in our New York office.

"In Chicago, we have had requests for 600 full-page mats as the result of sending out the Liberty Loan News. Then Hans Reig of the foreign language department of the Liberty Loan ordered 500 mats for distribution among foreign language papers.

"So, taking it altogether, we have sent out 1,400 full-page newspaper mats. Mr. Reig of the foreign department agreed to pay for the mats and the newspapers are paying for their mats; so that expense will not have to be borne by the Government or by ourselves.

"Today I received a request from C. W. Patman of the A.A.C.W. national commission, Indianapolis, for 1,500 copies of Liberty Loan News. He would like to send a copy to all the sustaining members of the Associated Advertising Clubs, as he thinks it would be one of the best means to show these men what the advertising clubs are really doing.

"I really think the results obtained from this Liberty Loan News will be so good that it will redound to the credit of the Associated Advertising Clubs in a bigger way than anything that has ever been done. As stated above, we have furnished over 1,400 full-page mats to newspapers and Liberty Loan committees.

"The work in the William H. Rankin Agency has been just as much, if not more, as in the handling of $500,000 for Goodrich or Marshall Field & Co. Our men have been working day and night to take care of copy and detail work.

"This insures a better report insofar as the Advertising Board is concerned than we furnished last time—in fact, much better. I find, too, that the Washington Star, the Washington Herald and the Washington Times are using the Chicago plan of advertising, using the copy furnished by our New York office or from the copy shown in Liberty Loan News. This is certainly 'carrying coals to Newcastle.'

"Just have your secretary send for the complete week's issues of the Washington papers and take a look at the fine showing of advertising in those issues for the Liberty Loan, paid for by business men of Washington. The copy was either furnished from New York or Chicago.

"On October 20, Chicago had already gone beyond its minimum quota and it certainly will go beyond its maximum quota, which is only five billion."

CONTRACT NOT BINDING.

The Zacapulco Plantation Company need not fulfill its advertising contract with the People's Magazine, published in Minneapolis by A. G. Johnson, according to a decision of Judge W. E. Hale.

The company signed a contract with the magazine editor, but wished to withdraw from the columns of the publication when the latter devoted most of its space to speeches by Senator La Follette and Congressman Lundeen. Johnson refused to cancel the agreement.

Editor Johnson has been indicted by the Hennepin County grand jury on a charge of interfering with enlistments by publishing speeches of Representative Ernest Lundeen of Minneapolis and Senator La Follette of Wisconsin in the September issue of the magazine.

CLUB BUYS LIBERTY BONDS.

The board of governors of the Baltimore Press, though Edward H. Pfund, the treasurer, offered a resolution to withdraw $500 from the sinking fund and purchase with same ten $50 Liberty Bonds.

The resolution was unanimously adopted.

BRITONS CHANGE NAME.

The British Society of Weekly Newspaper & Periodical Proprietors has changed its name to the Weekly Newspaper & Periodical Proprietors Association.

PAPER KEPT IN FAMILY.

Allan B. Augustin has succeeded his brother Howard Augustin as associate editor of the Glenwood City (Wis.) Tribune.

Charles J. Augustin, their father, who has been publisher of the Tribune intermittently for the last twenty-seven years, intends to resign in the near future and will turn over the management of the paper to the new associate editor.

Howard Augustin, who had previously been on the editorial staff of the Minnesota Daily, published by the students of the University of Minnesota, at Minneapolis, is now with the National Army at Camp Grant, Ill., and has been appointed historian and general press representative of Company D, 341st Infantry.

ILLINOIS EDITORS MEET.

Among the speakers announced by the program committee were Governor Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, Joseph Cannon and W. B. McKinley.

HOWLAND SPEAKS.

Industry's contribution to national safety, individual welfare and human progress was described by Ellis L. Howland of the New York Journal of Commerce, special representative of the national industrial conservation movement, at a recent luncheon meeting of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce.

MONTREAL MAIL AND NEWS OWES ABOUT $535,000.

About $535,000 is the amount owed by the Montreal Daily Mail Publishing Company, Limited, and the Evening News Company, Limited, according to proceedings before Justice Allard, in the Practice Division of the Superior Court, in connection with a meeting of the creditors of the two defunct newspapers.

The creditors number nearly 300 of whom 125 are former employees, who claim unpaid salaries.

John D. Wallace was appointed liquidator, and five inspectors were appointed. Both the Mail and News were under one management, the News ceasing publication a few months before the Mail, a morning paper, discontinued.

MORE CANADIANS WANT PRICE RAISING.

At a meeting of News Brunswick Province newspaper publishers of the North Shore, held a few days ago at Newcastle, a discussion was held on the rate of subscription to newspapers. The majority of the papers on the North Shore have adopted the $1.50 rate and it is likely that the others will follow.

Printing prices were taken up for comparison and decision on a standard price for standard job work, and a schedule was drawn up and agreed to, thus doing away with price cutting among the printers and encouraging fair dealing to all customers.

Another meeting will likely be held in the near future to organize a North Shore Press Association.

N. Y. TRIBUNE APPOINTMENTS

Neal Jones, formerly managing editor of the Omaha (Neb.) News, has been appointed day managing editor of the New York Tribune.

Frank J. Pope has been made night editor of the Tribune.

Mr. Jones started his newspaper career as a typesetter on the Iowa City Citizen.

After working as a reporter there he went to the Muscatine (Ia.) News-Tribune and later to Des Moines, where he was employed on several papers. He next became city clerk of Des Moines, but his inclination toward journalism led him to become connected with the Cleveland (Ohio) Press. He became managing editor of the Omaha (Neb.) News and resigned from this position to go with the Tribune.

SOCIALIST IN TROUBLE.

Isaac Bainbridge, a Canadian Socialist editor held in custody for some time past in Toronto, charged with a breach of the Defence of the Realm Act, has been admitted to bail of $1,000, after he pleaded guilty to a new charge of publishing a seditious libel.

He elected to be tried by a jury and was remanded. Bainbridge is editor of the Canadian Forward, a Socialist publication, and it is alleged that he distributed a reprint of an article by Irwin St. John Tucker, entitled "The Price We Pay." This article held up Socialism as the panacea for all evils.

CHANGE IN NAME.

The Calgary (Alta.) Nut Cracker will not appear again under the present name, but in the next issue will be rechristened the Alberta Non-Partisan. Rev. William Irvine will continue as editor and J. H. Ford will remain as business manager.

LONGER COLUMNS.

The Wausau (Wis.) Daily Record-Herald has increased the length of its columns from 20 to 21 inches. There is no other change.

"PATHFINDER" FOR CITY'S SHOPPERS.

THE NEW YORK EVENING POST CONDUCTS A UNIQUE SERVICE DEPARTMENT.

New York abounds in novelties but few people have the leisure to explore for them.

One New York newspaper maintains a separate department which does just that. Every morning a discriminating young woman is afield, sometimes on the broad reaches of the avenue and sometimes in little-known streets and daily she writes an article for the New York Evening Post, describing her discovery—perhaps a pottery shop, a perfumer, a book store, a tea room that has individuality.

Above the article appears the caption, "The Particular Person." This particular person is more than a person—an institution, at any rate a department.

At various times various young women have conducted it, always with skill and success.

Miss Elizabeth Miner King created the part. From time to time in strolls about town she found subjects which interested her and which she felt would interest the readers of the paper. One day she wrote a description of a place just visited. The sketch was submitted to the chief and he at once accepted it. It had sincerity; it was gracefully phrased; it caught and expressed the spirit of the shop about which she wrote. And it appeared in print.

More articles of the kind were written. Two and three a week appeared tucked away now on this page and now on that. No address was given. Then letters to the editor began to arrive, many on stationery that bore distinguished crests.

Inquiries by telephone and by letter asking for the addresses multiplied. Then the publisher saw the importance of a regular sustained interest and "The Particular Person" department was created.

The articles are now reprinted in booklets, "Unusual Shops of New York City" and "Unusual Tea Rooms of New York" and distributed on request.

Four editions in all have so far appeared. Addresses of the shops that advertise are given.

Miss King was made a member of the news staff and is now among the "stars." Some months ago she wrote a symposium of articles on the food situation which attracted wide attention. For a time different persons played the role of "The Particular Person." Then Mrs. Agnes Melville Brown took charge of the department and carried it on with signal brilliance.

The management of Macy's asked and received permission from the Evening Post to have her write its daily advertisements for that paper, using the title at the top.

Later Miss Amy Bonner succeeded to the title and for several months she has been traversing the highways and byways, and writing articles that cause Miss Manhattan or Mrs. Brooklyn or Mrs. Somebody-else to write for further facts. Miss Bonner enjoys her work and her style has vitality that appeals.

The other day her services were secured for writing a series of advertisements about "The Mansions," newly completed palatial apartment houses, and her advertisements took her readers on a tour of the building.

In mammoth scrapbooks which are among the guarded treasures of "The Particular Person" are letters galore. They prove that people are guided by what they read in reputable newspapers.

Some of the questions would seem to require a knowledge of the occult. Others, which merely inquire where one can buy white crepe de chine waists for $4.98 or a $10 walking hat, or the location of the gown studio, are more easily answered by the young woman who has the role of official "pathfinder" in the city of six millions.

OHIO MEN IN U.P. SERVICE.

Cleveland and other Ohio cities are well represented in the list of feature writers now serving the United Press in one place or another. The list includes:

C. C. Lyon, Cleveland, with the Pershing force in France;

Ed. L. Keen, formerly of the Cincinnati Post, now general European manager of the U.P. at London;

William G. Shepherd, formerly Scripps newspaper man in Cleveland, now in Petrograd;

C. P. Stewart, formerly city editor of the Cleveland Press, now at Buenos Aires;

William P. Simms, formerly of the Cincinnati Post, now at British front;

Wilbur S. Forrest, formerly with the Cleveland Press, now manager of the Paris bureau;

Kenneth Payne, formerly on the Cleveland Press, now in London;

Henry Wood, also of the Cleveland Press, now on the French front.

KENOSHA DAILIES SOLD.

The Kenosha (Wis.) Evening News and Telegram Courier, which for the last twenty years have been published by the Head-Simmons Publishing Company, have been purchased by the Kenosha News Publishing Company.

W. T. Marlatt becomes editor and publisher of the News and Courier; Ralph S. Kingsley is managing editor, and Clarence Head is the third director.

UNIQUE EXHIBIT IN CHICAGO.

PERMANENT AGRICULTURAL AND INDUSTRIAL SHOW FOUNDED BY HERALD.

Ward D. Williams, industrial commissioner of the Chicago Herald, has made a success of a great publicity enterprise.

About a year and half ago Mr. Williams conceived the idea of a permanent agricultural and industrial exposition, to be conducted in Chicago under the Herald auspices. This project was planned on broad lines and has required a great deal of hard, persistent work to bring it to fruition. A minimum sum of approximately $100,000 was required to finance the undertaking.

One of the first requisites was a large and centrally located building in Chicago which would admit of displaying exhibits in an attractive way. There had to be approximately thirty charter members to assure success, including states, immigration bureaus, development associations, railroad companies, industrial corporations who cater to the farmers and others of the highest class.

The Chicago Herald's Agricultural and Industrial Bureau has been open for a period of about one year and a half, has beautiful quarters occupying the entire banking floor of the Ashland Block, corner Clark and Randolph streets, in the heart of the great loop district of Chicago. The agricultural and industrial exhibits, installed by the different members, cover in the neighborhood of 8,000 square feet of floor space.

Thus the start has been made.

Outlining the purpose of the Herald's exposition to THE FOURTH ESTATE, Mr. Williams said:

"The underlying plan and purpose was to establish a great clearing house and market place where the Herald readers and the public at large could obtain authentic and reliable information regarding homes and investments in all parts of America, also in promoting and exploiting America's agricultural and industrial sections.

"With this was a realization of the fact that the people as a whole have much to learn regarding the resources and opportunities in different parts of the American continent. There will not only be trade expansion in all directions according to this view, but many new lines of activity will have to be established to meet present conditions.

"That there is an immense public service to be performed along this line the Herald management clearly perceived, and the project has had vigorous and enthusiastic support.

"There was considerable expense in the preliminary work of establishing this permanent bureau. No small concern would have been able to promote the enterprise, few individuals would have dared to undertake it alone.

"It has taken large faith and much capital before the earning point was reached. All who have studied the proposition feel that it is a great one, even when measured only by practical results. In the appeal to public spirit, as well as the broad scope of the project, there is much to please those who are observant of present commercial possibilities.

"The service given to its patrons in this permanent bureau by the Herald Company includes floor space for exhibits, educational advertising publicity in the Herald and thousands of feet of educational moving picture travels, exhibited at the moving picture auditorium at the bureau and sent out and exhibited to thousands of cities and towns throughout the United States.

"Charter membership covers a period of months. I feel that the Herald Bureau will be permanent and ideas for its future, and enlargement are now taking shape."

Mr. Williams has become known chiefly in connection with land and industrial departments of the Chicago Herald, but before locating in Chicago he was for years with the Minneapolis Journal, under the management of Lucien Swift. He has had broad experience and has personal friendships all over the United States.

KITTSON EDITORS ORGANIZE.

The newspaper publishers of Kittson County, Minn., met at the St. Vincent New Era office recently and organized the Kittson County Publishers Association.

A. G. Sand of the Hallock Weekly News was chosen president, W. A. Dahlquist of the Lancaster Herald, vice-president, and Roy C. De France of the St. Vincent New Era, secretary-treasurer.

The purpose of the organization is to promote a fraternal feeling among the newspaper men of the county; to protect the legitimate industry of newspaper publishing; to promote the future welfare of the newspapers of the county and to foster cooperation in giving better service to the various readers of the different papers within the county.

Those present at the meeting were: A. G. Sand of the Hallock Weekly News; J. E. Bouvette of the Kittson County Enterprise; J. A. Estland of the Kennedy Star; O. S. Nordine of the Karlstad Advocate; W. A. Dahlquist of the Lancaster Herald and Roy C. DeFrance of the St. Vincent New Era.

LARGER NORFOLK PLANT.

The Norfolk Virginian-Pilot will shortly occupy a new two-story annex, erected in the rear of its main office building and fronting on Brooke avenue.

New equipment will be installed in the composing room, which will be transferred from the third floor of the main building to the second floor of the annex. A new Goss press is being installed and the press now in use will be transferred from the main building to the annex press room.

HEARD HIS SONG BY 'PHONE.

While 50 instructors sang a new national anthem, "America, My Country," at the educational war conference at the Minnesota College of Agriculture recently, Jens K. Grondahl, the writer, who is editor of the Red Wing (Minn.) Republican, sat in his office and heard the song distinctly over the long distance telephone.

FAR EAST NOTES OF THE CRAFT.

JAPAN PUTS EMBARGO ON PAPER EXPORTS—RULES FOR CENSORSHIP.

The Japanese Government has placed a ban on the export of paper, as the first addition to the list of embargoed articles proclaimed in September, 1914. Export licenses may be granted, but their provisions are so strict that for several months it is considered that the ban represents a complete prohibition of the exportation of paper from Japan.

Later, other goods are to be added to the list, as the result of the early September governmental "decree controlling the prices of commodities."

The value of paper exported from Japan in 1917, in the seven months ending August 1, is stated to be $750,000. With Japanese paper mills all expanding their plants, and adding new and improved machinery, and with the export ban into effect, Tokio paper dealers are predicting an early fall in price. The present market quotation in Tokio for news print paper is 9 cents a pound.

Thomas F. Millard, proprietor and editor of Millard's Review, Shanghai, has gone to the United States to report on political and financial conditions in the Far East. He is also on a business trip. While in Tokyo Mr. Millard obtained a deeper insight into the foreign policy of Japan through a frank conversation with Viscount Motono, Minister for Foreign Affairs.

Frederic Coleman, an American war author, left Tokio on October 1 for Peking, after spending six weeks in Japan. He is representing the American State Department and the British Foreign Office in ascertaining the present situation in Japan and China, as it is of interest to the Allies. The quantity and quality of news published in vernacular papers concerning Allied countries form part of his research work, as well as the probing of public opinion. In short, he is acting as the eyes and ears of two governments, on an Allied job.

Two large liners run from Vancouver to Yokohama. The newspapers of Japan, after having been permitted to state for months that "a certain large liner from Vancouver" will arrive, or has arrived, on a certain date, were notified in mid-September that they could thereafter publish the names of the boats. Now it is permitted to publish the names of all boats leaving Japan on trans-Pacific trips.

The Japanese Government had prohibited the naming of Vancouver boats at the request of the British Foreign Office. The present action is taken to indicate that Great Britain is convinced that the Pacific is free of submarines, and will remain so.

The American Government has decided to take an interest in American publicity in Japan. Through Post Wheeler, charge d'affaires in Tokio, it has distributed scores of photographs to Japanese newspapers showing the Ishii mission in various cities, and also supplied theaters with cinemato-

Miss Yasuko Hori, a writer, has sued the editor-in-chief of an Osaka monthly, the Human Society, for printing an alleged interview with her without her knowledge.

The strike of employees of the Oriental Printing Company, Tokio, was ended recently when the employers promised to increase the wages in accordance with the degree of excellency of work done, although they did not agree to increase the wages 20 per cent, as demanded. About fifteen men who then refused to return to work, were placed in custody in a police station, but the police said that the arrests had nothing to do with the strike.

K. Yamada has left for New York to become correspondent for the Kokumin Shimbun of Tokio. The Kokumin, which claims a daily circulation of 240,000, is owned and edited by I. Tokutomi, the "Editor Roosevelt" of Japan.

NORSE EDITORS ARE LOYAL.

ASSOCIATION PROUD OF BEING ABLE TO AID THE U. S. IN THE WAR.

The result of the deliberations of the recent meeting of the Norwegian-Danish Press Association of America, held in Fergus Falls, Minn., left no doubt as to where this part of our foreign press stands in this war. This organization is the first of its kind to go on record in this matter.

President P. O. Thorson of Grand Forks, in his keynote speech, sounded the call of loyalty and declared that the Norwegian and Danish speaking press of the country never had faltered in its duty to the government and the flag.

The resolutions adopted by the organization pledge continued and united cooperation with the govern-

At the annual dinner N. A. Grievstad, formerly United States minister to Uruguay and Paraguay, was greeted with a tremendous demonstration of applause when he declared that the Norse press and the Norsemen in America felt that it was a privilege to the present generation to take a part in this great struggle, bloody and cruel at it is, because out of it will come a new and better world.

Following are the officers of the association:

President, P. O. Thorson, publisher of the Semi-Weekly Norman, Grand Forks; first vice-president, Dr. Th. Eggen, editor Lutheranen, Minneapolis, Minn.; second vice-president, O. A. Hain, editor Folkebladet, Minneapolis; secretary, John B. Wist, editor Decorah-Posten, Decorah, Ia.; treasurer, A. M. Sundheim, Augsburg Publishing Company, Minneapolis.

OHIO COURT PROTECTS THE "B.V.D." TRADE MARK.

The United States Court for the Northern District of Ohio has decreed that trade marks like "B.V.B." are an infringement on the mark of the B.V.D. Company and the use of such marks will not be permitted.

It also forbade using "Made for High Grade Retail Trade" on labels. The case was the B.V.D. Company versus the Greenwald-Reich Company of Cleveland, Ohio.

The defendant agreed to destroy approximately one million labels, tags, etc., and has satisfied the plaintiff in respect to profits, damages and costs. The court decided the words "Made for High Grade Retail Trade" conflicted with the panel, "Made for the Best Retail Trade," used by the B. V.D. Company in its labels.

NORTHCLIFFE GOES WEST.

After a brief stay in New York on his return from Canada, during which he attended to some important business matters, Lord Northcliffe spent the last week touring Dayton and Cleveland, Ohio; St. Louis, Chicago and Kansas City. In these cities Lord Northcliffe delivered addresses on the conservation of food and the shipping problem.

He is accompanied by some members of the British War Mission and will return to New York about the end of the month for two or three days, and then go to Washington.

JEWELERS CO-OPERATE IN ADVERTISING.

This month the retail jewelers in Buffalo will start a cooperative advertising campaign in Buffalo newspapers and continue it up to the Christmas holidays. Every effort is being exerted to make the coming season a jewelry Christmas.

NEW HOME

Newspaper Men, Advertising Agents, Advertisers and all others interested, are extended a cordial invitation to visit and inspect the new plant of The Detroit News at any time.

Men who constantly travel among newspaper plants pronounce that of The Detroit News the finest in existence.

It's size, artistic design and finish, practical arrangement of departments and ultra modern mechanical equipment exist to facilitate the varied forms of service which a newspaper must render the reading and advertising public.

YOU ARE ALWAYS WELCOME.

The Detroit News

DAILY and SUNDAY

NOTE:—Commencing October 14th, the Sunday issue of The Detroit News, formerly called the Detroit News-Tribune, became the Detroit Sunday News.

THE DETROIT NEWS PLANT IN OPERATION.

CONTAINS EVERY FACILITY POSSIBLE FOR NEWSPAPER-MAKING EFFICIENCY AND EMPLOYEES' COMFORT.

When the staffs of the Detroit News moved from their old home on Shelby street, which they occupied over 40 years, to the magnificent new building occupying the entire block on Second avenue, from Lafayette Boulevard to Fort street, the change marked a new era in newspaperdom in this country.

No newspaper in America has a more beautiful setting, or more perfect or more modern equipment.

The entire environment, from the strong, dignified medieval lines of the exterior of the huge edifice to the rich interior decorations and wonderful modern inventions for the rapid production of a newspaper of today, places the business of journalism before the public impressively as it should be—a great modern institution.

At various times during the past twenty-five years the News has contemplated the erection of a new building. At three different times the plan was about to mature, when the growth of Detroit and also of the paper outgrew the plans.

At one time the plans were accepted and blue prints made and work was about to begin, but the site then selected—the present site of the Orpheum Theater—could be tucked into a corner of the new building.

The evolution of the housing of the News, from the little one-story brick shack in 1873 to the present castle-like structure, is like a wonder-dream.

Three elements entered into all plans that were considered in the erection of this modern newspaper plant—utility, harmony and cost, respectively.

The visitor is strikingly impressed the moment the Arabian hand-wrought iron doors are passed and the vast lobby with its Florentine decorations, rich rugs and furnishings, are seen for the first time.

This impression grows even stronger as the office furnishings and mechanical time and labor-saving devices are inspected.

BUSINESS OFFICES.

The business office is a huge affair in English fumed oak. Nothing but a sea of desks is visible. The desks, several hundred of them scattered through the building, are steel, baked enamelled to harmonize with the fumed oak, with battleship linoleum tops, and cost $127 each. Instead of the customary drawers on the right are dummy drawers that by pressing outward bring a typewriter into view and ready for operation. A hundred new typewriters were ready for use.

By opening the panels of oak in the side walls of the business office, lavatories, filing spaces, shelves and everything conceivable (even to a private elevator next to the circulation manager's desk that enables him to reach the press room in a fraction of a minute) can be found.

An interesting idea in all departments is a concealed steel chute for the disposal of waste paper that leads direct to balers.

A feature of the advertising department is a long, specially designed table, with switchboards inserted for a crew of 10 girls to take classified ads. Small buttons of light indicate where to make connections to take the ads.

A private barber shop with the very latest improvements in the tonorial lines, is one of the adjuncts to the business office.

EXECUTIVE OFFICES, RESTAURANT, LOUNGE, STOCK ROOMS.

The offices of George Booth, president of the Detroit News Association, are on the mezzanine floor.

The main floor, above, contains the offices of H. S. Scott, general manager and treasurer; William E. Scripps, vice-president and managing director; E. G. Pipp, editor and secretary; Herbert Ponting, business manager; and H. W. Moore, advertising manager. These offices, with their beautifully carved and massive Elizabethan period oak doors, rich rugs and other handsome appointments, are probably the finest group occupied by newspaper executives anywhere.

An idea of the richness of the appointments can be formed from the fact that a marble clock about fifteen inches high with original bronze and gold decoration cost $400. This was recently presented to Mr. Booth by the News staff and is in perfect harmony with the balance of the decorations.

A restaurant for employees is as well equipped and decorated as any restaurant in Detroit. Everything that is new, from an electric garbage incinerator to an automatic dish washer, has found its way in the equipment.

The stock room is an interesting place with its steel drawers for holding everything from lead pencils to paste pots, all obtainable only by a requisition from a department head. This department also has its own printing plant for stock forms, etc.

A large conference and lounge room, handsomely decorated and furnished to resemble a huge drawing room or salon, with a grand piano, is to be used as an open forum for staff discussions, but can be immediately converted into a lecture room for public gatherings by unfolding 350 comfortable chairs concealed when not required.

NEWS ROOM, LIBRARY, "SCRAPARIUM."

The news room has been given considerable thought in arrangement and an intercommunicating system has been devised whereby the city editor can immediately be put in touch with the various departments either personally or by a private separate switchboard.

Thirty steel desks are used in the news room, each equipped with heavy, comfortable swiveling chairs.

The telegraph room, a sound-proof room adjoining the news rooms, has provisions for sixteen operators.

The news room also has a private entrance to the editorial library and scraparium—the new name for the "morgue." All of these departments are models of perfection.

The library is a most compact arrangement of 7,000 volumes carefully selected by George Catlin, the expert of the editorial staff. Reporters are encouraged to visit the library and they have a private telephone connection from the city room while there. A feature of the library is a compact steel case occupying very little space that contains the very latest maps of the world, any section of which can be immediately located by an index system within the case. A few movements place greatly enlarged sections before one so they can be studied while sitting down.

The "scraparium" is a room of steel filing cases and drawers that are constantly being filled up by a staff of experts with the latest developments on any subject of interest to the reading public. Where in the past "obits" filled the "morgue," the modern scraparium is filled with obituaries to be, plus a greater volume of real live matter.

ART, ENGRAVING AND MECHANICAL.

The art section is one of the finest, if not the finest, in America. The artists' room has its own color scheme of buff and blue with a deep panel of murals illustrating the development of art from the stone age to date. The entire scheme is extremely pleasing and restful.

This section also includes a modern photograph studio that is perfectly equipped with everything known in the line of apparatus and lights.

There is an extensive engraving plant with a "maze" dark room that can be entered in the sunlight without ruining negatives being developed. The engraving equipment is the last word in perfection and arrangement.

In connection with the art and photographic departments, the roof has been arranged for action pictures, large groups, etc.

Dressing rooms for subjects are also provided.

A complete telephone exchange has its room. Twenty-five trunk lines are subscribed for. The Telauto machine is connected with all departments where the noise is too great to carry on a conversation when the presses are running. Written orders are dispatched by this means.

The composing and stereotyping rooms are on the top floor. The roof is of trussed steel and glass. The factory efficiency principle, that dominated the arrangement of all the mechanical details, is noticeable in the arrangements of these two departments.

The Linotype experts have a room with steel drawers of all sizes in which are wooden boxes, sometimes twelve fit snugly in a drawer. Each box contains Linotype parts and any of the 37 Linotypes can be almost reconstructed at a moment's notice. Lathes and a complete machine shop are part of this department.

A large switchboard in this room controls every machine in the composing room. A system of light signals informs the superintendent of any trouble with any machine, and he cuts it off from the control board, thereby avoiding the possibility of accident while it is being repaired.

The entire composing room is of steel. Steel cabinets, steel "stones," and steel "leads," slugs and steel rules are used exclusively.

The stereotyping department adjoins the composing department and consists of two batteries of Auto-plate machines. Two automatic elevators to the press room are next to the finishing machine and three minutes after the plate is finished it is in the press room. Having the stereotyping and composing rooms on the top floor permits all gas fumes to pass away at once, and everything is done in clear daylight.

SELAS SYSTEM FOR STEREOTYPING.

The Selas system for burning gas is used throughout the stereotyping department. This is said to be the "last word" in saving fuel, making uniform heat and absolute control.

The principle of this system is to draw in a definite, predetermined proportion of gas and air, and to thoroughly mix them together (carbureter principle), at the same time distributing this mixture through the service mains under a constant high pressure. As the mixing of the air and gas to obtain the highest working efficiency is done automatically and mechanically by the Selas system, the operator has only the temperature of the metal to watch. As the amount of air and gas supplied at a given opening of the control valve is constant, the temperature of the metal remains the same if the production is uniform. Thus even the slightest adjustment of the control valve is reduced to a minimum.

The burners in the Auto-type pots are arranged in four series to simplify the control and operation. When the metal is to be heated for a run (two burners are always lighted when the pot is not in use to avoid the danger of cracking due to the strains of expansion and contraction, excessive cooling and quick heating), the four series of burners are lighted.

After the metal has reached the proper temperature for working, part of the series of burners is completely turned off and the run is generally made without any further regulation. The arrangement of the burners and the design of the combustion space are such that an even distribution of heat is maintained over the entire surface of the pot, so that the metal is at a uniform temperature throughout.

All communication with the composing room in the matter of copy is by pneumatic tubes from the business and editorial departments. Special instructions come by Telauto machine.

WONDERFUL PRESS AND CIRCULATION FACILITIES.

The press room is very interesting. The "circle" principle of doing things which is followed out in the various departments is best illustrated in the press rooms.

The paper, for example, is lowered by an electric "hoist" from the truck to a small four-wheel conveyor on narrow-gauge rails. These rails are embedded in concrete and run all around the press room from piers to presses and in such manner that the roll can be pushed by one man any place. In case the direction is to be changed small turntables permit.

The paper is usually pushed to one of fifteen concrete piers with an incline toward the presses. These piers hold two days' supply. From the piers the rolls are adjusted to Stone reels that hold three rolls and are so arranged that when one roll is exhausted, a new roll is taken up and fed without stopping the press.

The presses are the new Scott multi-unit principle. Twenty-four units of these low construction presses take up the whole long block on Second street.

TWENTY-FOUR SCOTT PRESSER.

The chief feature of the Scott triple octuple Multi-Unit equipment is that all the units are on the same floor level, with every part within reach of the operators. An even temperature on all the units enables an even distribution of ink, and prevents rollers from melting.

The equipment can be operated as twelve quadruple, eight octuples, or six octuple presses. This arrangement is calculated to meet any condition that may arise in the matter of production.

GOSS COLOR AND HALF-TONE PRESS.

Another important part of the News' press room equipment is a Goss three-decker, straightline design—two-plate wide, half-tone and color press. This machine has a capacity of 24,000 per hour, four, six, eight, ten and twelve-page papers in book form; or 12,000 per hour sixteen, twenty and twenty-four-page papers in two collected sections.

The press has a top deck combination for three-color printing; center color is extra printing couple including one plate cylinder and one blanket cylinder complete with inking device; extra color fountain at both roll end and folder end—third deck, also roll end—second deck.

All color fountains are divided in the center.

The folder is high speed with spring-nose former. Products are delivered half-page newspaper size or full page magazine size.

The press has oil set device on all rear impression cylinders and all color impression cylinders on top deck. Double tension roll frames—V tension; hand power roll hoist; 30 H. P. Goss Simplex drive motor equipment with variable speed controller—manual control—current 110 volts, D. C.

Conveyors from the presses take the papers to the large steel tables designed by the News staff, where they are bundled and thrown on a broad traveling belt and delivered to waiting automobile trucks and wagons.

RECEIVING AND DELIVERY.

Adjoining the press room is a wide steel glass-covered delivery building with entrances on two streets, and capable of housing about 100 trucks. All goods are received and papers delivered from this point.

In the front of the press room is a large space with banking house bronze fixtures where boys can purchase papers. Checks are purchased for papers at one window and the papers are delivered from another. The sale, however, is very light, about 3,500 a day, as the system of delivery by automobile to numerous points throughout Detroit is so complete that few boys have to go to the building.

ONLY ELECTRICAL PLANT OF ITS KIND.

There are two interesting features in connection with the press room, one is an Edison remote-control sub-station, and the other is the way the ink is handled.

The electrical sub-station in the press room receives alternating current which is converted by step-down transformers to direct current at usable voltage. After all the current necessary to run the various machines in the building (everything is run by electricity) the overflow goes out to be used elsewhere.

This is said to be the only sub-station of its kind ever installed. It is started, stopped and regulated at Edison sub-stations, and needs no heat, no attendant and little light.

The ink delivery is rather unique. The ink is forced by pipes from the ink mill to a large tank and pumped from this tank to a large tank in the News press room. From this tank, the ink is pumped direct to the presses. The ink is thereby never exposed to the air or dust from the time it is made until it is distributed by the rollers.

The entire building is supplied with washed air, thermo-static ventilation, refrigerating plant, and has every known sort of safety control device, and as the publisher of another Detroit paper said, "It is certainly the last word in newspaper making."

POINTERS ON THE DETROIT NEWS.

The Detroit News was first published August 23, 1873, by James Edmund Scripps, and issued from a building on Woodbridge street near Griswold. In November the paper moved to the very site lately abandoned. Mr. Scripps died in 1906.

The new home of the News has a frontage of 150 feet on Lafayette boulevard and Fort street and 280 feet on Second avenue. There are five floors, including the mezzanine, with a total area of 149,000 square feet. The content is 2,673,000 cubic feet.

The architecture is essentially American, even middlewestern, but suggests a medieval prototype. The architect was Albert Kahn.

The building material was concrete, steel and Indiana limestone.

The monograms and symbols carved in the stone below the third story windows are the insignia of master craftsmen in the early days of printing.

The inscriptions on the parapet, front and rear, were prepared under the direction of Professor F. N. Scott of the University of Michigan.

The carved stone figures at the heads of four piers on the Lafayette facade are of four pioneers in printing, Gutenberg, Plantin, Caxton and Franklin.

Decorations in the first and second story lobbies are of a modified Renaissance character. The coloring and modeling used in the ceiling of the entrance lobby are purely Renaissance of a very refined character.

Two suites, the executives' and the president's, are elaborately wainscoted in modified Elizabethan style.

The wrought steel vestibule and steel grilles in the tympanums at each end of the entrance lobby are masterworks in craftsmanship.

Mural decorations in the art department, depicting the development of pictorial art, were painted by the director of the department. Joseph Kraemer, and the cartoonist, Burt Thomas.

Regular employees immediately concerned with the operation of the plant of the News number 475, and they are assisted by more than a score of part time employees.

Three hundred and eighty-seven "liner" stations in the city serve News advertisers, and they are augmented by 10 girls who do nothing but take classified advertisements over the telephone.

Five thousand boys sell or carry the News in Detroit; in excess of 3,000 throughout the state.

Twelve hundred news-stands and 90 supply stations in Detroit as well as 950 state agents, assist in the distribution of the paper.

The News owns and operates 40 automobiles in the handling of its circulation.

The telephone switchboard in the News requires three operators and controls nearly 125 telephones on 25 trunk lines.

The three greatest news gathering and disseminating agencies serve the News, supplementing its own reporting organization, which includes over a thousand correspondents in Michigan, special correspondents in all leading cities, and bureaus operated by members of the editorial staff in Washington and New York.

Pictures are supplied by the five leading photographic services, and special articles by 15 "feature syndicates."

Sixteen telegraph instruments in the building carry news of the outer world to the editorial desk.

The color press, which is capable of printing four solid colors at one time and a large number of other shades and colors through blending, turns out comic supplements at the rate of 11,000 an hour.

Half a ton of ink is consumed daily by the News, and this ink is never exposed to the air from the time it is manufactured in a Detroit factory till it goes onto the white paper. No other newspaper has achieved this desirable end. The ink is conveyed to the News in an air-tight tank trailer.

The engraving department can produce from a photograph, by the half-tone engraving process, a "cut" ready to print in 21 minutes. No such speed is ordinarily attempted.

The presses of the News are 265 feet long over all, and, being unified, may be considered as one press of 24 units. Their maximum capacity is 432,000 complete 16-page papers, printed, cut, folded, counted and delivered to the mailing department every hour.

During the past year the News consumed a hundred rolls of paper a day. In each roll there are approximately six miles of paper. The year's total was 219,000 miles of paper.

The 15 concrete piers on which paper is stored in the basement are emptied by the presses every two days.

The "scraparium" contains over 20,000 "cuts" of more or less public personages. Twice that number were thrown away when the News moved. Data and pictures touching 50,000 subjects or persons are also there.

Four hundred and eighteen steel filing cabinets house this material, to which constant additions are being made.

The private library of the News contains over 7,000 volumes.

Electric cranes hoist the rolls of paper weighing three-quarters of a ton from motor trucks and drop them into a tunnel where they run on cars to the storage piers; they are carried to the presses on other cars, hoisted by the ingenious new Stone reels, fed through the presses and conveyed automatically to the bundlers; endless belts carry the bundles to the waiting delivery trucks at the shipping room platform. Heavy manual labor is reduced to a minimum by elaborate mechanical devices everywhere.

The electrical "control board," which governs the presses, contains more than 50 feet of panels. One hundred and four combinations of the press units are possible, though the News uses only 25.

The News is said to be the only newspaper in the world whose power is drawn from a sub-station within its own walls. Here alternating current is transformed to direct current. Only electric power is used.

The automatic plate casting and trimming machines in the stereotyping department are capable of turning out 18 plates a minute. In a day they commonly melt and cast 53 tons of metal into the semi-cylindrical sheets which print the papers.

When the News installed its first stereotyping outfit and web press in 1880, 12 plates a day was a good record. Today 800 plates are frequently made.

A pressure of 700 pounds to the square inch is exerted in taking an impression of a type page, and the moistened matrix is dried on an electric table where 11 tons of pressure and 350 to 400 degrees of heat are applied.

The composing room, where type is set and "made up" into pages, employs 125 men. Each of the 37 Linotype machines, which work night and day, is capable of doing the work of five or six old time hand compositors. Twenty-four machines are devoted to editorial matter and 13 to advertising and job work.

Two Ludlow machines cast extra large lines of type, principally for advertisements.

The photographic department is said to have no equal in equipment in the newspaper world. An automobile is reserved for the use of the photographers.

Pneumatic tubes carry "copy" from the editorial and business offices to the composing room in five or six seconds.

Practically the entire equipment of the old News building has been "scrapped." The exceptions are a very few machines recently installed.

Three employees of the News were with the paper when it started 44 years ago. Many others have been employed from 20 to 40 years.

The hospital of the News is perfectly equipped for any emergency not involving a large number of persons.

A cafe, elaborately equipped, is operated for the employees. The kitchen has every discoverable convenience of importance, even to automatic dishwashers and garbage incinerators. A special refrigerating system is also installed.

The building contains a barber shop for employees.

All air breathed in the News building has been washed. All drinking water is filtered and chilled by a chemical process not involving the use of ice. All rooms have thermo-static regulation of heat. The building is equipped fully with vacuum cleaners.

Except in private suites and the conference room, desks are exclusively steel, finished with baked green enamel, trimmed with brass and topped with battleship linoleum.

The bronze bust in the second floor lobby is a portrait of the founder of the News, James Edmund Scripps.

Other views of the Detroit News plant are shown on twenty-second page.

WHAT THE AUTOMATIC BLANKET WILL DO.

The New England Newspaper Supply Company, of Worcester, Mass., announces that all press manufacturing companies have adopted its Automatic Blanket as standard equipment on rotary presses and that seventy-five per cent of all the newspapers have been using it since 1915, including every daily newspaper in New York City.

Among the results the makers guarantee to produce are: Reduction of 50 per cent in printed waste; saving of 100 per cent in tympan cloth; 50 per cent better printing; 10 per cent increase in press efficiency; saving of 10 per cent in power; elimination of 90 per cent in paper breaks between the cylinders; and a cleaner and blacker paper.

DOING BUSINESS ABROAD, ACCORDING TO CUSTOM.

To how many American business houses, advertising abroad for foreign trade, does this warning from Consul General Brittain, at Sydney, Australia, apply?

Many commercial houses in the United States, when writing to Australian importing houses, fail to indicate when the merchandise will be delivered, and frequently fail to allude to the abnormal conditions caused by the war, reports Mr. Brittain from Sydney.

While the Australian importer realizes that certain difficulties exist, he expects some assurance as to when he may expect delivery when placing his orders, also whether he can depend on prices quoted being in force when the merchandise is exported.

"There is no difficulty in selling American merchandise in Australia provided the purchaser can be given assurance when the goods can be delivered," says Mr. Brittain. "One importer informs me that he received a letter from the United States saying that any merchandise purchased must be paid for before it leaves the United States and that it must be paid for at the prices prevailing when the merchandise is shipped instead of when the contract is made; further, that the shipper will not assume responsibility for the delivery of the goods."

It can readily be seen that such terms would not favorably impress any Australian importer.

The following information comes from the United States Commercial Attaché at Melbourne, Australia:

One of the largest advertising agencies in the United States recently sent a representative to Australia to arrange a local advertising campaign on behalf of an article nationally advertised in the United States. The special representative was forwarded 268 advertising plates which had been successfully used in the United States, all but three or four of which had to be scrapped.

Although these plates fit American magazines and newspapers, they were of no use in Australia. The substantial loss suffered was increased by the duty—charge, which on electrotypes or stereotypers is 48 cents per block of 12 square inches or under, with 4 cents additional for each square inch over 12.

The best practice is to send drawings from which plates can be made locally.

The custom has not yet been adopted in Australia of giving advertising agencies a standard rate of discount, and a certain amount of bargaining must be done by American advertising agencies desiring to make direct arrangements with Australian mediums.

Moreover, some satisfactory method of payment must be devised if one would meet with a favorable response.

A leading metropolitan daily recently urged the press to advocate a system of guaranteed circulation, similar to that in use in the United States, but received little, if any, encouragement.

The only assurance which can now be had as to circulation is the unsupported word of the publication.

MORE IOWA CLUBS.

Each of the twelve Iowa Associated Ad Clubs has pledged itself to organize one more club during the coming year as one means for bringing the advantages of state meetings to the attention of a larger number of people.

NEW JUNIOR AD BODY.

The value of the Junior Advertising Club of St. Louis in helping the St. Louis Advertising Club arrange for the 1917 A.A.C.W. convention there has led the San Francisco Advertising Club to start forming a junior organization in that city.

INDIANANS IN GAS CITY.

The Indiana Associated Weeklies meeting is being held today at Gas City.

A.A.C.W. DATES.

The San Francisco convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World will be held July 7 to 11. It is announced from the headquarters office of the association at Indianapolis.

LATIN-AMERICAN CLUBS.

Acting on a suggestion of William B. Morris, advertising manager of the Northwestern Knitting Company, Minneapolis (approved by the A.A.C.W.) J. W. Sanger, who is soon to leave for South America as a special agent for the United States Government to investigate advertising conditions there, will also aid in organizing the ad clubs on the Southern continent.

JOVIAN LEAGUE GUESTS.

The Denver ad men recently were hosts to the Denver Jovian League and the electrical bureau of the civic and commercial organization.

EDUCATIONAL PUBLICITY.

At a recent meeting the Advertising Club Bureau of the Civic and Commercial Association of Denver, Colo., heard discussions on the work Denver's educational institutions had done in advertising the city. Representatives of various schools reviewed the accomplishments by their respective organizations.

FOR GREATER VIGILANCE.

With the addition of Will P. Green to the National Vigilance Committee of the A.A.C.W., the committee will make a greater effort to systematize and promote the work of local bureaus and vigilance committees. Particular attention will also be given to the organization of new vigilance committees, so that the protective arm of the national organization may be a working part of every local club.

In connection with this campaign the first number of the monthly publication for vigilance workers, Better Business News, is being issued soon. This publication will be a medium for the interchange of ideas between bureaus, vigilance committees and national headquarters. It will have its special appeal in making each club and bureau familiar with the methods used by other clubs and bureaus in vigilance work. Brief reports on investigations will be featured as well as news of general interest to vigilance workers.

BACK FROM CAMP.

After serving at Camp Dix, Wrightstown, N. J., as a drafted man for one month, Philip Payne, city editor of the Union Hills (N. J.) Hudson Dispatch, has returned to his old position.

Mr. Payne was rejected by surgeons at the Camp Dix base hospital because of defective vision. At the time of his rejection he was a member of Headquarters Company of the 312th Infantry, which is commanded by Captain George Hyde, formerly of the New York Times.

Jack Masters of the New York Tribune is also a member of Headquarters Company of the 312th Infantry.

HOME FROM FRONT.

Flight Lieutenant Stanley McCruden, formerly with the Toronto Telegram, is home on a furlough until November, recovering from an injury.

'NEWS' IMPORTS AND EXPORTS FOR 1917.

The American Newspaper Publishers Association's paper committee reports:

"On account of the war Australia is finding it almost impossible to obtain her paper supply from England as usual or from any other source. For this reason both South America and Australia are pressing hard in this market for paper and obtaining some quantities. Figures of exports and imports published by this Government do not show the true situation in this way.

"Reports have come to hand that arrangements have been made for 20,000 tons of paper from Powell River for Australia. This is taking away from Canada paper which would ordinarily come into this market. "In addition to this the International, Belgo-Canadian and Laurentide together shipped about 3,000 tons in September to Australia.

"Another order has just now been placed for 3,300 tons shipment to Australia in November. All this paper has considerable effect in the American market.

"Direct exports from the United States, as will be seen by the figures published, are greatly reduced. The export license and embargoes have affected this wonderfully. It is impossible, however, to control paper shipped from Canada and elsewhere to Australia, although this directly affects our market.

The United States' news print imports and exports for 1917 (tabulated by the paper committee) are:

Morris Miller, formerly a member of the New York American's advertising staff, is understood to have been on the transport Antilles when she was recently torpedoed. His name does not appear on the official lost report.

David Davidson, a member of the advertising department staff of the Greater Vitagraph Company, New York, has been drafted.

Former Columbus (Ohio) newspaper men will have charge of the official newspaper at Camp Sheridan, Montgomery, Ala.

F. L. Westerman, former Citizen reporter, and Bernard Bergman, former Dispatch reporter, are to be editors.

Henry Farrell, formerly City Hall reporter for the Citizen, will be one of the regimental editors.

All camp news will be gathered, written and edited by the soldiers. The paper will be printed in a Montgomery newspaper office.

Sapper "Jack" A. MacLachlan, a former employee of the Toronto Mail and Empire, who is now in the Division Signal Company, Canadian Engineers, was presented with a handsome wrist watch and pocket wallet by his fellow-workers, on the occasion of his going East. The presentation was made by James Gairdner.

Paul O. Murphy, son of William J. Murphy, publisher of the Minneapolis Tribune, is in New York, preparatory to his sailing for France with the American Ambulance Corps.

Paul Martin, formerly city editor of the Battle Creek (Mich.) Evening News, now a lieutenant at Camp Funston, Kansas, is engaged in the interesting task of giving bayonet instruction. Lieutenant Martin specialized on bayonet work during his training at Fort Sheridan.

JOURNALISM IN THE COLLEGES.

Frank B. Thayer has been appointed as head of the journalism department of the University of Iowa, following a year's service in the University of Kansas journalism school. He received the degree of master of arts in journalism at the University of Wisconsin, and has been connected with the Springfield (Mass.) Republican, Cleveland Press, Columbus (Ohio) State Journal, Erie (Pa.) Dispatch and other newspapers.

J. Newton Colver, Sunday editor of the Spokane (Wash.) Spokesman-Review, has been appointed to teach news writing at the Lewis & Clark High School in Spokane and to direct the publication of the school journal. He intends to change the latter from a monthly magazine to a weekly paper, with a news basis, and two big annual publications in January and June. Mr. Colver started on the Spokesman-Review as a "cub" fourteen years ago and was sporting editor for ten years.

A course in journalistic composition has been added to the curriculum of the Northern Normal and Industrial School, Aberdeen, S. D., for the coming school year. Students enrolling for this work will be charged with the responsibility of editing and publishing the Weekly Exponent, the students' paper. Credit in English will be given. Paul W. Kieser, an experienced Dakota newspaperman, will be in charge of the work.

The high cost of materials may put a number of the Harvard College student publications out of business.

The Harvard Illustrated, which for more than ten years has been issued fortnightly has left its quarters in Massachusetts avenue and is temporarily without a home. This magazine may decide to suspend publication for the next year.

The Harvard Lampoon, the college comic paper, and the Harvard Crinson, the daily newspaper, are both sure to print their editions regularly, but they may raise their subscription rates to cover the added cost of paper.

Two other magazines, the Advocate and Monthly, are on the uncertain list. The Monthly ceased publication temporarily just before the close of the last college year.

The Yale Daily News and the Brown Daily Herald will be lessened in size.

Among the new extension courses offered by the Ohio Western Reserve University is one on modern advertising.

The Missourian, official daily newspaper of the University of Missouri School of Journalism, has begun its tenth year of publication and marks the anniversary with a change in type face. The Missouri School of Journalism, also starting its tenth year, claims to be the oldest in the world and now has 149 graduates, more than 85 per cent of whom are engaged in some phase of journalism.

The first graduating class in 1909 had only one member. The class of 1917 had thirty-eight members. From the outset the school has been under the direction of Dean Walter Williams, upon whose ideas the school was founded.

The position of J. Wainwright Evans, who resigned as instructor in journalism at the University of Kansas, has been filled by Vaughn Bryant. Mr. Bryant received his newspaper experience on the Kansas City (Mo.) Star, with which he affiliated himself after his graduation from the University of Missouri. He taught journalism at the University of Texas in Austin for three years.

Samuel P. Johnston, president of the San Francisco Ad Club, presided at a recent meeting of the University of California extension class in advertising which was addressed by Miss Mary Ennis of the advertising department of the Emporium, San Francisco. Miss Ennis discussed advertising from all angles. She explained the method of writing ads for special sales, for regular selling and for new goods.

W. A. Dill of the Portland Oregonian staff has been appointed instructor in the school of journalism at the University of Kansas.

For ten years he was with the Eugene (Ore.) Register in various capacities, leaving the Register several years ago when he was news editor to become managing editor of the Springfield News. He returned to Eugene about two years ago to become city editor of the Guard. About six months ago he joined the news staff of the Oregonian. Mr. Dill really entered the newspaper field in Portland some years ago as "devil" in the office of the old Evening Tribune of Portland. He is a member of the Sigma Delta Chi journalism fraternity.

Oregon Exchanges, the newspaper for newspaper men of Oregon, which is published by the school of journalism of the University of Oregon, Eugene, Ore., and the University Press Bulletin, will hereafter be edited by the journalism class in editing.

Orpha Hoover of Columbia, S. D., has been appointed editor of the Exponent, a weekly published by the students of the Northern Normal and Industrial School of South Dakota. Alice Chamberlain of Aberdeen, who has had a year's newspaper training, is the news editor.

The University Pastime, a six by eight-inch, four-page magazine, published semi-monthly in 1878 by two students, Meservy and Thatcher, was the first student publication of the University of Kansas.

The Harvard Register, containing the vital facts of the social, literary and sporting life of the undergraduates, will be issued this year as last, in spite of a greatly depleted staff of editors. The volume will be put on sale early in December, with no advance in price.

The new board for the publication of the Register is as follows: President, George C. Barclay; business manager, P. Zach; managing editor, D. S. Guild; assistant managing editors, W. T. Selg and F. C. Southworth; circulation manager, G. C. Houser.

Officers and editors of the Harvard Law Review, the publication edited by Harvard Law School students, have been elected as follows: L. H. Landau, president; T. A. Lightner, note editor; R. W. Pyle, case editor.

The students elected to the Law Review Board are: Hogo Moning, Sigurd Ueland, Irving H. Fathschild, A. D. Platt, C. M. Thorpe, C. T. Lewis, G. F. Ludington, J. M. Russell and J. T. Herbert.

A class of twenty pupils of the South High School, Columbus, Ohio, is taking a course in news writing under the direction of Miss Edna Armstrong.

R. P. Crawford, a Lincoln newspaper man and magazine writer, has been appointed agricultural editor of the University of Nebraska in Lincoln.

Gilbert Weigle of the San Francisco Examiner will conduct an extension course in practical journalism for the University of California, Berkeley, consisting of fifteen lectures given in the San Francisco city hall.

George Turnbull, who is returning to the University of Oregon as professor in journalism under Dean Eric W. Allen, has had a wide practice in newspaper work and printing, beginning in 1894. He has been proof-

"WINDOW DISPLAY WEEK" SIGNIFICANCE.

No newspaper solicitor need advance mere theories to prove that an article can be nationalized by newspaper advertising or that dealers prefer advertising in their home newspapers to any other kind.

All he will have to do is to point to the results of the fourth annual International Newspaper Window Display Week conducted under the auspices of the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

Previous "window weeks" have been impressive. Each year the event has been larger than in the preceding year but this year it assumed record breaking proportions.

The table of figures showing the number of newspapers participating and the number of cities where displays were held does not tell the story nearly as impressively as the thousands of photographs are pouring in to Director William A. Thomson of the A.N.P.A. Advertising Bureau from all parts of the United States and Canada. With the reports are also coming such comments as these:

"Great improvement over the previous year. Our merchants now understand the significance of the event and vie with each other in making displays."

"So increasingly great is the demand for newspaper advertised lines that many stores are featuring the same and in some cases are doing so exclusively."

"Biggest success we have ever had on Window Display Week. The merchants entered into the proposition with great enthusiasm."

"Interest in newspaper advertised articles is increasing among the dealers as they see the benefit of same. The articles that are advertised through local papers, instead of magazines, they appreciate best and are pushing."

"We found the dealers more willing to cooperate this year and next season we expect to get an earlier start."

Comments like these could be repeated by the column. The special features of this year's event were notably displays in many large cities like St. Louis, Salt Lake City and New Orleans, where all the papers united to put it over.

In Philadelphia and in Washington, the home city of Chairman Fleming Newbold of the committee in charge of the Bureau of Advertising, the wonderful dealer support indicated the great turn towards newspapers on the part of retailers.

The reports and photographs will be utilized in literature by the Bureau of Advertising to tell the story to national advertisers of "window week" and its significance in showing dealer interest in newspaper advertised products.

The Advertising Bureau states that fully 600 newspapers in the United States and Canada participated in Window Display Week, and that nearly 450 cities had displays of nationally advertised goods during the period.

NEWS SLACKERS.

The man or woman who in these critical times fails to read a good newspaper regularly is a slacker, declared Professor Willard G. Bleyer, head of the department of journalism at the University of Wisconsin, in addressing the students of the library school.

It is the patriotic duty of every person in this country to keep informed in regard to the epoch making events and utterances that are reported in the press from day to day.

"The food of opinion is the news of the day," as President Wilson has well said, and it behooves every citizen not only to read the news but to form intelligent opinions in regard to it.

Intelligent public opinion, without which we cannot have true democracy, is the sum total of the opinions of individual citizens, and the opinions of these citizens must be formed largely from the news which is printed in newspapers.

By failing to read the news and to consider its significance, a man is shirking his duty to his country just as truly as he is when he fails to express his opinions by casting his vote at an election.

ADVERTISERS! TAKE A TIP.

"Newspaper advertising has brought us so much business that we have decided to abandon our catalogs, amounting to over 3,000,000 copies yearly, and spend the money with the New York Evening Journal and other high class newspapers," declares Jesse Froelich, vice-president of the Times Square Auto Supply Company, of New York and Chicago, known the world over as a pioneer in exploiting automobile advertising.

As a result of the present vigorous, widespread advertising campaign in the newspapers of the twenty leading cities, where it has branches, never in over fifteen years of business career has the firm enjoyed greater business returns than during the past ten days.

FILM AD POSSIBILITIES.

One of the most important executives in the moving picture business recently told THE FOURTH ESTATE that the advertising possibilities of moving picture theaters had never been properly cultivated, and pointed out the Seattle Times and Chicago Tribune as examples of what can be done in that direction.

Each of these papers carries a large volume of this particular class of advertising. The same authority said that there were 15,000 moving picture theaters, with 11,000 owners, of which not more than 2,000 know anything about advertising.

The proper kind of cultivation would create 9,000 new advertisers, according to the man who knows the field.

A case was cited in which a man bought a moving picture house that was yielding a good income and everyone was well satisfied.

The new owner, however, concluded to do some newspaper advertising.

The result was that the profits were doubled, although the schedule and pictures were exactly the same before and after advertising.

The new owner simply interested more people.

CASE WOULD BE OF INTEREST.

It was reported in Chicago recently that one trade paper contemplated prosecuting another on the ground of "restraint of trade" because of misquoting circulation.

The paper that is talking of prosecuting says that the claim of the opposition of a greater circulation, which the Government report shows is in reality less than the paper seeking damages, has caused the latter to lose advertising patronage. A test of this kind would prove interesting in many ways.

NOTE AND COMMENT.

A well-known special representative tells THE FOURTH ESTATE that he has more business contracted for than ever before at the same time in any of the past sixteen years. He also said some very well known firms that had never before used newspapers were testing their use with such success locally that the campaigns were bound to become national in scope.

"Advertising is being gradually developed. It is being demonstrated more clearly that to newspaper advertising is due the credit of big achievements. This is not only true as to commercial manufacturing interests, but every interest that appeals to the general public. Newspaper advertising is undoubtedly the developer of all interests, commercial or public."

"The newspaper circulating and appealing directly to all readers (every member of the family) is the medium recognized generally as the most profitable one to use."—Edwin T. Jones.

At a vigilance luncheon of the Iowa Associated Ad Clubs held in Muscatine during their recent convention the clubs pledged themselves for $1,000 as a fund for possible legal expense in connection with giving the new Iowa Truth-in-Advertising Law a thorough test in the courts.

W. I. White, superintendent of immigration and director of the Canadian government's publicity bureau, in an address before the Columbus (Ohio) Advertising Club, emphasized the value to a nation of a well-organized publicity bureau by stating that Canada has spent $700,000 annually in attracting immigration to populate the farm lands of the Dominion. Through this advertising immigration of this kind to Canada in six years has increased from 4,000 to 40,000 yearly.

The value of a state organization of advertising clubs was never better demonstrated than at the recent meeting of the Associated Clubs of Iowa held at Muscatine.

There are 1,381 publications of all kinds now being issued in Canada, including 138 dailies, 4 tri-weeklies, 40 semi-weeklies, 921 weeklies, 222 monthlies, 1 bi-monthly and 16 quarterlies.

Those who read the Christian Science Monitor know that they read a paper strong in special articles and diversified in its array of correspondence.

What many of its readers do not know, however, is that the policy of editorial management savors somewhat of the old Chicago Times style and that a staff of old-time Chicago men have been directing it.

The late Archibald McLellan, a veteran Chicagoan in newspaper work, gradually assembled quite a string of fellow Westerners in the Monitor; John J. Flinn being one of the most noted.

The New York Tribune gave unusual publicity to the second Liberty Loan campaign by using original Liberty Loan posters as inserts in the Sunday issue of October 21st. In common with other New York morning newspapers, the Tribune also distributed bond application blanks.

A page Liberty Bond advertisement, which was prepared by the copy department of the Washington Post and run in the issue of October 24 is said by Business Manager Arthur D. Marks of the Post to have given the public the first news of President Wilson's $15,000 contribution to the Second Liberty Loan. In other words, it was an "advertising and newspaper scoop."

The Pittsburg Post, in observance of Liberty Loan Day, devoted the entire front page of its issue of that date to the Second Liberty Loan. Several Cabinet members sent messages to the Post for the occasion.

Through the efforts of Frank Armstrong, secretary of the Associated Vigilance Committee of Iowa, vigilance work in that state has been put on a strong footing.

"I have always felt that the right kind of publicity is education. The San Francisco Ad Club has done wonderful work in the standardization of goods and in educating the public to demand standardized goods, but it seems to me that too much attention has been paid to the selling side and not enough to the productive side."

This is what Dr. Aurelia H. Reinhardt told the members of the San Francisco Ad Club at their last week's luncheon in suggesting ways of extending the club's scope. The speaker said further:

"It is little wonder that today we are compelled to cooperate in the conservation of food. Statistics show that in the last decade productive farmers have increased 33 per cent in number, while the number of laborers in manufacturing has increased 103 per cent. The cold figures tell the story of frenzied conservation which is sweeping our country. We are not growing the things we should grow in the places they should grow. Educate the people along this line and better results will obtain."

PURELY PERSONAL.

John C. Shaffer, editor and publisher of the Shaffer list, has acquired 4000 acres of land in the Salt Creek oil field near Casper, Wyo., and organized the Chicago Oil Company with $5,000,000 capital to develop the field.

George V. Rogers, general manager of the New York Tribune, is on his vacation until November 1.

William Baldwin, editor and manager of the Medina (Ohio) Medina County Gazette, and previously editor of the Beacon-Journal, has been elected Grand Commander of the Grand Commandery of the Ohio division of the Knights Templar.

Horace H. Daugherty, Columbus correspondent for the Cleveland (Ohio) News, is the father of a new son.

J. Taylor Spink, of the St. Louis Sporting News, was one of the official scorers at the baseball world series.

Ethelene McCord of Gadsden, Ala., who has done newspaper work in her home town and in Birmingham, "hobnobbed" her way from Birmingham to Chicago last week looking for a newspaper job. Just yet she hasn't "landed," but her unusual feat earned rather general publicity for her in the Chicago papers.

Einar Graff is covering the state convention of the Illinois Federation of Labor at Joliet for the Chicago Herald.

A. O. Hilton, a former Rochford (Ill.) newspaper man, has been appointed superintendent of the Illinois Industrial Home for the Blind in Chicago.

Frank G. Weaver, night editor of the Grand Rapids (Mich.) Herald, is also handling the work of the state desk in view of the shortage of men in the office due to military inroads upon the staff.

Harold Myers, political reporter for the Scranton (Pa.) Republican, has been chosen publicity manager for the Republican county ticket in Lackawanna County, Pa.

Tom J. Brislin, sporting editor of the Scranton (Pa.) Republican, has been elected secretary-treasurer of the Providence Basketball Association.

Irving N. Brant, dramatic critic and special story writer for the Des Moines (Ia.) Register and Tribune, has returned to his desk after a short vacation with friends and relatives in and around Iowa City.

Gordon Williams, sports editor of the Johnstown (Pa.) Democrat, spent several days of his vacation in Scranton, where he was formerly employed on the Scranton Daily News.

C. A. Joseph, editor of the Farley (Ia.) Advertiser, has been seriously injured as the result of fall from a tree.

Arthur M. Howe, editor of the Brooklyn Eagle, has recently purchased a new residence in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Roger S. Steffen of the Cincinnati Times-Star was toastmaster at the Delta Chi Fraternity banquet in Columbus, Ohio, on October 19.

Percy Harrison, formerly Boston representative of the New York Sun and now a lieutenant in the Naval Reserve, was in from Machias, Me., recently to visit his many Boston friends.

Lieutenant Colonel J. A. Watrous U. S. A., who is a member of the staff of the Milwaukee Sentinel, is lecturing for the food administrator.

Riley P. Morton, a former Chicago suburban reporter and editor, has returned from a service of nine months in the American Red Cross military hospital in France and is giving occasional public talks relating his experiences.

Louis Wiley, business manager of the New York Times, was a speaker at the opening of the National Service Home Club for sailors, soldiers and marines in New York on October 25.

Emmett Phillips of the Sacramento (Cal.) News underwent a surgical operation last week in Lane's Hospital, San Francisco. He has been a sufferer from a gastric disorder for some time and the operation became necessary while he was on his vacation.

Oscar Eby, owner of the Hesperian (Ont.) Herald, has been appointed county registrar. Mr. Eby is one of the best known newspaper men in western Ontario.

H. L. Woods, editor of the Wellington (Kan.) News, recently underwent a successful operation for throat trouble.

M. C. Robbins, general manager of Iron Age and former president of the New York Press Association, was a recent speaker before the Chicago Advertising Association.

William Allen White of the Emporia (Kan.) Gazette, and Henry J. Allen, of the Wichita Eagle, who have been in France on a special Red Cross mission, have returned to the United States.

"Bob" Blake, formerly of the Chicago Tribune art department, but now a soldier at Camp Mills, N. Y., contributed a series of cartoons on army life recently to the Tribune.

Walter S. Wood of Chicago is the father of a boy, born last Saturday. Mr. Wood is publisher of Child Betterment.

Val Heath, for the past seven years editor of the Raymond (Wash.) Herald, is reported doing well after an operation at the Portland Surgical Hospital.

WEDDING BELLS.

John Draper Erwin, formerly Associated Press operator at Chattanooga, and now Washington correspondent for a number of Southern newspapers, was married on October 4 to Miss Emma Hicklin of Washington.

Miss Eva K. Jones, who for a number of years has been society editor of the Wilmington (Del.) Morning News, of which her brother, Royden K. Jones, is city editor, will shortly become the bride of Henry E. Hoffman of Newark, N. J.

Miss Frances Seitz, society editor of the Patchogue (N. Y.) Argus, and Frank Palmer Johnson of Patchogue were married on October 19.

NEW BASEBALL WRITERS' ASSOCIATION.

An aftermath of the recent world series is a movement to organize a so-called "deans' association" as an organization subsidiary to the Baseball Writers' Association. The membership will be limited to men who have been reporting major league baseball for not less than fifteen consecutive years.

Among those who are qualified to enroll in the new organization are:

Charles Dryden, Chicago Examiner; I. E. Sanborn, Chicago Tribune; Sam Crane, Joseph Villa and W. B. Hanna of New York; Thomas Rice, Brooklyn; W. G. Weart, George Young and J. C. Isaminger of Philadelphia; J. S. Jackson, Detroit and Harry P. Edwards, Cleveland.

VISITORS IN NEW YORK.

Among the visitors in New York during the past week were: Elbert H. Baker, publisher of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, and Frank P. Glass, editor of the Birmingham News.

STAFF CHANGES.

W. P. Epston, head copy reader of the San Francisco Call, who resigned to become Pacific Coast manager of the International News Service, has been succeeded by Fred Johnston.

Emile J. Gough, city editor of the San Francisco Call, is now the managing editor, taking the place of Robert R. Hiestand, who has joined the Examiner. Mr. Gough is also holding down the city desk.

Eugene B. Block has been made assistant editor of the San Francisco (Cal.) Call.

H. E. Eckert, former church editor on the Harrisburg (Pa.) Patriot, is now with the Evening News, in place of L. Paul Miller, who is at present on the mathematics staff of the Lewiston High School.

Colin E. Spangler, for ten years San Francisco correspondent for the Oakland (Cal.) Tribune, is now covering the city for the International News Service.

John R. M. Polk, formerly of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, is now with the Associated Press at St. Louis.

W. G. Long has resigned from the advertising staff of the Atlanta (Ga.) Journal to become connected with Brigrum Motors Company.

Charles Borjes, for several years staff photographer of the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot, is now connected with the photographic department of the Hall Optical Company, Norfolk, Va.

Angus McLean, who has conducted a newspaper in the West for the past six months, has rejoined the Forest (Ont.) Free Press staff.

Theodore Gillette, for many years Revere correspondent for the Boston Globe, has turned over that work to "Eddie" Supple.

Clarence M. Dillon has retired from the news staff of the Wilmington (Del.) Evening Journal to take up special publicity work. He is succeeded by Charles Baker, a former member of the staff.

Edward M. Cannon, who recently resigned as a member of the news staff of the Wilmington (Del.) Evening, to resume his studies at Delaware College, is doing special work for the Wilmington papers. His place on Every Evening has not yet been filled.

Joseph A. Rawlings, for several years a reporter on the Springfield (Ill.) State Register, has become a filing man with the Associated Press in Chicago.

Miss Constance Naar, daughter of the late Joseph L. Naar, for many years editor of the Trenton (N. J.) True American, has joined the staff of the Ridgewood (N. J.) Editor.

Miss Dorothy De Jagers a graduate of the school of journalism in the University of Missouri, has come to New York to join a magazine.

H. F. Doolittle, for the past ten years associated with his father, E. S. Doolittle, in publishing the Ellsworth (Wis.) Pierce County Herald, will edit the River Falls (Wis.) Journal during the absence of Stanley R. Morse, who has been drafted and is now serving as a corporal in Company D, 341st Infantry, at Camp Grant, Rockford, Ill.

J. B. McNeely has resigned as associate editor of the Fredonia (Ky.) News.

Miss Alice W. Proctor has assumed the management and editorship of the Byers (Kan.) Journal.

Roger B. Stafford has resigned as news editor of the Canton (Ohio) News to join the staff of the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Elliott McEldowney, former Detroit and Washington newspaper man, has joined the staff of the New York Evening Mail.

Jerome Walsh, formerly on the New York Evening World staff, has resigned to become publicity man for the Standard Brewing Company of Scranton, Pa.

Martin Hayes has been added to the city correspondence staff of the Scranton (Pa.) Republican.

T. E. Dillon is now managing the Valentine (Neb.) Democrat.

James E. Grube, formerly city editor of the Middletown (Ohio) Journal and later in Xenia, is now with the Columbus (Ohio) Dispatch.

Harold T. Slaughter of the advertising department of the Saginaw (Mich.) News has resigned because of poor health and will take up life anew as a farmer. He is succeeded by Harold C. Elson of the Flint Journal.

Arthur Myhrum is covering Wisconsin, Minnesota and Iowa for the Chicago Tribune in place of Chalmers L. Pancoast, who is now in New York for the Tribune in charge of the New England territory.

Miss Marion Lewis, who was a member of the staff of the University Daily Kansan, published at Lawrence, Kan., by the students of the University of Kansas, is now school editor of the Minneapolis Journal.

Will F. Gaddis has bought out the interest of his partner, Ellis Gaddis, in the Lovilia (Ia.) Press, the latter having gone to war.

NEWS NOTES OF CIRCULATORS.

Paul E. Eastland is circulation manager of the Rock Island (Ill.) Daily Union. Through error he was listed as representing the Rock Island Argus in the list of those attending the I.C.M.A. meeting in Atlanta, as printed in THE FOURTH ESTATE last week.

Sidney D. Long of the Wichita (Kan.) Eagle, is an enthusiast on Kansas oil properties. THE FOURTH ESTATE is just in receipt of a postal-photo from Mr. Long showing the newest 20,000-barrel Kansas "gusher" in full action. "This one well is producing $40,000 worth of oil a day; only twenty-two miles from the Eagle office. Pretty nice, isn't it?" notes Mr. Long.

Michael Cohen, formerly country circulator of the New Orleans Daily States, is now in charge of the circulation department of the Beaumont (Tex.) Daily Journal. Harry Herzog, late of the States, is Mr. Cohen's assistant.

The Blooming Prairie (Minn.) Times announces it will be mailed free to any Blooming Prairie volunteer whose address is given to the editor.

The Chetopa (Kan.) Advance and Clipper have advanced their subscription rates to $1.25 per year.

The date of the next meeting of the New York State Circulation Managers Association has been changed to November 15, instead of November 14. The shift was made necessary on account of plans of Syracuse members, in whose city the gathering will be held.

This association was organized in August with J. M. Annenberg of the Schenectady Union-Star as president, and those joining now are eligible for charter membership. The membership fee is $5, $3 of which must accompany the application. The other $2 must be remitted at the time the application is accepted.

The Newark (N. J.) Sunday Call will begin tomorrow to include a photograph section with each copy sold. The price of the Call remains the same.

As a supplement to the edition of October 19, the Jeanette (Pa.) News presented each reader with a copy of the booklet "How the War Came to America," issued by the Committee

It was also urged that family magazines and educational periodicals "increase their usefulness by maintaining well edited departments for the discussion of matters relating to personal and community hygiene" for "instruction of the people in the principles of hygiene and sanitation is instruction in how to live successfully and is fully as important as instruction in reading, writing and arithmetic."

C.M.A. OF I. TO MEET NOVEMBER 13.

PRESIDENT VANCELEVE WANTS EACH MEMBER TO GET ANOTHER ONE.

The next meeting of the Circulation Managers Association of Illinois will be held in Springfield on November 13, at the St. Nicholas Hotel. President L. V. Vancleve, of the Rockford Daily Republic says:

"A fine program has been prepared for this meeting and a profitable time is assured the membership of this rapidly growing organization.

"It is urged that each member secure a new member and get him or her to attend the Springfield convention.

"Although the C.M.A. of I. is less than a year old, much good work has already been done, and the membership has been quick to see the profitable opportunities presented by such an organization.

"Any circulation manager or publisher interested in this organization can get full details by writing.

"The C.M.A. of I. is made up of circulation managers who are full of 'pep' and enterprise and believe in getting together for their mutual interests and those of the publishers they represent."

CANADIAN CIRCULATORS NOW ORGANIZED.

TO WORK THROUGH NEW COMMITTEE OF THE C.P.A.—FIRST MEETING BRINGS IMPORTANT RECOMMENDATIONS.

At the first meeting of the newly formed Canadian Press Association's circulation committee, of which J. R. Henderson of the Montreal Gazette is the chairman, the number and importance of the resolutions adopted indicated the need for a committee to consider and deal with all matters affecting the circulation interests of the C.P.A. membership.

A most important matter dealt with by the committee was that of subscription rates. In this connection a resolution recommending rates for daily newspapers, weekly newspapers, and farm papers, respectively, was adopted.

Each publisher was particularly recommended to take steps to ascertain the actual cost of production of his publication as a guide in deciding the question of subscription rates. It is the opinion that if publishers will do this they will find that the recommendations of the circulation committee as to minimum subscription rates are quite justifiable.

The resolution is as follows:

"That it is the opinion of the circulation committee that in their efforts to meet the rising cost of production, publishers should depend on receipts from circulation to greater extent than has been the case in the past;

"And that it is also the opinion of the circulation committee that the rates quoted below would be practicable and reasonable as minimum rates for the various classes of publications listed:

"Daily newspapers: Single copy 2 cents, by mail $3 per year.

"Town and rural weekly and semi-weekly newspapers: $1.50 per year.

"Farm publications: $1.50 a year."

THE RETURN PRIVILEGE.

The circulation committee passed the following resolution regarding the allowance of returns:

"That in the opinion of the circulation committee the return privilege represents a waste of paper and an unnecessary expense to the publisher and should be discontinued."

Following a discussion on the question of complimentary copies, the committee summed up its views in the following resolution:

"That the circulation committee is of the opinion that while it may be advisable to give complimentary copies in some cases in which real service is given in exchange, the number of such complimentary copies should be reduced to a minimum, and in cases in which delivery must be made the party receiving the complimentary copy should pay the cost of delivery. And that the circulation committee recommends that each publisher should go over his complimentary mailing list at least once each month with a view to preventing the accumulation of names that might be deleted."

The committee placed itself on record in the following resolution regarding the use of premiums, voting contests, etc., as a means of promoting circulation.

"That while the use of premiums, special inducements and contests to secure subscriptions has grown to be widely unpopular with publishers generally, this committee believes that in the best interests of the publishers the practice should be wholly discontinued for the reasons that subscriptions so secured are in the end unstable and unprofitable and are obtained by an inducement other than the merit and value of the publication."

It was suggested that circulation managers in the various cities and towns should cooperate with each other in the matter of collection of accounts against wholesale dealers. Any circulation manager desiring to secure collection of an account against a wholesale dealer in another city or town may send particulars of such account to the central office of the C.P.A. in Toronto and steps will then be taken to secure the cooperation of the circulation managers in that particular town or city.

INCREASING PRICES.

The publisher of the Guelph (Ont.) Mercury has announced a new schedule of subscription rates to go into effect November 1. The subscription rates of the daily will be increased as follows: Delivered by carrier, from 35 cents to 45 cents a month and from $4 to $5 a year. By mail, reaching destination day after publication, from $2 to $3 a year. The Weekly Mercury subscription rate will be advanced from $1 to $1.50 per year to any point in Canada, outside of Guelph, and from $1.50 to $2 in the case of Guelph or United States subscribers.

At a meeting of the Wellington County Press Association, held at Elora, a resolution was unanimously adopted, recommending a minimum rate of $1.50 for all weekly papers in the district of 8 pages or more and a minimum of $1 for 4-page papers. The date agreed upon as the most desirable for putting the increase to $1.50 into effect was November 1 and it is understood the following newspapers have announced the $1.50 rate to apply on and after that date:

Guelph Mercury, Elora Express, Fergus News-Record, Palmerston Spectator, Arthur Enterprise, Harriston Review.

The Harriston Review, included in the above list, has had the $1.50 rate in force for some time and reports very satisfactory experience with it.

The Burford (Ont.) Advance has announced the $1.50 rate to go into effect January 1, 1918.

A raise to $1.50 and making that rate strictly in advance is the double accomplishment reported by Thornbury (Ont.) Review-Herald.

The Western Prairie, at Cypress River (Man.) put the new rate into effect October 1.

The Redcliff (Alta.) Review has been $1.50 ever since it commenced publication.

The Consort (Alta.) Enterprise reports having put the new rate into effect August 1, 1917, and that not a single subscription has been lost on that account. "We also find," says the Enterprise, "that renewals and new subscriptions are coming in just as well as before the raise."

"Complaints from subscribers as to the price of $1.50 are as rare as buffalo on these western prairies," says R. E. Johnson, publisher of the Meyronne (Sask.) Independent, which paper has had the $1.50 rate in force for more than a year.

The Wilkie (Sask.) Press, Miami (Man.) Herald, Strathclair (Man.) Plain Talk, Stirling (Ont.) Leader, Richmond Hill (Ont.) Liberal, Springfield (N. S.) Mining Journal, and Huntsville (Ont.) Forester, are other weeklies that have adopted the $1.50 rate.

NEW ENGLANDERS' NEXT MEETING.

IMPORTANT SUBJECTS TO BE DISCUSSED AT HARTFORD SESSIONS.

The New England Association of Circulation Managers will hold its next quarterly meeting at Hartford on November 8 and 9, in the assembly hall of the Chamber of Commerce. Among the subjects to be discussed will be:

"Distribution and promoting circulation through districts controlled by circulation departments," by J. P. Barry of the Providence (R. I.) Journal.

"Small city circulation—its value to the general advertiser and to what extent should newspapers cooperate," by Sidney Sibley of the Fitchburg (Mass.) Sentinel.

"The circulation problem met at the Ayer (Mass.) army cantonment," by George H. Reynolds of the New Bedford (Mass.) Standard.

"Abolishing the wholesale dealers and controlling the business from the office," Charles M. Schofield of the Worcester (Mass.) Gazette.

"College and preparatory school circulation," by Seth J. Moore of the Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

"How to hold up morning street sales in the winter," by H. R. Frickenhaus of the New Haven (Conn.) Journal-Courier.

"How to obtain the co-operation of newsboys in the running of a club organized for their benefit."

"Daily circulation—best methods of securing and retaining it in a small city."

While in Hartford, the members will inspect the Hartford Times plant and be the guests of the Times at a banquet in the Hartford Club.

On November 9, there will be an auto trip over the city.

TROUBLE OVER ARMY CAMP.

CIRCULATION MANAGERS TO APPEAL TO WASHINGTON ON CAMP DIX CASE.

Because of the high percentage demands made by authorities in charge of the post exchanges or canteens from persons holding the exclusive newspaper delivery concessions, and inability to perfect adequate distribution facilities, the New York and New Jersey newspapers on October 28 temporarily suspended shipments to Camp Dix at Wrightstown.

An automobile service was inaugurated instead and the circulation managers may appeal to Washington in behalf of the concessioner for a reduction in the (canteen's) demand.

George Emtage of New York, who for the past four weeks has been distributing the newspapers to the twelve canteens, has been losing, it is stated, more than $20 a day, while tons of the papers have gone to waste because he was unable to cover the extensive camp.

On September 18 the circulation managers made an arrangement with Captain Wanamaker, purchasing agent of the post exchanges, whereby Emtage was appointed the representative of the newspaper distributors. Emtage was allowed the wholesale price by the newspapers, but he was forced to pay to the canteens a fixed charge of 35 per cent gross. It was a losing proposition for Emtage from the very start and he told a committee of the circulation managers the extent this had reached.

Beginning on October 22 two automobiles were used by a new agent to get the papers to the canteens, the newspapers bearing the cost of these, and other overhead costs will be reduced.

At the same time the circulation managers will endeavor to secure a more favorable arrangement for the purchasing agent through recourse to the Army authorities.

SECRETARY IS HONORED.

In recognition of twenty-five years of service as secretary-treasurer of the Toronto Printing Company's Employees' Benefit Society, Thomas Jeffery has been presented by the members with an arm chair and pipe.

H. V. Ferguson made the presentation and read an address complimenting Mr. Jeffery on his conduct of the affairs of the society and expressing regret over his retirement.

CARR IN ATLANTA AGAIN.

"Jack" Carr went back to the Atlanta Georgian and Sunday American, Hearst publications, on October 20 as manager of the foreign department. He was formerly with those papers as assistant advertising manager under George Auer and later as advertising manager under Walter G. Bryan, now the publisher.

Although just thirty years of age, Mr. Carr has built a wide reputation as an advertising man. Starting some years ago as advertising manager for the Wilmington (Del.) Evening Journal, he has held that position for such papers as the Richmond (Va.) Evening Journal, the South Bend News Times and the Spokane (Wash.) Press. He was also connected with the Hearst papers in San Francisco before going to Atlanta three years ago.

Mr. Carr resigned as advertising manager last fall to open his own agency and letter shop in Atlanta, and in less than a year's time has built up a large business.

In appointing Jack Carr as foreign advertising manager Mr. Bryan is carrying out his plans for establishing a trade-aid service department of the Hearst papers in Atlanta.

EDITOR IN DISPUTE.

Thomas Callery, editor and publisher of the Nanticoke (Pa.) News, has caused a warrant to be issued for the arrest of Michael F. Shannon, lawyer and tax collector in Wilkes-Barre township, charging him with assault and battery.

To Newspaper Owners!

Is your newspaper the leader in its field?

Advertising and circulation up-to-the-limit?

Paying you a good liberal profit?

Not! Then it's in a rut and needs rejuvenating.

You need outside help.

I am a retired newspaper man with many years of varied and successful experience along the right lines and know how to put your property on a paying basis. Can make your paper the leader in its field and pay expenses out of increased business. Have doubled the income of many prosperous papers; put many a lagging on the road to success and saved some bad propositions from the shambles. Can do as much or more for you.

NOW CRITCHFIELD AND COMPANY.

WELL KNOWN CHICAGO FIRM CHANGES NAME OWING TO CLAGUE'S RETIREMENT.

The name of the Taylor-Critchfield-Clague Company, Chicago, has been amended to Critchfield & Company by the unanimous vote of its stockholders.

This means no change whatever in the personnel or control of the organization, except that Stanley Clague, whose release was granted a few weeks ago in order that he might accept the management of the audit bureau of circulations, is no longer connected with it.

Major E. E. Critchfield has been active in the company in an official capacity since the founding of the organization and has been its president for nearly six years. Under its new title the management of the organization, its standard of principles and the make up of its directorate are the same.

The home office of Critchfield & Company is in the Brooks building, Chicago, and important branches are maintained in New York, Boston, Detroit and Minneapolis.

The company's activities in the world of advertising and selling cover a period of twenty-five years. In addition to its work covering every department of advertising throughout this country, the company has established a successful export department and its sales and advertising operations extend to South American and European countries, to Japan, Australia and other parts of the world.

This formality in the way of change of name means no revision of policy. The company will continue to serve its clients in the way that has enabled it to arrive at its present position in the advertising field.

There are no changes, official or departmental, other than as above indicated.

NEW SPECIAL AGENCY APPOINTMENTS.

The Lockport (N. Y.) Niagara Daily Press, the Galt (Ont.) Reporter and L'Opinion, of Philadelphia have appointed the George H. David Company, New York and Chicago, to represent them in the national advertising field.

BUSH PLAN IN THE AGENCY FIELD.

NEW COMPANY ORGANIZED IN NEW YORK WITH J. F. ATKINSON AS MANAGER.

The Bush Advertising Service, Inc., of New York, has been organized to conduct a general advertising agency business. It is an extension of the Bush Service idea, which has been worked out so successfully in the vast Bush Terminal plant in South Brooklyn, where manufacturing, transportation and warehousing facilities are provided for manufacturers in practically all lines of business on a basis of efficiency and economy said to be without parallel.

The same idea prompted the organization of the Bush Sales Service and the erection of the thirty-story Bush Sales Building at 42d street and Broadway, New York, which when completed will house the sales and showrooms of many of the world's leading manufacturers, and on three of its floors will provide a luxurious home for the Buyers' Club of America.

The Bush Advertising Service, Inc., comprises in its organization men of broad experience in merchandising and advertising. Among them are W. R. Cummings, Frederick D. Hull, George F. Howard, F. K. Beebe, W. S. Manning and G. T. K. Norton.

The agency will occupy a floor in the new Bush Sales Building as soon as the building is ready, which will be about January 1. The present offices are at 100 Broad street, New York City.

A fully equipped office has been established in London, England, under the management of Louis M. Porter, and the agency expects to develop a considerable clientele among European manufacturers who are or may become interested in American markets.

The new agency claims to begin business with more than a dozen important magazine and newspaper accounts of national scope. The officers of the company are Irving T. Bush, president; J. F. Atkinson, vice-president and general manager; H. F. H. Reid, vice-president; R. G. Simmonds, treasurer; W. R. Cummings, secretary.

NEWS OF THE AD AGENCIES.

A. W. Hobler, for six years connected with the Appleton Manufacturing Company, has rejoined the staff of the Gardner Advertising Company, St. Louis, with which he was first associated upon leaving college.

The address of the C. J. Oliphant Advertising Agency, of New York, is 1 West 34th street, instead of 2 Rector street, as was printed in the recent Advertising Agents Directory published by THE FOURTH ESTATE.

E. G. Johnson, formerly of the copy department of the Chicago office of the J. Walter Thompson Company has joined the staff of Edwin & Wasey, Chicago.

Simon Ostrow, formerly of the advertising agency of Williams & Cunningham, Chicago, but who enlisted in Uncle Sam's service some time ago, has written to Chicago friends from "somewhere in France."

J. A. Sims has joined the service department of the William H. Rankin Advertising Agency, Chicago. He is the brother of J. D. Sims, private secretary to Mr. Rankin.

The directors of the H. E. Reisman Advertising Company, Chicago, have officers for the ensuing year as follows: H. E. Reisman, president and treasurer; J. A. Simpson, vice-president; H. J. Gray, vice-president; George E. Anderson, secretary.

F. H. Gillespie, formerly vice-president of the H. E. Reisman Advertising Company, has rejoined the Chicago agency staff of Erwin & Wasey.

Harry E. Myers, formerly of St. Louis and the Lord & Thomas Agency in Chicago, has become associated with Erwin & Wasey, Chicago.

The H. K. McCann Company of New York has enlarged its Cleveland office staff by the appointments of Harry L. Adams, formerly of the Baker Vawter Company and the Toledo Scale Company; Walter C. Barnes, late of the Garford Truck Company; and Paul Tees, who formerly conducted an agency of his own in Cleveland.

R. G. Zimmerman has been added to the staff of Cole & Freer, Chicago magazine representatives. He is from the William H. Rankin Agency.

E. St. Elmo Lewis and Clifford A. Sloan, vice-presidents, are now in charge of the New York office of the Campbell Ewald Company of Detroit, with headquarters at 347 Fifth avenue.

D. J. Hinman, late of Street & Finney, has become associated with the new W. A. Patterson Company, Inc., in New York.

The firm of Hutson-Burd-Wheaton, Inc., of New York City, has been chartered by the state to conduct a general advertising business. The organizers are A. H. Burd, E. F. Wheaton and E. J. Hutson of 305 West 98th street.

AD FOLKS' NEWS.

The Advertising Club of Atlanta, of which Frank E. Lowenstein is president, is devoting a large portion of its time and energy to civic affairs. To help carry out this policy a committee on public affairs has been appointed which takes precautions against making the organization a public forum, remembering that it is always an advertising club.

The association feels a responsibility in representing the advertising men of Atlanta, one of the pivotal cities of the South, and is attempting to pursue a course which will be a guidance for the other advertising clubs throughout its section of the country.

The educational committee of the club, headed by A. C. Keiser, teacher in advertising and member of the faculty of the commercial branch of the Georgia School of Technology, will formulate a publicity campaign for the Atlanta Anti-Tuberculosis Association, which contemplates an extensive educational campaign on home sanitation, symptoms, prevention and cure.

The vigilance committee is composed of R. S. Fahy, chairman, advertising manager of Chamberlin-Johnson-Dubose Company; C. H. Crawford, advertising manager of M. Rich & Brothers Company; and George Lowman, advertising manager of Byck Brothers & Company. The committee considers that its primary work will be along the lines of education and example until the community at large has been acquainted with the ideals for which it is striving.

George M. Leathers, formerly treasurer of the Henry O. Shepard Company, has been chosen by the directors of the Advertising Association of Chicago to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of Hugh Brennan, treasurer of the Dooley-Brennan Company.

Guy Core, formerly advertising manager of the Redden Motor Truck Company, has succeeded Robert T. Walsh as advertising manager of the Briscoe Motor Corporation, Jackson, Mich.

The first of the 1917 series of Tuesday-noon weekly luncheons of the Pilgrim Association of Boston was held on October 23.

Griffith E. Roberts, a Columbus (Ohio) advertising man, and Miss Emma G. Harris are to be married.

J. R. Phillips, who was in charge of service and advertising for the Sheldon Axle & Spring Company, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., for the past two years, has become assistant sales manager with the Torbensen Axle Company, Cleveland, Ohio.

Miss Mabel Graswinckel, formerly advertising manager of the American Steel Export Company, has been appointed art supervisor for the fashion division of Montgomery, Ward & Co. She will be located in New York.

Officer candidates of the Advertising Club of St. Louis have been nominated for the annual election, to be held at the City Club on October 30, as follows:

President, John Ring, Jr., advertising manager Mercantile Trust Company;

First vice-president, Max Kneingsberg, advertising manager Famous-Barr Company, and C. L. Brittain, Scruggs-Vandervoort & Barney Company;

Second vice-president, Arthur Siegel, St. Louis Poster Company, and Bert Barnett, advertising manager Friedman-Shelby Shoe Company;

Third vice-president, Edward Mead, Passaic Metal Ware Company, and H. O. Ross, Ross-Gould List & Letter Company;

Secretary, Charles R. Ketchum, St. Louis Republic;

Treasurer, F. H. Staley.

Following the election of officers on October 30 the following speakers will address the meeting: Sidney Wilson, president of the Cleveland Advertising Club; Don C. Seitz, business manager of the New York World; F. D. Gardner, governor of Missouri; Henry Kiel, mayor of St. Louis.

The governor and mayor are both members of the Ad Club of St. Louis. It is also expected that General W. W. Brandon of Alabama will be among the noted speakers for this event.

The San Francisco Ad Club will present "In Ad Land," a musical extravaganza, on November 22, 23 and 24 at the Savoy Theater to raise funds with which to entertain the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World at their annual convention in San Francisco next July.

The book and lyrics were written by George A. Cummings, a San Francisco business man, and the cast will include more than 100 young girls and men of the bay cities. Later the show will be sent through several states.

The production will be directed by "Jack" Reber and a committee composed of W. B. Reynolds, chairman; Albert M. Meyerfeld, Fred S. Nelson, Miss H. Coleman, George Caldwell, J. B. Bierma, Seth Heaney, Harry Marcus, Judson T. Sargeant and Don E. Gilman.

The Walter M. Lowney Company, cocoa and chocolate manufacturer, Boston, has become a member of the Association of National Advertisers, being represented by Harry R. Wellman, vice-president.

The Advertisers' Club of Jacksonville, Fla., is assisting in every possible manner in the food conservation campaign now being carried on throughout the nation. It has donated great banners, which hang across the city streets, urging the co-operation of the citizens.

R. C. Keagy of Clinton, Ia., is at the head of a new church advertising department of the Iowa Associated Ad Clubs. A recent church advertising luncheon was attended by numerous prominent laymen as well as clergymen, and it gave church advertising in that section great impetus.

At this week's luncheon of the Baltimore Advertising Club David I. Lewis of the United States Tariff Commission spoke on "National Economics."

Nominations were made to fill vacancies on the board of governors.

Speaking before members of the Columbus (Ohio) Advertising Club at luncheon W. G. Chandler of Cleveland declared that advertising copy is secondary in importance to the right selection of the medium through which to "tell the story."

He declared a great many people are too prone to select their advertising mediums because of their physical appearance rather than the class of readers to whom they go.

Ellis L. Howland, New York, special representative of the national industrial conservation movement, said: "The American consumer must be taught that every bit of labor trouble or unwise business legislation reacts disastrously, not alone upon the nation, but upon himself, affecting him in a hundred different ways, the most obvious of which is the inflation in the cost of living, due to the increased cost of production."

With all other club activities placed in the background, President Frank Effinger of the Advertisers Club of Milwaukee called for a big All American demonstration meeting at which the main topic of discussion was "Loyalty versus Disloyalty."

The course in advertising at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, will be conducted along lines somewhat different from methods heretofore pursued.

Students in the course will receive instruction relative to analyzing a business, merchandising its products or service, planning its advertising campaign and the execution of the advertising to the very last detail.

E. Lyell Guntz, formerly president of the Baltimore Advertising Club and now chairman of the education committee of that association, will conduct the advertising course.

The salesmanship course will be directed by E. C. Palmer, chairman of the Advertising Club's salesmanship section.

Willard S. French, formerly with the C. S. Von Poettgen Advertising Agency and at one time advertising manager of the Denby Motor Company, is now director of the sales for the Monarch Governor Company, Detroit.

The course in public speaking at the New York Advertising Club will begin on Monday, November 12, and will continue, under the tutelage of Professor J. A. Mosher of the College of the City of New York every Monday thereafter for ten weeks. The fee for the course is $10.

The club will hold its first annual "Harvest Home Festival" on October 30. The affair will be informal and it has been arranged to have thirty tables, seating ten persons each.

In co-operation with the Pilgrim Publicity Association of Boston, the Boston Y.M.C.A. is giving a course in "Newspaper Making and Publicity" which began on October 23 and will consist of fifteen sessions. Pilgrim John D. Allen is conducting the course, for which the registration fee is $6.

Preparation will include news gathering and writing, editorial and advertisement writing, proof-reading, make-up, subscription solicitation and record keeping, advertising solicitation and newspaper accounting.

In an address before the Minnesota Advertising Forum, Charles W. Mears, advertising director of the Winton Automobile Company, Cleveland, Ohio, attacked those who are asking all to "spend less and save more," and declared that conservation of the products of nature rather than of mere money is what should be effected.

The speaker showed that the market, or business, furnishes the only medium through which the billions of dollars needed for Government use during the war may be obtained, and that without this medium the resources of the country, the hope of the Allies, must dwindle to nothing.

INTRODUCING AD FOLKS.

Freling Foster, who recently joined the merchandising staff of the Society for Electrical Development, in New York, has been active in electrical advertising circles of Chicago for several years.

For the past year and a half, he was advertising manager of the Hughes Electric Heating Company.

FRELING FOSTER.

Previously to this, he was connected with the Chicago office of the Electrical World and the publicity department of the Commonwealth Edison Company where he was associate editor of the Electric City Magazine for more than two years.

His agency experience was gained at the former Mahin Advertising Company and in newspaper writing he received his initial training as the dramatic editor of the Chicago Saturday Evening Telegraph.

John J. Cuddy, the new account executive of the San Francisco office of the H. K. McCann Company, is still in his twenties, having been born in New York City in 1890. Forced to leave college because of family trouble, Mr. Cuddy secured a position with the National Bank of Commerce, New York, at the same time attending business courses at night at New York University.

He next affiliated himself with the National Biscuit Company and in six months became bakery foreman in the New York plant, meanwhile studying cost accounting, manufacturing efficiency, welfare work and factory organization, and continuing his study of the classics and doing some short story writing.

After two years in the factory he went with the Frank Seaman Agency, New York. He later obtained a position with the New York Times, but remained only a few months before becoming assistant advertising manager of the Royal Typewriter Company.

On the first of January, 1915, Mr. Cuddy became advertising manager of that concern, and for over two years conducted extensive campaigns for the Royal Typewriter, also editing the company's house organ. He terminated his connection with the Royal Typewriter Company to go to San Francisco to fill the position he now holds.

ANNUAL KANSAS MEETING.

Editors of the fifty-seven newspapers in the Second Congressional District of Kansas held their annual meeting at Lawrence, October 26-27.

George W. Marble of the Fort Scott Tribune and Monitor; E. R. Heisler of the Kansas City Sun, and A. F. Converse of the Wellsville Sun were among the speakers.

BOOKS USEFUL TO EDITORS AND ADVERTISERS.

"THE NEW BUSINESS DEPARTMENT," by T. D. MacGregor; the Bankers Publishing Company, publisher.

It is unfortunate that this little volume is dedicated so definitely to banking institutions, for the idea of a new business department is applicable to any commercial or trading organization. The department is intended to afford a definite channel for the efforts of officers and employees of any company to obtain new business for all departments. The principles involved and methods used are clearly stated by Mr. MacGregor and can be utilized to advantage in any company having goods or service to sell.

"GRAPHIC CHARTS FOR THE BUSINESS MAN," by Stephen Gilman, B. Sc., C.P.A.; La Salle Extension University, publisher.

The use of any means of graphical representation in the business world is a comparatively recent development. The use of charts is rapidly spreading. The data thus presented is so much more rapidly grasped that the chart form is bound to replace wherever possible the statistical form. Any business man who is not familiar with chart methods and their possibilities should acquire this information at once. This pamphlet, one of a series of lectures in the La Salle Extension Courses, will be helpful.

"THE THEORY AND PRACTICE OF SCIENTIFIC MANAGEMENT," by C. Bertrand Thompson; Houghton-Mifflin Company, publisher.

Mr. Thompson, who has taken a considerable part in the more recent developments of scientific management, is thoroughly qualified to present this summary of the movement. The literature of the science of management has been so voluminous that a definite need has existed for a classification of works and an orderly presentation of the results they have disclosed. The bibliography appended is of carefully selected titles and the error of being all-inclusive is happily eliminated from this portion of the book. This book should receive the attention of all those who are students of scientific management, and will direct to the proper reading source the interest of the more general reader.

"ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT OF MODERN EUROPE," by Frederic Austin Ogg, Ph.D., associate professor of political science in the University of Wisconsin; Macmillan Company, publisher.

The author of "The Governments of Europe" and "Social Progress in Contemporary Europe" presents in this history a most elaborate and painstaking compendium. Professor Ogg's purpose is to indicate the origins, and explain the character and effects of the more important economic changes in Europe during the last three hundred years. The greater share of the reader's attention is directed to the great development in labor organization, trade expansion, socialism and social insurance. These are, of course, more interesting than the more technical phases of economic discussion. The book will be found useful to those who desire to found their knowledge on logical exposition of fact and not on the less studied and more easily harbored basis of prejudiced opinion.

"SCIENTIFIC OFFICE MANAGEMENT," by W. H. Leffingwell; A. W. Shaw Company, publisher.

While the manufacturing problems of the commercial world were being studied and solutions offered by the followers of scientific management, very little has been heard of the application of the science to office management problems. The comprehensive treatise has been missing until the publication of this book—"a report on the results of applications of the Taylor System of Scientific Management to offices, supplemented with a discussion of how to obtain the most important of these results."

The book is exceptionally rich in suggestions adaptable for immediate and profitable use in any office employing even a small clerical force. The photographic illustrations are particularly well chosen and serve to strengthen many of the suggestions. The publishers have already issued several supplementary pamphlets in connection with the book and no doubt intend to continue this policy, which is an interesting innovation.

An "Office Manual" is issued (by the same publishers) which includes a suggested "Policy Book" and "Standard Practice Instructions." This manual serves as a model both as to form and as to subject matter in assembling and compiling a manual for use in one's own organization. Mr. Leffingwell's book has already met with the praise of century wide interest and use.

"THE 1918 LOCKWOOD'S DIRECTORY OF THE PAPER AND STATIONERY TRADES"; Lockwood Trade Journal Company, Inc., publisher.

This is the forty-third annual appearance of this standard work that is indispensable to anybody having anything to do with the paper trade. All the departments have been revised and expanded this year, and several new features add to the usefulness of the directory. The mill section especially has been considerably enlarged by the addition of data on the numerous mills that have been erected in the United States and Canada in the past year. The publishers note that "not for a long time has it been necessary to record so many new enterprises in any edition." Changes in equipment and ownership are more numerous than usual.

"PRACTICAL FOOD ECONOMY," by Alice Gitchell Kirk; Little, Brown & Co., publisher.

The "gospel of the clean plate" is here written—not for the dining room alone, but for the kitchen also. Mrs. Kirk presents her suggestions in a simple and practical manner, and the housekeeper who desires to do "her bit" in food planning and food saving will find aid in this book.

"HOSPITAL FRENCH," translated by Ernest Perrin; E. P. Dutton & Co., publishers.

The practical nature of the conversation (English-French) given in this little book is its most striking feature. It was prepared under the auspices of the base hospital division, New York County Chapter of the American Red Cross, for use by the doctors and nurses of the hospital units working in the base hospitals in France.

The Kansas State High School Editorial Association recently met in convention at Salina.

INK PENETRATION OF PAPER.

The penetration of paper by ink varies with the fineness of the paper fibers; in woodpulp papers the varnish easily penetrates to the back side of the paper.

If the printed paper is dried at too high a temperature, the varnish penetrates quickly and the pigment separates on the surface and is easily rubbed off; the drying temperature should not exceed 50 degrees Centigrade.

Drying may be carried out above 50 degrees Centigrade, however, if manganese borate be added to the printing ink.

Rosin size, though effective in preventing penetration of writing ink in writing papers, does not prevent the penetration of printing ink varnish; indeed the varnish penetrates a paper containing 20 per cent of rosin size more readily than it does unsized paper.

MUNCIE CHANGES.

Leon Parkinson, formerly of the Muncie (Ind.) Star, is now with the Richmond (Ind.) Palladium.

Mr. Parkinson has been succeeded on the Star by John L. Ferris, who for the past seven years has been employed by the Muncie Evening Press, first as Winchester correspondent and later as police reporter in Muncie.

Arthur De Greve of Hartford City, Ind., has taken the place of Mr. Ferris at the Muncie Press.

ADAMS' NEW BOOK

TOLEDO BLADE EMPLOYEES "ON THEIR TOES."

Forced measures and precautionary measures due to the war situation are serving to keep Toledo Blade employees "on their toes." To date eighteen employees have either enlisted or been called in the draft.

The ones on the job are learning to stop the leaks in war times and throughout the plant places where possibilities of breakdowns show up are strengthened.

Throughout Ohio possibilities for a continuous gas supply for this winter are not promising so a hydro-carbon gas system has been ordered for the stereotype room.

In the composing room a type and and rule caster has been added to key in with the non-distribution system on which the room has been operating with remarkable results for two years.

In the press room provision has been made for the storage of a large number of extra gears and other parts, which are likely to break and hold up one of the presses.

Blade employees have subscribed for $15,000 worth of Liberty Bonds of the first issue and will probably duplicate this on the second issue. The Blade Company purchased $50,000 worth.

Grove Patterson, managing editor and silver-tongued orator, has preached purchase of Liberty Bonds, not only through the columns of the Blade but has spoken on behalf of the issue in church pulpits, on movie stages and from the balconies of department stores.

GOVERNMENT MAY HAVE NEW PUBLICITY BUREAU.

A bill that has been referred to the Senate committee on commerce provides for the establishment of a publicity bureau to be conducted in connection with the Department of Commerce at Washington.

The board will have an experienced advertising man as director, and a publicity conference board consisting of all the cabinet members will meet with him from time to time and outline the publicity needs of each of their departments.

The bureau is to keep on file at all times data relative to all representative advertising media in foreign countries; also other data reported by American consuls. Foreign advertising experts are to be employed, and advertising campaigns are to be planned for foreign countries "to promote prestige and public favor for American colleges, institutions, merchandise and service of all kinds, which it is desired to promote abroad."

The bill, in addition, provides that "the bureau of publicity shall co-operate with all organized interests in promoting and in securing legislation to compel honesty and reliability in both the domestic and foreign advertising of all firms, individuals and institutions, and is authorized to employ counsel or experts in the furtherance of this work, subject to the approval of the publicity conference board."

WAR PICTURING IS RISKY.

Donald Thompson, a war photographer who has just returned from Petrograd, declares that the physical risks run by newspaper men in Russia are greater than ever. After being saved by a crowd in Petrograd, Thompson was picked up by an armored automobile and fired on by a man later identified as a German spy. He expects to return to Europe to represent Leslie's weekly, New York, as soon as he completes arrangements for the production of his new film.

OHIO AD OPPORTUNITIES.

The Select List of Ohio Dailies has issued a publication called "Ohio Opportunities" devoted exclusively to furnishing information of value to national advertisers and advertising agents on advertising opportunities in their state.

William O. Littick of the Zanesville Time-Recorder is president of the Ohio Select List and Robert E. Ward of Chicago and New York is its national representative.

illustrated newspaper called Curb News, containing stock market news, editorials, cartoons and biographical sketches.

Mr. Hopkins, who is a former newsboy, reporter, advertising man and photo-engraving house manager, last year opened up an investment security business of his own. This venture was closely followed by the entry of the United States into the war, and the resulting unsettlement of investment conditions caused him to close up shop, after which he was connected with a number of Wall Street houses in editorial and publicity capacities. He says that from what he has learned outside he is more than ever convinced that the old firm is "the only place." His office is at 50 Broad street.

The Bronte (Tex.) Enterprise has suspended publication.

COAL EMBARGO EFFECT ON CANADIAN PULP.

Commenting on the United States embargo on the shipment of coal to Canada, the Pulp and Paper Magazine of Canada says:

"If it continues till the close of navigation it seems certain that some localities will suffer severely this winter.

"The irregular receipt of bituminous coal from the United States due to the shortage of both fuel and cars is being felt by many paper mills and has caused anxiety with other industrial firms at Ottawa.

"None of the paper plants so far have the supply of coal they should have or which they stocked or placed in reserve in peace times. Already some of the plants have to draw on their reserves on account of the irregular shipments.

"Prospects for a regular delivery sufficient to permit storing of reserve supplies appeared to be bright in July and August, but during September irregular shipments to the paper mills were made with the result that the outlook for the present, considering present stocks, is none too bright."

A TEXAS CITY EDITOR'S WAR PROBLEMS.

The hair of "Bert" J. McLean, city editor of the San Antonio (Tex.) Light, is getting grayer every day and now he has come to the long postponed alternative of replacing the men with women.

Just one instance of his troubles—Lieutenant Hare, financial editor and reporter, secured his commission. McLean took Lansing Beach from another run and put him on Hare's work.

Then Coulter got his commission. McLean hired a "cub" and had Beach train him so that Beach could take Coulter's place on the Army "run." Beach had been refused on physical disqualification for the training camp, the Regular Army, the Marine Corps, the Aviation Section and the Motor Cycle Corps in turn, so McLean felt reasonably certain he would stay and cover what is now one of the most important "runs" of the Light.

Two weeks ago Beach went to McLean with the request that he be given a week off in which to make a trip to Canada, explaining that he thought perhaps the Canadians had by this time eliminated some of the fancy ideas regarding physical fitness and would accept him for service.

His "boss" had no alternative but to let him go, and anyway he felt reasonably sure Beach would return. A week later, just after the copy-carrier had quit and a reporter doing the camps had announced that he was going to return to school (a decision made suddenly) along came a mee-sage from Beach: "The maple leaf forever. Have been accepted."

McLean says he went home that night and dreamed dreams of having to tear down the Rocky Mountains with a soldier's trench shovel as his only weapon.

Another instance: McLean had a man handling the National Army camp in El Paso—and it takes all of one man's time—paying him $30 a week. The Bureau of Investigation secret service department offered him a job at $40.

McLean next secured a man from Albuquerque, N. M., who worked eight days and then quit between two daylight. John Olive, secured from Houston, is now handling that job. The last word from McLean is:

"The same kaleidoscopic procedure has attended the filling of each of the other jobs left vacant by the boys who have gone to fight democracy's battles and left us poor unfit or aged ones to cope as best we can with the less glory but none the less onerous problems far from the front."

U. G. BAKER NOW AN OWNER.

U. Grant Baker, since 1907 editor of the Towanda (Pa.) Daily Review, has purchased of former State Treasurer C. Fred Wright and his son, F. Miller Wright, the Transcript Publishing business at Susquehanna, Pa.

The property includes the Evening Transcript, an afternoon paper, and the Weekly Ledger. Mr. Baker, who has had 23 years experience in all departments of the newspaper business, plans many improvements, including a special news service by direct wire, typesetting machine, etc. Mr. Baker learned the printer's trade in the Towanda Review office, and after eight years at the case, city collector, and special reporter, he became circulation manager of the Burlington (Vt.) Evening News and from there went to Toronto, Ohio, where for four years he was managing editor of the Evening Tribune. For a short time he was on the Akron Times-Democrat and in 1907 he went back to the Review at Towanda, as editor.

STREET COLLECTION BOXES FOR SOLDIERS' "SMOKES."

The Rock Island (Ill.) Daily Union is now further prepared to boost the "Smokes for Soldiers" fund. Fifty-two boxes have been placed in as many places of business scattered all over the city, where those who wish to bring cheer to Rock Island boys, in training camp, or when the time comes for them to join their comrades over seas, who are fighting in France, can have ready access to them.

The coins dropped into these boxes will be collected every Saturday and a constant stream of the "smokes" will be kept going to the boys who have gone from the city to answer the country's call.

TWO GOOD BOOKS.

John B. Woodward, advertising manager of the Chicago Daily News, heartily recommends reading two new books—"Christine" by Alice Cholmondeley; and "Salt of the Earth," by Mrs. Sidgwick. Mr. Woodward says:

"These are important books at this time of national crisis, for they make you see how the German thinks. They show, better than any propaganda could show, just why we are at war with Prussianism. Besides the message they bring, they are excellent stories."

The latest books, the best of the latest books and the people who write them are discussed each week in the Wednesday book pages of the Chicago Daily News.

TYPEWRITING CHAMPION.

At the annual Business Show in New York the typewriting contest for the international championship title and a $1,000 trophy cup was won by Miss Margaret Owens, who has held the title and trophy for four years. Her record was 143 words a minute for an hour. Miss Hortense Stollnitz who maintained a speed of 142 words a minute, was second, and Miss Bessie Friedman was third. She also had a speed of 142 words a minute, but in the counting up of work it was decided by the Committee on Awards that she was just a fraction of a word behind Miss Stollnitz.

NEW YORK CHICAGO ST. LOUIS

NOW ONE PAPER IN SARNIA.

The Sarnia (Ont.) Daily Observer and the Weekly Canadian have been purchased and merged by a new company consisting of Leslie Macdams of the Canadian Printing Company, president; Andrew D. McKenzie, late of the St. Thomas Times, vice-president and managing director; and W. M. Lowrie, late of the Petrolia Topic.

The retiring owner of the papers is Henry Gorman. This amalgamation will make Sarnia a one-paper town. Port Huron, a city of 20,000 population across the St. Clair River, in Michigan, has only one newspaper, the Times-Herald.

For some years there was a third paper in Sarnia—the Post, but it ceased publication some time ago.

On his departure for Sarnia the business men of St. Thomas, where he was business manager of the Times, presented Mr. McKenzie with a purse of gold. The Times editorial department gave him an equipped club bag and the business department a gold handled umbrella. Mr. McKenzie has been connected with the St. Thomas Times ever since his youth, having entered its employ as an apprentice shortly before it was disposed of by the late Jonathan Wilkinson. He rapidly worked up to advertising manager and about five years ago was made business manager.

CHANGES IN CHARLESTON.

C. V. Talbott, formerly of the East Liverpool (Ohio) Tribune, is now news editor of the Charleston (W. Va.) Mail, succeeding Walter D. Sullivan, who is covering the State House.

Kyle S. Crichton is the new Federal Court man on the Mail in place of Charles J. Boling, now at Camp Lee, Va.

Albert V. Evans, formerly of the Columbus (Ohio) Dispatch, is now covering the Mail's county court beat.

JUDGE NO LONGER EDITOR.

George B. Heath has resigned as editor of the Tower (Minn.) News and will devote himself entirely to his duties as municipal judge until the expiration of his term, February 1, 1918.

Before going to Tower, Mr. Heath had been connected with the Coleraine (Minn.) Itasca Iron News.

Morton L. Piper, formerly of the Binghamton (N. Y.) Press, is taking the place of Howard Mingo, who is doing recruiting work for the Army at Williamsport.

Local commercial photographers are doing the work of William Hagleton, who has been given a commission.

Jerome Myers, a member of the news force, is filling the position of George Somarindyk, Jr., of the advertising department, who has enlisted with the infantry.

Miss Marjorie David, a graduate of Syracuse University, is doing women's assignments and society.

NOT A SPY.

Charles T. Cunningham, a former New York newspaper man, was arrested as a spy at the Federal Aviation School, New York, on October 15, but was released the next day when examined by the assistant United States district attorney.

He had been working at the new war plant and his presence among all foreign born men had aroused suspicion.

HOW NATIONAL ADVERTISING CUTS DEALERS' RENTS.

(Copyright, Mallory, Mitchell & Faust.)

It is a matter of economy for dealers to handle advertised products. Especially is this true in case of the retail grocer.

Economy in any business may be secured in three ways:

The expenses of conducting a business may be grouped under four general heads, viz.: (1) rent for land and building, (2) wages and salaries for employees, (3) interest on capital invested, and (4) general overhead.
Economy, then, may be secured by paying less rent, less interest, or by reducing the general overhead.

A previous article pointed out how the handling of advertised brands results in economy of wages, fewer clerks being necessary to handle the same volume of business. The present article shows how economy in rent is secured by handling advertised brands.

This is based upon the principle of consumer acceptance previously explained. Since customers are ready to accept advertised brands, it follows that dealers may specialize on fewer brands in each line.

This means a dealer will not require as large a stock in order to do the same business. For if he carries unadvertised brands he will find it necessary also to carry some advertised brands of the same product to meet the demand of a part of his trade who will insist upon the advertised goods.

By specializing on the advertised brands which all will readily accept, a smaller stock is required, hence less shelf room for displaying the goods.

The dealer will either require less room in which to conduct his business or he can utilize the same space to better advantage by giving better displays or more displays, either of which leads to the same results—economy of space, or of rent.

It is a matter of rent economy for the dealer to handle advertised brands.

THE AD MAN'S PLACE IN OUR AFTER-WAR PROBLEMS.

Members of the New York Advertising Club are still talking about the splendid address made to them by Francis H. Sisson, vice-president of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, on October 4 regarding the problems that will confront this country after the war and the sharp commercial and financial readjustments that will then be necessary.
Mr. Sisson declared:

"One of the surest of the great things that we see looking out across 'No Man's Land' into the future is national unity.
This must be born of war. We must have national unity if we are to meet with our fullest power both our enemies from without and our enemies from within. There must be no North and no South, no West and no East, no classes and no masses. In unity of feeling and community interests we must move on as one people to our great common task, and this unity must endure.

"No one can be more helpful and spread better understandings than the advertising man, and herein lies a large field of usefulness for all those who deal in the written or spoken word.

"We need to know each other better, to know the problems of the other fellow, and to be able to explain each to the other. There is no more important function in big business today than that of interpreter, and none better able to fill that function than advertising men.

"At such a time as this, all of our emphasis should be placed upon our points of agreement rather than upon our points of difference. That the producer should understand the consumer; that capital should understand labor; that the banker should understand the business man is quite as important as that labor should understand the producer and that the business man understand the advertiser.
But to those of us who are admitted behind the curtains, the duty develops to attempt this explanation in the mediums at our command."

AIDS MEN IN SERVICE.

The Fighters' Service Bureau organized by the Minneapolis Journal, to keep the men of the Northwest who are in Government service in touch with the "folks back home," is prepared to be of immense value.
The bureau has on file the names of thousands of women and girls who are prepared to aid in driving "loneliness, discouragement and discomfort from the ranks of the soldiers, sailors and marines."

So successful has this project been, says the Journal Bureau, that when a young woman recently wrote the War Department asking for names of soldiers she and her friends wished to write to, the department sent her the literature of the Fighters' Service Bureau with the notation that it was the only place in the United States where she could get this information.

A.N.P.A. SAYS: "DON'T SIGN NEW PAPER CONTRACTS"

UNLESS PRICE IS IN VICINITY OF THREE CENTS AND THE TERMS MADE ARE AGREEABLE.

The paper committee of the American Newspaper Publishers Association authorizes the advice to publishers that they do not sign any contracts for 1917, except at a price in the vicinity of three cents, f. o. b. mill, and except the contract is offered on a basis in accordance with the recommendations of the paper committee and the Federal Trade Commission regarding standard contract.

The reasons for the committee making such recommendations are as follows:

"1. From all figures taken from reports of the News Print Manufacturers Association and the Federal Trade Commission, which were made available last week, there appears to be a very substantial increase in production available for this market.

"2. The difference between exports and imports is increasing favorably.

"3. The paper committee has brought into this market 65,000 tons of Newfoundland paper.

"4. Publishers throughout the country are going to two cents, cutting out returns and eliminating wastes, as a consequence of which the consumption of news print has been reduced substantially.

"5. No substantial increases in circulation are anticipated under war conditions, as the high point has already been reached.

"6. Advertising statistics show that the figures for this winter will run slightly below those of last year.

"7. It is estimated that there is in storage 200,000 tons of paper at mills and in publishers' warehouses. Most large publishers have from two to eight months' supply already in the warehouse.

"For these reasons, the paper committee is of the opinion that publishers' interests from past indications will be best served by buying in the open market; unless a publisher is offered a contract at an attractive price and under more reasonable conditions, he would be better off to buy on firm orders or short contracts during 1918.

"In addition to this, manufacturing conditions are very uncertain for next year.

"Labor troubles are in sight.

"Next August or September may see a wood shortage although there is plenty at the present time.

"The world is undergoing such rapid changes that none can forecast accurately conditions in future.

"Manufacturers making a year's price, in view of these conditions, will always estimate high and provide for contingencies all breaking against them, so that the publisher would be asked to pay a very much higher price than he should for no other reason than because he was buying on a year's contract."

For all these reasons, the committee has unanimously recommended publishers to accept contracts only under the above conditions and when the terms thereof fulfill the following requirements, which were submitted to the Federal Trade Commission in connection with the standard contract agreed on by the manufacturers last year, which follows:

A.N.P.A. RECOMMENDATIONS.

"The marketing of news print has already been surrounded by peculiar customs which have been the cause of much friction.

"One of these customs has been that the purchaser has been able to secure title only when the product has been consumed.

"Another has been an inability to purchase any at all until the ultimate consumer has been disclosed and then only for use for a certain specified publication.

"Under such conditions news print contracted for and delivered, but not consumed, during the life of the contract remained subject to the directions of the vendor.

"In fact, the purchase of news print in an open market for such use as the purchaser may wish has been and still is an impossibility.

"This method of control of the product by the manufacturers has been the cause of many abuses and is so pregnant with friction that it would seem that so long as it prevails, disputes and misunderstandings will be so frequent that friendly relations between the contracting parties may not be expected to ensue.

"But unbusinesslike and uneconomical as were these conditions matters have been made much worse by the introduction during the latter part of 1916 of a standard contract form, forced upon consumers at a time of helplessness, by the manufacturers acting in concert.

"These additional hardships upon the consumer by the manufacturer's unity of action may be summarized as follows:

FORMER CONTRACT.	PRESIDENT CONTRACT.
1. F. O. B. sidewalk or cars publisher's city.	1. F. O. B. mill.
2. Tonnage required for the publication of a specified paper, to be taken as ordered.	2. A specific number of tons, taken in equal monthly installments.
3. Payment 30th of the month.	3. 15th of the month for all paper shipped previous month.
4. Cores. Freight paid by mill.	4. Freight paid by publisher.
5. Weight specified.	5. Not exactly specified, but of substantially 24x36 28-500," variation of 5 per cent.

"1. The selling of paper f. o. b. mill is a great hardship on publishers due to their inexperience in the handling of traffic matters. Paper is the only material in their business with which they are concerned in this way. The average quantity of paper used by all but the very largest publishers is not more than 25 cars a year. It would, therefore, be impossible for such a small amount of individual business to carry a traffic department. Experience has shown that the handling of such business requires an expert, otherwise losses and overcharge creep in very rapidly. Paper mills have large quantities of supplies to handle and must maintain traffic departments.

"On account of their experience and

OVERWEIGHT PAPER ROBS PUBLISHERS.

STARTLING STATEMENT BY A.N.P.A. PAPER COMMITTEE'S EXPERT—STEPS TO PROTECT CONSUMERS,

There is no single element in the present conditions in the manufacture of news print paper which affects publishers so detrimentally as overweight.

Publishers have by all kinds of economies saved paper, have cut the sizes of their rolls to the very minimum and watched every possible leak, but all this economy has been considerably offset by the practice in the past year of mills running overweight on their paper.

In an interview with THE FOURTH ESTATE yesterday A. G. McIntyre, special representative of the American Newspaper Publishers Association paper committee, said:

"A standard sheet of news print paper weighs 32 pounds for 500 sheets, measuring 24 by 36 inches.

"The standard contract imposed on publishers under duress by manufacturers last year gave them a leeway of 5 per cent, which means that mills may go as high under that contract as 33.6 pounds.

"Many mills have, however, even in violation of such a wide open contract gone to 34 and 35 pounds.

"Overweight has been the easiest method of overselling to the publisher, for the mills, relying on the carelessness of most publishers in checking, can usually get by.

"A few publishers have undertaken to check these weights and have invariably found mills running substantially over standard news print.

The paper committee has recommended that publishers do not sign any contracts for next year with this 5 per cent clause therein.

"The attempts to increase their weights by the manufacturers has been deliberate in many cases and necessitated by the fact that the heavy reduction of sulphite percentage required an increase in the weight of the paper to hold it together and make it go over the machine.

"The table accompanying shows just how these overweights affect the price of paper, so that a publisher buying from a mill that runs heavy to overweights may easily see whether he is paying too much money.

ELEVEN PER CENT OVERWEIGHT.

"Records made in this office show that some mills are running as high as 11 per cent overweight.

"This is a matter of such vital importance that the paper committee has gone so far as to recommend to publishers not to sign contracts at all for 1918, which contain this clause, but to insist that a reasonable maximum be fixed, certainly not more than half a pound limit, the contract to state the average weight of the paper supplied not to run over 32 pounds with a maximum of not more than 32.5 pounds in any particular parcel of the paper.

"Paper mills can run very close to weight, but a variation of one-half a pound is more than sufficient for a well operated mill.

"Mills formerly ran on a production basis and many now run on a yardage per ton basis. All the mills supplying paper to England have guaranteed a ton-yardage, which makes a much closer guarantee of weight than a variation of half-a-pound.

"The paper manufactured by the Anglo-Newfoundland Development Company for its English consumers does not have a total minimum to maximum variation of one-third of a pound, in spite of which American manufacturers claim that they must have a variation of 5 per cent either way over or under 32 pounds, which practically means a total variation of 3.2 pounds compared to a well operated mill now manufacturing paper with a total variation of one-third of a pound.

"The argument that mills must have this variation to manufacture properly is unsound and absurd and would appear to be inserted in contracts

KROGNES GOES TO MINNEAPOLIS.

POPULAR REPRESENTATIVE MADE GENERAL MANAGER OF THE TRIBUNE.

C. George Krogness of Chicago has been appointed general manager of the Minneapolis Tribune.

Mr. Krogness for many years has been an advertising representative in Chicago for daily newspapers, among them the Tribune, and he served several terms as president of the Chicago Newspaper Representatives Association.

He is widely known among national advertisers. Mr. Krogness has not yet announced whether he will continue his representation list, which, besides the Minneapolis Tribune, consists of the Baltimore Star and American and the Boston Post.

STATEMENT BY SEAMAN COMPANY.

In an interview with THE FOURTH ESTATE George M. Seaman of the Seaman Company, formerly Birmingham & Seaman Company, said:

"Referring to our news print paper adjustment contracts, so far, only between six and seven thousand tons are affected, the original contract price for which was 3.10.

"Based upon the facts already in hand we have notified these customers that the increase in their prices, beginning with January 1, 1917, will be three-quarters of a cent per pound.

"In other words the price will be 3.85 instead of 3.10."

THE TABLES ARE TURNED.

It is of unusual interest to publishers of daily newspapers to learn that S. W. Backus of the Minnesota & Ontario Power Company, recently lost two of his leading daily newspaper customers through their being able to supply their wants for 1918 by purchasing supplies in the open market at a price less than that of Mr. Backus.

It is hoped that Mr. Backus has seen a new light.

Why Philadelphia Offers Greater Selling Opportunities to Merchants and Manufacturers

NOW is the time for every merchant to be alert, to forge ahead, to build up permanent business.

Here in Philadelphia—the Workshop of the World—every indication points to record business in retail lines, due to the fact that more than 58,000 business places (of which about 8,000 are manufacturing plants) employing about 700,000 male and 300,000 female workers, are running to full capacity.

Add to this the metropolitan area of Philadelphia, including the great new industries created by the needs of the United States Government along tidewater, such as the great ship-building yards which have been located at Camden, Chester, Gloucester, Bristol, Cornwalls, etc. Then the large munition factories at Eddystone and Essington; the big powder works at Wilmington, Pennsgrove and surrounding towns; the big steel mills at Wilmington, Newcastle and Claymont; the oil and gasoline plants at Marcus Hook, Point Breeze and other points.

These workers and their families are housed in approximately 375,000 separate dwellings in the city of Philadelphia. The net paid daily average 2 cent circulation of the Philadelphia Bulletin for the six months from April 1st to September 30th, 1917 (as per report to U.S. Post Office Department) was 363,115 copies a day.

There is in Philadelphia territory an immense outlet for advertised commodities among these families, who are enjoying the highest scale of wages in years.

Housekeeping needs alone run into a tremendous volume of sales, while food, raiment and other necessities required by this vast army create a market that is third in the United States.

The Philadelphia Bulletin is the one dominant newspaper through which to reach these consumers.

AD AFFILIATION HOLDS A ROUSING MEETING.

DELEGATES OF FIVE CITIES TALK SHOP AND PLEDGE THEMSELVES TO "LICK GERMANY."

The best business meeting that the Advertising Affiliation ever held, and one that ended in an inspiring setting of patriotic fervor, was held in Rochester, N. Y., on October 26 and 27 by the advertising men of Syracuse, Buffalo and Rochester, N. Y., and Cleveland and Canton, Ohio.

All the way through, the messages delivered by prominent advertising and business authorities were of the kind that will be of the greatest use to the advertising men and women, while the intelligent discussions and questions raised provided much more information of the kind that will without doubt add greatly to the efficiency of advertising as practiced by those of the five cities who took part.

The speakers were such men as George W. Hopkins of the Columbia Graphophone Company, New York; Brown Landone of New York; J. George Frederick of the Business Bourse, New York; Homer J. Buckley of Chicago; Merle Sidener of Indianapolis, chairman of the A.A.C.W. national vigilance committee; Elmer L. Clifford, advertising manager of the Minneapolis Journal; Warren S. Platt of the Cleveland Business Bureau; Frederic W. Goudy of Forest Hills, N. Y.; Gilbert P. Farrar of New York; O. M. Brodtkuehn of the Chicago Tribune; William Howard Taft, ex-President of the United States; George Edgar Vincent, president of the Rockefeller Foundation; and Douglass Malloch of Chicago, editor, author and poet.

And everyone of them was on hand and delivered his scheduled talk or address.

Officers elected were: President, E. D. Anderson of Buffalo, divisional advertising manager of the Bell Telephone system; first vice-president, J. R. Wilson of Rochester; second vice-president, Walter B. Cherry of Syracuse; treasurer, Martin Pierce of Canton, Ohio; secretary, L. E. Honeywell of Cleveland.

The next convention place will be chosen at a meeting to be held by the board of directors within the next month.

Great interest centered in the annual banquet speakers on Saturday evening, who were Messrs. Taft, and Malloch and Dr. Vincent, and expectations were fully realized. The nationally important messages they delivered aroused a patriotic fervor in all present such as they probably never experienced before.

In telling of America's changed relations with the world at large ex-President Taft traced back to the founding of the United States the national ideas and told why the United States entered the war against Germany.

"Germany, by her cruelty, wanton destruction of human life and wilful violation of international law, forced us into it," he said. Now the United States must demonstrate to the Germans the futility of their philosophy that they are superpeople and can rule the world by licking them. That is the task before us. We must nerve ourselves for it."

Every man and woman in the vast audience jumped to his or her feet with the cry, "We will!" that demonstrated every one of them is ready to do the utmost for the nation in its time of necessity. Mr. Taft continued:

"In the end Germany will get the punishment she deserves. The American people are equal to the test. We can't give up until we have defeated Germany and stamped out the evil of militarism that is a vice and threat to the future peace of the world."

"Hereafter the United States is to be of the world. No war will take place in Europe in which we will not have an interest. We will have no doctrine of isolation hereafter. This war will discipline our people and make them responsive."

"The power and potentiality that God has given us should be exercised not for ourselves but for the benefit of all mankind."

Ex-President Taft was present as a member of the Advertising Affiliation, he being a member of the Buffalo Club.

Douglass Malloch in a very humorous discourse outlined the eight sins of business as: The liar; the gossip; the groucher; the pessimist; the quitter; the man who never starts to try; or the loafer; the business "grind," who does all the work himself; and the man who talks too much.

Dr. Vincent declared advertising men are meeting the test of loyalty to their country, which they are now being put to and have done noble work in furthering the campaigns to sell Liberty Bonds, aiding the Red Cross and the Y.M.C.A. and giving every other kind of service they were called upon to render for the welfare of the nation. "You ad men have a right to feel proud of what you have accomplished," he said.

"The task before Americans today is to organize democracy as efficiently as autocracy," said Dr. Vincent. By team work only can we win. It will never be said of Americans that they did not get into the game when called upon. Unless we emerge victorious morally, as well as physically, the war will have been in vain."

Dr. Vincent declared:

"America has had many meanings in the past. Some have endured for all time, and some have lost their validity and force. Some people feel that the country is only great by reason of its natural geography; but patriotism is something that cannot be measured in square miles."

"It is a great thing to be big, but far greater to be magnanimous. We are beginning to realize that we must change the old idea of opportunity into the new idea of service. We have survived long enough on such highly satisfying phrases as 'manifest destiny.' Phrases have been a delightful substitute for thought in America; but we are beginning to see the difference between trusting to luck and muddling through. We have let so-called destiny guide us too long."

"A great national purpose is the only thing individuals and nations can respect, and these are the days when we need to emphasize that great national purpose, and have done with, once and for all, the rhapsodical rhetoric of 'manifest destiny.'"

Mr. Taft paid the speakers' committee the compliment of saying that few times during his career had he ever enjoyed a finer program of speaking than that which preceded him, by Dr. Vincent and Mr. Malloch. He was enthused over what Dr. Vincent said as much as anybody in the audience, and he participated in the genuine merriment aroused by Mr. Malloch's witty remarks and droll philosophy.

An enjoyable feature of the Affiliation meetings is that all business routine, which usually takes up so much valuable time at conventions, is entirely eliminated. All business matters of the organization are attended to by the board of directors at special all-day meetings held between annual conventions.

It's a case of getting right down to "brass tacks" with the Advertising Affiliation and sticking there to the end. The result is that every member who attends the meetings gets full benefit for expenditure of time.

The business sessions were attended by 235 persons and the banquet by 550.

AD VIGILANCE DEFENDED.

Vigilance work and better business bureaus were explained by Merle H. Sidener, chairman of the vigilance committee of the A. A. C. W.; Elmer L. Clifford, advertising manager of the Minneapolis Journal; Warren S. Platt, chairman of the Cleveland Better Business Bureau; and S. A. Weissenburger, secretary of the Cleveland Better Business Bureau. The latter was chairman of this discussion.

All the speakers declared that the advertising vigilance work is being done for the expansion of business and not for its destruction—as so many critics say. Mr. Weissenburger announced that the Cleveland Advertising Club had raised a fund of $6,500 for the promotion of its Better Business Bureau.

He condemned bad advertising as placing an unjust tax on clean and decent advertising, saying "ad clubs working for better advertising have something more than 'bunk' to talk about—something that means real dollars and cents."

Chairman Weissenburger introduced Merle Sidener as "no long haired propagandist, but the man who backed up 'Dick' Lee, when he was prosecutor for the national vigilance committee and told him to go to it."

AD MUST HELP CUT COSTS.

Mr. Sidener said that advertisement vigilance was more misunderstood and most other modern movements. He said:

"President Wilson in 1913 wrote that nothing was done then as it was twenty years before. Today we can say that nothing is done today as it was last week. Advertising men are under obligation to study business problems more so than they ever were before."

"The greatest problem of the nation now and after the war is to reduce selling costs—nothing will help do this like advertising. Advertising men must study now or be marked in the near future as business failures."

"Part of their national obligation is to eliminate fraudulent advertising. The person who invests in advertised goods must be given the worth of his money. The public must be made responsive to buying advertised goods. When this is accomplished the cost of selling goods will be reduced."

"No honest man has anything to fear from the truth in advertising movement. The national vigilance committee's work is to drive out national frauds and co-operate with the efforts of local bodies in doing the same thing and boosting business."

"Retail advertising is in the greatest need of a renewal of public confidence. The national committee is doing this, and is also helping the newspaper to make its space of more value by cleaning out the bad advertising and making room for clean and honest business."

COMPARATIVE PRICES GOING.

"One of the greatest reforms in which the national committee has been successful is in convincing merchants, big and small, that comparative price advertising is hurting them and robbing them of public confidence."

"Among the great stores that have cut out comparative prices are: Marshall Field & Co., Chicago; Carson, Pirie & Scott, Chicago; John Wanamaker, New York; Philadelphia; Klen's, Kansas City; Stus, Baer & Fuller, St. Louis. All of them report that they are doing greater business, at a decreased advertising appropriation, than when they the comparative price agreement."

"Marshall Field & Co. now invest only about 1 1/2 per cent in advertising; Carson, Pirie & Scott about 3 per cent; etc."

Mr. Sidener said that the national committee is constantly advising newspapers on sources of dangerous advertising going out, by means of "red flag" bulletins. It also has ferreted out fraud within business organizations of advertisers that was damaging their business reputation, which had been built up in one instance on the expenditure of more than $1,000,000 advertising.

PRaise FOR NEWSPAPERS.

"Newspapers," declared Mr. Sidener, "are the most progressive institutions in the world."

"They must be, because they are not of yesterday or the past, but of today. Where many newspapers formerly looked askance at the 'Truth-in-Advertising' movement, there are mighty few publishers that today have any doubt of the aim of the vigilance committee to help them. They are becoming more and more friendly and appreciative of what the committee is doing for them. Such papers as the Kansas City Star, the Des Moines Capital, the Indianapolis News, St. Louis Republic, St. Louis Globe-Democrat are among the leading endorsers of the national vigilance committee's work."

"No newspapers are not yet all perfect. But neither are all individuals, and I venture to say that they will reach the perfect state as soon as we do."

Mr. Sidener said there are at present fourteen Better Business Bureaus in the United States conducted by paid managers, but that in smaller cities and towns local committees of the clubs can do very effective work.

HOW NEWSPAPERS CAN CLEAN UP.

Elmer E. Clifford, advertising manager of the Minneapolis Journal, told how his newspaper had found it profitable to throw out $50,000 worth of objectionable business five years ago. "Every year since then," he said, "the Journal has increased in advertising volume and raised its rates. This year it will carry 11,000,000 lines of advertising, while the circulation in the past five years has increased forty per cent, and the Journal now carries more food advertising than any other paper in the country."

He told how when a bad advertisement is printed in a contemporary paper or any other that comes to his attention, he makes a practice of writing a letter to prominent reputable persons in the line of business affected by the advertisement, pointing out the ad's objectionable features and urging that the people use their influence on the medium carrying the ad to stop it. In most instances this works out fine.

"What's the matter with the local ad clubs doing something to stop fake and unclean ads?" Mr. Clifford asked.

"The worst of it is going on right around them and they never raise a protest of any kind. Get after the publishers with a harpoon and they will stop carrying such business."

"Louis Wiley, business manager of the New York Times, wrote to me a short time ago that 'newspaper publishers are not vicious in the matter of carrying objectionable advertising—they are unconscious.' Wake them up."

SPIRIT OF THE HOME.

"Newspapers need to be in keeping with the spirit of the clean home. The home is their objective. I often find it effective to call to the attention of the wives of unclean advertisers the objectionable points in their husband's advertising. Many thus insist on it being cut out."

"It is good for newspapers to take

SPECULATION ON SECOND CLASS INCREASES.

NEWSPAPERS MAY ADOPT THE SPECIAL SECTION IDEA—READJUSTING THE PAY PLAN—THE BUSINESS PRESS.

BY WALDON FAWCETT.

Publishers are busy these days trying to discount, to their own satisfaction and that of their coworkers, the effect of an increase in second class postage rates.

An exceedingly interesting line of speculation concerns the possibility that one effect of the prospective readjustment will be the persuasion of publishers to issue at regular intervals "supplements" of special character designed to aid both the circulation and advertising departments.

The financial supplements and the literary supplements that have been adopted as regular features by some newspapers exemplify this supplement idea in the newspaper field, whereas indication that the idea is "catching" in the magazine field is seen in the recent action of the Independent in transforming a suburban and gardening magazine into a monthly supplement for the Independent.

Newspaper publishers who are beginning to wonder about the possibilities of this supplement idea, see in it a chance to get that same hold on readers that the trade paper has, that the New York Evening Post has on financiers, and that the Chicago Herald had on 20,000 readers in the days when William E. Curtiss had first column, first page position—a hold that defies the necessity for subscription advances to meet postal demands.

By means of automobile supplements, summer resort sections, etc., many newspaper publishers have flirted with this supplement idea but, as a rule, only irregularly or intermittently.

The idea of the special supplement as a regular, fixed permanent adjunct has been tried only on lovers of art and literature and not on motorists, amateur gardeners, poultry raisers, exponents of physical culture for the sake of good health, and the various classes of the community that have hobbies for the encouragement of which no reasonable outlay is begrudged.

WHO IS GOING TO PAY.

The one deduction regarding which there seemed to be virtual unanimity of opinion among the mourners gathered at Washington when Congress agreed to second class increase was that it will be extremely difficult if not impossible (save in isolated cases) to pass the additional expense on to subscribers.

There was no "bull" in the argument to this effect which the publishers put up to Congressmen. They were speaking from the heart and out of their solemn conviction.

Nevertheless, every person who has been on the inside at Washington knows that many Congressmen were swayed to the idea of the second class rate increase on the theory that here is precisely the sort of "war tax" that can be passed along. There has been a lot of talk on the part of the framers of the Revenue Act to the effect that their ideal throughout has been to devise taxes that can be assessed against the whole community and from which no person rich or poor can escape.

The levy on talking machine records, the increased letter postage, the higher price on postal cards and the tax on the "movie" ticket or other amusement admission are all supposed to be on this pattern.

By the same logic, it followed that the average reader could be persuaded to pay a little extra for his favorite newspaper or magazine.

ZONE RATES PREPOSTEROUS.

Whatever may be the degree of sincerity in the belief of Congressmen on this subject, there are mighty few publishers that are willing to accept the premise. Almost all the publishers who have been in Washington are convinced that no increase in subscription prices can be made without serious losses in circulation and consequent diminution of advertising patronage, and as for a system of different subscription rates for the different sections of the country—in harmony with the postal zones—the publishers of periodicals of national circulation regard that as preposterous.

Some of them have had a "horrible example" of the effect of just such a discriminatory rate in their effort to capture circulation in Canada, where it has been necessary to quote an advanced subscription price.

For all the success of various newspapers in raising (since the newsprint situation became acute) the selling price per copy, most of the publishers of metropolitan dailies who "stood by" at Washington were dubious as to the possibility of increasing subscription rates. This apprehension is due to a realization that mail circulation is a very different proposition from street sales.

Furthermore, as is well known, some newspapers have been able to get away with the proposition for increased prices only by making the advance applicable merely to street sales, leaving the monthly subscription rate for delivery by carrier untouched or by making the increase applicable only in territory outside the city of publication, allowing the old price to hold for city readers.

EFFECT ON BUSINESS PRESS.

Oddly enough, the only class of publications which, in the estimation of publishers, may be able to pass the buck by increasing subscription price is the very class against which Congressmen unlimbered their heaviest artillery in debate, namely the technical, class and trade journals of the business press.

In committee rooms and on the floor of House and Senate, the orators of the occasion thundered at the Dry Goods Economist, the Iron Age, and other business papers as mere "advertising sheets", but the practical men, who realize the high esteem in which the average trade paper is held by its clientele, recognize that subscription advances in this quarter will be accepted with far better grace than will similar price boosts leveled against casual readers who peruse periodicals solely for amusement or entertainment.

Publishers who conclude that the trade paper publishers, alone among all the classes in the industry, are in a strong strategic position argue that a business man who is deriving real benefit from his trade paper—possibly can trace directly to it contracts or new ideas in his business worth hundreds or thousands of dollars—will, once he stops to think of his obligation, pay a subscription price of $5 or $10 or $12 almost as readily as he pays the present merely nominal price.

As a matter of fact, hundreds and thousands of business houses in all lines of trade are today paying annual fees of $25 or $50 and upward to "business correspondents", "information bureaus", etc., located in Washington, which do not supply in their weekly printed or mimeographed "confidential letters" a tithe of the information that is obtainable through trade papers at a fraction of the price.

MAY HAVE TO EDUCATE.

Admittedly, of course, a campaign of education may be necessary to persuade business men to accept higher subscription costs for trade papers, and in certain classes of circulation, for example, that made up solely of small merchants, any sharp increase might be disastrous to circulation, but the general feeling among publishers is that the trade paper men are lucky in that they have a chance to convince a business public—a public fairly prosperous just now, thank you—that the business press is a laborer worthy of its hire.

BIG LONDON CHANGE.

The current number of the National Review includes a notice that its editor, Leo J. Maxse, will be henceforth associated with the direction of the London Globe.

The New York Tribune says:

"This marks the entrance into daily journalism of one of the greatest of magazine editors in England and one of the most powerful personalities in the journalism of the whole world."

PRICES UP IN JACKSON.

The Jackson (Mich.) Patriot raised its price last week to two cents in the city; twelve cents a week delivered by carrier; Sunday issue seven cents.

The increase was necessitated by the high cost of news print.

LOST—A FORD.

The Charleston (S. C.) News and Courier bemoans the loss of its Ford—a delivery car stolen by "joy riders" from in front of the News and Courier building.

PAPER AND PULP MEETING.

The annual convention of the American Paper and Pulp Association will be held in New York on November 15-16.

ROGERS OPPOSES "SET" PRICES.

CHARGES MAGAZINES BACK MATTER BEFORE TRADE COMMISSION.

The Federal Trade Commission heard complaints on October 23 from retailers throughout the country against manufacturers of branded articles, such as safety razors, watches, and other products bearing trade names, for which makers have fixed a retail price below which they refuse to allow goods to be sold.

The retailers allege that the action of the makers is contrary to the Unfair Practice Act, under which the Trade Commission operates.

Backing the complaint of the retailers, Jason Rogers, publisher of the New York Globe, appeared before the commission, arguing that the manufacturers were leagued against retail merchants who advertised cut-rate sales on the specified articles.

He alleged that the Fair Trade League, backed by magazines throughout the country, was advocating the campaign of the manufacturers in maintaining an arbitrary price for the retailers.

The commission will hear further evidence.

The question of price-cutting was debated at the annual meeting of the Dominion Board of the Retail Merchants Association held in the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, and a resolution was passed recommending that manufacturers producing trade-marked articles, the re-sale price of which is determined by them, should incorporate the price as part of their trade mark and that the Trade Mark Act be so amended that this will be possible.

BROOKLYN EAGLE BIRTHDAY.

The Brooklyn (N. Y.) Daily Eagle quietly celebrated its seventy-sixth birthday anniversary last week. During these seventy-six years the Eagle has covered three wars—Mexican, Civil and Spanish—and is now chronicling the marvels of a fourth. Commenting on this phase of its life, the paper says:

"William H. Sutton, who lighted the kerosene lamps in the old Eagle office for the first victory illumination of the Mexican War, is still on the working staff of the paper. He may yet turn on the current to light up the Eagle tower when the American army enters Berlin and the doom of kaiserdom is sealed forever."

Mr. Sutton is eighty-six years old and now edits the Eagle's fraternal news. He celebrated his last birthday anniversary by going to a watermelon party with the rest of the "boys."

MUTILATED FILES; FINED.

Pleading guilty to a charge of mutilating newspaper files at the plant of the Salem (Ohio) Publishing Company, C. H. Calley, representing the Winder Service Company, New York, was fined $25 and costs. He had asked for permission to look over the files, and then proceeded to clip out portions which he desired to take with him. He left the city before his action was detected, but was apprehended in Massillon.

Louis H. Brush, publisher of the Salem News, hopes that this precedent will aid in breaking up the practice of mutilating newspaper files, which is so frequently done by traveling agents.

ON VERGE OF SUSPENSION.

The North Chicago Times-Review has sent out an S.O.S. for help from the citizens of its locality. It has been losing money and is on the verge of suspension.

DR. HENRY J. WATERS to Edit The Weekly Kansas City Star

DR. HENRY J. WATERS, for nine years President of the Kansas State Agricultural College and formerly dean of the Department of Agriculture of Missouri University, is to become editor of The Weekly Kansas City Star.

Doctor Waters enjoys a national reputation in all matters pertaining to agriculture. He was successively assistant secretary of the Missouri State Board of Agriculture, investigator of the Missouri agriculture experiment station, professor of agriculture in Pennsylvania State College, dean of the college of agriculture and director of experiment station of the University of Missouri and president of the Kansas State Agricultural College.

In 1914, Doctor Waters was chosen by the United States Government as special commissioner to the Philippine Islands, where he investigated problems of agriculture and education. Lately, Doctor Waters has been placed on the government board of food administration and has been made a member of the "Wheat Executive" of the Hoover board.

The opportunity for service is what impelled Doctor Waters to give up a life work in which he had been conspicuously successful. In addressing nearly 350,000 families every week through The Weekly Kansas City Star, he felt that he would be carrying on his work in a more comprehensive way than would have been possible in any of the positions he had held in the past. Doctor Waters will assume active charge of The Weekly Kansas City Star as soon as his successor as president of the Kansas State Agricultural College has been selected.

THE WEEKLY KANSAS CITY STAR

A.A.C.W. MEETING IMPORTANT.

WILL BE HELD NOVEMBER 12 AND 13 BY EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

There will be a meeting of the executive committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs at Indianapolis, the headquarters city, on November 12 and 13, and William C. D'Arcy, president of the association has also sent a special invitation to the presidents of advertising clubs affiliated in the association, and to members of the national advertising committee to attend.

It has been announced that many important things will be considered at this meeting, and there will be a full discussion of what the association and the individual clubs can do to make advertising do its full share in the winning of the war.

The meeting has been called for Indianapolis so that those who attend may have a better conception of the service the headquarters office of the association is prepared to render.

"Our program," said President D'Arcy in the letter to the club presidents, "will cover every phase of our work, but specifically, matters relating to the Liberty Loan—past and those to come; matters of our vigilance committee and its constructive work and what the future may expect of them; our educational work and what it has done and will do and what you want it to do; the matters of our finance will naturally be discussed and our magazine will come in for consideration.

"We want you to meet with us in Indianapolis because that is our national headquarters. You can see and understand what the organization has and how our work throughout the year is systematized and promoted. We want you to know and feel intimately what the various departments are capable of doing, so that when you return to your club, you will be in a position not only to help them, but to help the Association, which is organized to improve advertising."

IOWA NEWSPAPER MEN TO HOLD CONFERENCE.

Iowa newspaper men will gather in Iowa City for their third annual conference on November 23 and 24. The conference will be held under the auspices of the University of Iowa.

Definite plans and the complete program will be announced shortly. Meantime the committee on arrangements is scouring the country for one of the leading journalists to make a talk to the Hawkeye scribes.

The committee asks Iowa editors to get busy, arrange things in their shops so everything will be in shape for an assistant while the boss is attending the conference.

ONLY ONE IN GREENFIELD.

With the issue of November 2 the Greenfield (Ohio) Journal, for twenty years the Democratic official organ of Greenfield ceased publication. The paper and plant have been purchased by the Greenfield Republican, which now has no competitor.

The Journal was formerly edited by Postmaster John L. Strange, and for some years has been in charge of his son, William E. Strange, who will be connected with the Lima (Ohio) Times-Democrat.

A FIELD MEMORIAL.

The Chicago Press Club and Typographical Union No. 16 will be asked to co-operate in placing a memorial window for Eugene Field in the Chicago Public Library. A committee from the Old Time Printers Association has the plan in hand.

Advertisements Omitted.

OWING to the great demand for advertising space in The New York Times it is frequently necessary to omit advertisements.

On Friday, October 26, 34 columns were omitted and 121 columns were published. Discrimination in the assignment of space is forced upon The Times by these conditions.

Preference is given, therefore, to advertisements having news value and to those for which copy, including matrices, cuts or drawings, for the daily edition, are delivered before 6 p. m. on the day previous to publication; and to those for the Sunday edition for which finally approved copy is delivered before Friday night.

The New York Times

"All the News That's Fit to Print."

In the week ending October 25th the New York Times printed 1,086 columns of advertisements—a greater volume than it ever before published in a single week—a gain of 227 columns over the corresponding week last year. The Times is the only New York morning newspaper to record a gain in advertising in October over the corresponding month last year.

WALSH BACK IN ACTIVE NEWSPAPER WORK.

Townsend Walsh has become the dramatic critic of the Boston Traveler. He was born and reared in Albany, N. Y. At Harvard University, where he was graduated in 1895, he was an editor of the Advocate and afterwards engaged actively in daily newspaper work. For many years he has been intimately associated with the theater, making New York his home. Recently Mr. Walsh was publicity representative for Winthrop Ames' theatrical enterprises. Among his works has been writing the life of Dion Boucicault for the Dunlap Society.

Mr. Walsh began his career as dramatic reporter on the New York World. The lure of the road tempted him to travel in advance for Mrs. Fiske as business manager and he has since been identified with many prominent dramatic stars, including Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Blanche Bates, Ethel Barrymore, Grace George, Marie Dora, Otis Skinner, John Drew, John Mason, William Gillette and E. H. Sothern. For four seasons he handled the publicity work for the "Wizard of Oz," with Montgomery & Stone, one of the biggest money makers of the modern stage.

Mr. Walsh is a member of the Lambs, the Players and the Harvard Clubs and has a wide acquaintance among newspaper men in every section of the country.

SUN'S EDITORIAL PAGE GOES INSIDE AGAIN.

Beginning with the issue of October 30, the editorial page of the New York Sun will appear in the center of the paper instead of on the last page, as has been the case for the past year and a little more.

Publisher Frank A. Munsey in announcing the change said:

"We are changing the editorial page back to the center of the paper to free the last page for local and other important news. The war has come to command practically all the first page, one day with another, with the result that other 'first page' news is for the most part forced over to inside pages. By this shift of the editorial page, the last page, which, like the first page, is one of the show windows of the paper, will be freed for news that is entitled on its merits to show window space."

GRAHAM NOW IN CHARGE IN DOBBS FERRY.

Following the recent death of James L. Taylor, the Dobbs Ferry (N. Y.) Register has passed into the control of a corporation managed by Hugh F. Graham. The latter is a printer of twenty years' standing and was associated with Mr. Taylor for many years. The paper will be continued along Republican lines.

Mr. Graham is the Republican candidate for overseer of the poor for the town of Greensburg.

HOTEL COMMITTEE OF THE SAN FRANCISCO AD CLUB
READY FOR WORK.

The Palace Hotel has been selected as headquarters for the San Francisco convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, July 7 to 11, next year; and with this announcement from the headquarters of the association at Indianapolis, there also comes word that hotel rates in San Francisco will not be advanced, but that the San Francisco Advertising Club, which has headquarters in the Palace Hotel, is especially desirous of making all reservations through its hotel committee.

While the hotel rates were not advanced for the Panama Pacific Exposition, and while the San Francisco advertising men have every confidence in the local hotel men that rates will not be advanced for the advertising convention, it is suggested by the headquarters office at Indianapolis that the best way to have absolute assurance that rates will not be advanced, is to make reservation through the San Francisco club.

The arrangements for the San Francisco convention are progressing rapidly. The general sessions and a part of the departmental sessions will be held in the Civic Auditorium, which is convenient to all of the leading hotels; and the advertising exhibit will be staged in the beautiful San Francisco City Hall. Mayor Ralph of San Francisco has pledged the San Francisco advertising men support of the broadest character along every possible line.

Frederick W. Kellogg of the San Francisco Call, who was recently appointed vice president of the Associated Advertising Clubs to represent the Pacific Coast, is very active in arrangements for the convention, and is the direct representative of the international association.

The whole Pacific Coast is indicating a definite interest in the success of the San Francisco meeting.

WIDE DISTRIBUTION FOR FOOD BULLETIN.

The Weekly Bulletin of the United States Food Administration's public information division is now being sent to every magazine and daily newspaper issued in the United States, in the belief that much of its technical information is of general interest.

The Weekly Bulletin was started in August, 1917, to gather and make available to technical editors information about industrial economies in food materials, transportation, fuel, and power. There was no thought of it being of more than technical interest; but Government officials, librarians, ministers, and editors asked to be placed on the mailing list, and items from it were quoted in the general press.

FAILURE IN ALABAMA.

The Huntsville (Ala.) Mercury Publishing Company has failed with a loss to creditors of $18,625.45.

A voluntary petition has been filed in the Federal bankrupt court by the Mercury Publishing Company signed by Roy O'Neal as president. He was appointed receiver and under $1,000 will endeavor to keep the paper going for the benefit of creditors until the outfit is sold by order of court within the next few weeks.

Arthur Weiss, naval reserve. George King, company D, 305th infantry, Camp Upton; Andrew Knocel, 4th New York infantry; Albert Newheller, Camp Upton; George Wilson, coast artillery.

The employees of the Evening Post recently presented a kitchen trailer to the American Red Cross for service in France.

J. H. Zerbey, Jr., son of the proprietor of the Pottsville (Pa.) Daily Republican, has been commissioned a lieutenant and is now stationed in Washington, D. C.

Chicago newspaper men have not found it difficult to secure non-commissioned posts in the new national army.

Harry B. Critchlow of the Chicago American, who enlisted in the medical reserve, has been made a sergeant and is now stationed at Fort Riley, Kansas.

Victor Barnett, also of the American, has been made a corporal at Rockford, Ill.

Stanley Grogan, formerly a member of the staff of the Scranton (Pa.) Republican and Daily News and who also served on newspapers in Bridgeport, Ct., expects to sail for France within the next week. Mr. Grogan holds a commission as a lieutenant in the United States reserve. He was a member of the training corps at Madison Barracks.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Bostwick, for more than three years a reporter on the Indianapolis Star, has joined the clerical staff of Indianapolis Base Hospital 32, and has received orders to go to Ellis Island, N. Y. The hospital will be sent to France within a very short time. Miss Bostwick was formerly on the Denver Post, the Kansas City Post and the Indianapolis Sun.

John Marshall of the Minneapolis Journal has enlisted in the Navy and is now in Company 37, Great Lakes naval training station. Frank Hammer, make-up man for the Journal, has volunteered for the 25th engineers and has gone to Ayer, Mass., where he will join Company D of that regiment.

Members of Newswriters Union No. 3 of Scranton, Pa., have decided to pay the dues and assessments of all members who enlist in the United States Army and Navy. The plan will be followed as long as the war lasts. To date two members of the union have joined the colors, Howard Mingo, assigned to recruiting work for the Regular Army in Pennsylvania, and James G. Mackin, now at Camp Hancock, Augusta.

The entire membership of the San Jose (Cal.) Mercury Herald editorial staff joined in giving a farewell dinner to Eric Johnson, the youngest member of the staff, who has gone to WOMEN DEMAND DISCOUNTS.

Willing to Carry Bundles Home, but Not to Pay for Delivery.

Special to The New York Times.
WASHINGTON, July 23.—At the initiative of Mrs. Newton D. Baker, wife of the Secretary of War, and the National American Woman Suffrage Association, Washington women have begun a campaign for discounts in return for the service they render in carrying home their bundles from department and other stores. The campaign for these discounts is a result of the efforts of the Commercial Economy Board of the Council of National Defense to persuade the women of the country to carry home their bundles in order to cut down delivery service so as to put more men at the service of the nation for the prosecution of a successful war. The campaign will be extended to other cities.

"We will demand," said Mrs. Baker, "that the merchants give a discount so that we shall no longer be paying them for the work we do ourselves."

Miss Barker, who is president of a committee which includes Mrs. Frank M. Roosevelt and Mrs. Harriet Blaine Beale.

UNIQUE ST. LOUIS AD PLAN WINS.

WEEKLY GLOBE-DEMOCRAT PROFITS BY GETTING ADS FOR NEIGHBOR PAPERS.

A year and a half has satisfied the St. Louis Weekly Globe-Democrat management of the worth of an unusual plan designed to increase the efficiency of national advertising.

The Weekly Globe-Democrat has been actually securing local advertising for country newspapers on nationally advertised products from merchants who handle them.

The Globe-Democrat started in by securing the agreement of 500 newspapers, in Missouri, Southern Illinois, Arkansas, Tennessee and Kentucky to energetically solicit their local merchants when they are notified that any national advertising is to be done.

The purpose was that the man out in the country or in the small town who would be attracted by the manufacturer's advertising and be in a good mood to purchase the article advertised, would be again reminded of it when he read his local paper and in addition know exactly where he could purchase the article.

The Globe-Democrat has been placing in the hands of these publishers complete information regarding national campaigns, together with the "dealer helps" furnished by the manufacturer, so that they might make an energetic and intelligent solicitation. In other words, the Globe-Democrat has been creating business for the country publishers.

As a part of the plan a publication called "Team-Work" is being issued monthly and sent to those publishers and their merchants free of charge.

It is designed to educate the merchant up to a better comprehension of the value of advertising advertised goods and also of the importance of supporting their local newspaper.

The Globe-Democrat has limited the field of this plan to the states above mentioned with the idea of confining it to that territory in which the Globe-Democrat is best known and most influential.

The Weekly Globe-Democrat plan has at least three especially attractive points for benefiting the newspapers and advertisers who associate themselves with it. The plan helps:

1.—The local paper—by placing it in touch with the local dealer who carries the product of the national advertiser at a time when the latter is pushing his goods by advertising in a national medium covering that district.

2.—The local dealer—by hitching up the campaign of the national advertiser with his own announcement in the local paper, showing that he sells the goods advertised by the national advertiser—thereby allowing the local dealer to reap the benefits of the cumulative effect of the national advertising.

3.—The national advertiser—by getting the local dealer to push his goods by local advertisers and calling attention to the various agents who carry the goods.

The Weekly Globe-Democrat has been repaid for its work in the scheme by the added prestige that has been created for it among readers in general; also the plan helps to secure national advertising for it and gives the Globe-Democrat an opportunity to be of the service to the national advertiser, the local merchant and the local newspaper.

SPECIAL CARNIVAL EDITION.

The San Angelo (Tex.) Daily Standard, published by J. G. Murphy, issued a forty-four page edition on October 25 in celebration of the carnival and race meet staged in San Angelo.

NICE SEND OFF FOR CLAGUE.

A farewell luncheon was given to Stanley Clague by the Western Advertising Agents Association at the La Salle Hotel on October 11. Over 25 members of the association attended and it was one of the happiest events that had ever occurred in the history of the Western Advertising Agents Association.

The luncheon was presided over by William H. Rankin, retiring president, and there was also developed in its course the acceptance of the new chairmanship of the American Association of Advertising Agents by Paul E. Faust, and James O'Shaughnessy as the new executive secretary of the American Association of Advertising Agents.

Mr. Rankin in his address reviewed the history of the A. B. C. and the Western Advertising Agents Association and brought out very prominently the big service which Stanley Clague has performed not only for the agents but through his untiring zeal and work for the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Mr. O'Shaughnessy and Mr. Faust, also B. F. Sawin, spoke along a like vein, and Mr. Clague, in his response, spoke very feelingly of the splendid associations and friendships that had been created for him through his work in the Western Advertising Agents Association and also in the A. B. C.

A vote of thanks was given Mr. Clague, with the good wishes and support of the entire organization of American Association of Advertising Agents pledged to him unanimously.

INDIANA WEEKLY EDITORS MET AT GAS CITY.

The Indiana Associated Weeklies met in Gas City on October 26-27 as the guests of the Gas City Journal. Features of the meeting were the welcoming address by John L. Thompson and the response by President John W. Small of the Waynetown Dispatch, who has been a printer for sixty-three years.

Among the other speakers were: Colonel A. B. Crampton, governor of the Soldiers Home, on "The country editor and his community," Ben F. Billiter of the Huntington Farmers Guide, on "Developing the country newspaper," C. E. Van Valer of the Gas City Journal on "Does the Linotype pay in the country office?" and John W. Mellon of Greentown.

The election of officers will take place at a meeting to be held next June.

RAILROADS ASK FOR HIGHER PAPER TRAFFIC RATES.

Representatives of Western railroads conferred in Omaha (Neb.) last week on the proposal to ask the Interstate Commerce Commission for an increase in freight rates on interstate shipments of paper and pulp.

W. H. Pierce, traffic manager of the Omaha, presided. M. D. Hurlburt, traffic manager of the Wisconsin Traffic association, represented paper manufacturers.

"Nothing definite resulted from the conference," Mr. Pierce said. "Another may be held later."

PRISON EDITOR RELEASED.

"Tex" Schapper, a model prisoner and former editor of the Square Deal, a publication of the Kansas penitentiary, has been pardoned by Governor Capper of Kansas. Schapper, who was sent to prison for bank robbery, was pardoned because of his desire to enlist in the army.

NEW QUEBEC DAILY.

La Franc-Parleur, a Quebec City weekly, is about to become a daily, according to reports. The publication is directed by Raoul Renault, former secretary of the Quebec harbor commission.

A "KEYSTONE" COST CONFERENCE.

SHORTAGE OF EMPLOYEES—PAY 3.25 FOR PAPER—GOOD—NEWS ON STATE ADS.

A meeting of inland Pennsylvania newspaper publishers was held in Reading on October 27, with J. H. Zerby of the Pottsville Republican presiding, to discuss production costs. The meeting was largely an executive session.

The publishers complained of a general shortage of employees—reporters, circulation men and clerks—and the enormous increase in cost of production.

The paper contracts signed by the members provided for an average cost of 3.25 f.o.b. mill.

One dealer offered his product at $3.15 for the coming year. All others insisted on a monthly adjustment in prices.

A canvass of 100 dailies that have raised their circulation price to two cents showed that not one is willing to go back to its former rate, although few are able to reach their normal circulation again. They are all profiting financially by the change.

It was reported that the auditor-general will pay back-balances on state advertising bills caused by factional politics. This will amount to $250,000. Hereafter five cents a line will be paid for state advertising for the first 1,000 circulation, twenty-five cents maximum per line for 25,000 circulation and over. The schedule calls for twenty cents for over 15,000 and twelve cents over 10,000 circulation.

The publishers agreed that the war has brought increased business, heavier expenses and a growing number of consolidation negotiations.

Many publishers are refusing to guarantee their circulation during the war.

HOUSTON CHRONICLE WINS MANY BOND FRIENDS.

When the banks of Houston, Tex., refused to go into the $1-down-and-$1-a-week, or the $2-down-and-$2-a-week plan of selling the Liberty Loan Bonds, claiming it would be too much trouble and annoyance to handle such small sums weekly, Marcellus E. Foster, publisher of the Houston Chronicle, took the matter into his own hands and showed how easily it could be handled at absolutely no chance of a loss, except for a little clerical help.

The Chronicle handled the installment plan of selling the bonds in fine style and made many hundreds of new friends.

It helped the men who subscribed, it helped the Government and incidentally it helped itself in the good will of the people at least.

TIME TO PAY UP.

An Illinois editor, having been called by the selective draft, made collection capital out of the event by sending out the following:

"J. F. Darnall, editor of the Broadland News, received notice yesterday that he had been selected for military service and to get his affairs in order to report upon 24 hours notice. Hence he's getting ready. If you owe him anything kindly come in at once and pay it so he can pay his own debts before leaving."

FERGUSON'S ORGAN.

Former Governor Ferguson of Texas, lately removed from office by impeachment proceedings, will launch a new farm weekly to be known as Ferguson's Forum. The publication will be published at Temple, Texas.

PARAMOUNT BACKS UP ITS ADS.

TEACHING MOVIE THEATERS
HOW TO BENEFIT BY ITS
$1,000,000 CAMPAIGN.

Through the various Paramount and Arcraft exchanges in the United States, suggestions are being sent to exhibitors embodying the latest ideas and methods of linking up with the new million dollar advertising campaign of these producing and distributing concerns.

In a letter to film showmen it is pointed out that the popularity of Paramount and Arcraft pictures will be trebled in a short time as a result of the drive in the newspapers and national magazines.

It is explained that the million dollars are all working for the exhibitor and will continue to do so for the next year.

These dollars, the communication says in effect, are working in 300 newspapers at intervals of every day or two, occupying big advertising space and reaching an audience of about 30,000,000. They are also working in the big magazines.

Thus there is no human being in this country that will not see the names of Paramount and Arcraft before him. In every advertisement, explains the letter, appears a panel illustrated with trade marks of Paramount and Arcraft pictures. The accompanying text says:

"Three ways to know where to be sure of seeing Paramount and Arcraft productions:

"1. By seeing these trade marks in the newspaper advertisements of your local theaters.

"2. By seeing the same trade marks on the front of the theater or in the lobby.

"3. By seeing them flashed on the screen inside of the theater."

In a word the million is being spent to get the public to look for these things and to measure the attractiveness of the shows run by the individual exhibitors by finding them.

The exhibitors are urged finally, to lose no time in "tying up" with a pulling power that cannot fail.

The Paramount and Arcraft Corporations believe that there is no more direct means of benefiting the exhibitors, and that they are in every way lending assistance to the managers of the theaters the country over to get the best possible advantage from the campaign.

NEW PATRIOTIC PAPER.

The Patriotic Service League, with offices at 2745 Broadway, New York, has started a semi-monthly called Patriotic Service to "serve as a medium for the correlation and stimulation of patriotic activities among loyal citizens in support of the war program of the commander-in-chief for victory."

Ellery C. Stowell is the editor and Helen Zagat is assistant editor. The editorial board consists of Gertrude Atherton, author; Douglas Z. Doty, editor of the Century Magazine; and Fabian Franklin, formerly editor of the New York Evening Post.

N. Y. CALL DENIES IT SHOULD BE BARRED FROM MAILS.

Certain articles published in the New York Call may have been impolite and the patriotism of publishing certain other articles might be questioned, according to the Call's answer to the demand of the Post Office Department that it show cause why it should not be denied mailing privileges.

But in every instance the Call insists that there is no provision in the Espionage Act making such publication, no matter how unpatriotic or impolite, unavailable.

The answer denies that the Call lost its standing as a newspaper, under the law, by publishing objectionable matter and insists, therefore, that the charges preferred by the Post Office Department be dismissed.

The Call is publishing its complete answer.

In several cases the department has objected to quotations from speeches made by United States Representatives or Senators, during debates, and published in the Call. Among these objectionable utterances is one made by Representative Clyde H. Tavenner, asserting that private firms are making from twenty to sixty per cent more on war munitions than it would have cost Government arsenals to furnish them.

"It must be borne in mind," the Call's attorney says, "that these statements are quoted from the Congressional Record, which is an official document. It certainly cannot be maintained that the Congressional Record contains matter advocating or urging treason, insurrection or forcible resistance to the United States."

NEW PARCEL POST PLAN WITH MEXICO.

The following notice has been issued by the office of the Second Assistant Postmaster General.

"A parcel post convention having been concluded between the United States and Mexico, notice is hereby given that said convention becomes effective November 1, 1917, and substitutes the parcel post conventions heretofore in force between the two countries.

"Under the new convention the weight limit has been raised from 11 to 20 pounds; the sender of a registered parcel is entitled, in case of loss, damage, or rifling thereof, to an indemnity equal to the amount of actual loss incurred, but not exceeding the equivalent of fifty francs; and the graduated charges of five cents for the first pound, and one cent per additional weight of four ounces collectible from the addressee, have been eliminated. The charges now to be collected will be the usual delivery fee of five cents per parcel, whatever its weight."

BROOKLYN EAGLE CONCERT FOR SOLDIERS' FUND.

Under the auspices of the Brooklyn (N. Y.) Daily Eagle, with the co-operation of the Philharmonic Society of New York and the Brooklyn Community Chorus, Brooklyn had an unusual musical treat last Saturday evening at the 23d regiment armory, in the way of a stupendous patriotic concert.

More than 8,000 people, occupying every seat in the huge armory, were there and the concert was probably the largest indoor concert ever heard in this city. It was a benefit affair for the relief of soldiers' dependents and several thousand dollars were raised for that purpose through it.

CANADIAN NEWS PRINT INQUIRY CONCLUDES.

PRINGLE REPORT WILL BE PRESENTED TO GOVERNMENT TODAY—BOOK AND HALF-TONE PAPER NEXT.

The lengthy inquiry conducted by R. A. Pringle, K.C., into the news print situation in Canada concluded on Tuesday afternoon after auditors' statements, reviewing the operations of all the principal producers, had been considered by the commissioner.

An interim report deduced from the mass of evidence taken will be prepared and presented to the Government today at the latest and it is expected that a new order will be issued immediately.

The Order in Council fixing the price of news print at $2.50 per hundred pounds expired on October 30, but the producers voluntarily agreed to extend the time until November 3, preferring to do this rather than advance their prices before the Government had an opportunity to decide upon the course for the future.

What this action will be remains to be seen, but the evidence taken was of such a nature as to indicate that the new order will considerably increase the maximum.

Plain intimation that they must obey the order which expired this week was given to the news print manufacturers by commissioner Pringle at a session of the investigation. Mr. Pringle declared that if the order had not been made by the Government a large part of the press of Canada would have been forced out of business.

The question of the enforcement of the order came up in connection with the case of the Donacoma Paper Company, which is supplying its waste output to the New York Times.

"It looks to me," said Mr. Pringle at another point in the evidence, "as if the Government should exercise control over the whole paper business during the war."

Figures supplied by J. R. Booth showed a large profit on sulphite, which is summarized in the following table:

	Cost Per Ton.	Selling Price Per Ton.
1916 average	$39.12	$50.14
3 mos. 1917 average	44.11	52.16
April	52.07	91.04
May	49.05	60.37

When the May figures were being considered, Mr. Thomas of the company pointed out that old wood was used. He estimated that had it been necessary to use new wood the cost would have been $59.37.

Booth's news print costs for the first six months of this year were $42.98; for each of three months, $44.44, $44.26 and $50.17.

The sales prices for the corresponding periods were (three months) $61.41, $61.26 and $62.54.

H. I. Thomas, who appeared in support of the statement, furnished more recent figures of news print costs as follows: June, $51.94; July, $51.88, August, $50.92; and September, $50.89. These figures do not allow for depreciation, etc.

Mr. Thomas claimed that Mr. Booth was losing between $11 and $12 a ton on paper he is supplying to Canadian publishers under the Government order. He said all Mr. Booth had made from the paper business had gone back into the development of his industry.

Tuesday's session of the inquiry was featured by the presentation of statements showing that the Lauren-tide Company had made large profits on the sale of sulphite. The details of its operation in this respect in round figures were as follows:

	Sales Tons.	Cost Per Ton.	Profit Per Ton.
1916 average	23,707	$34	$26
January, 1917	1,032	39	41
February	681	38	35
March	1,053	37	39
April	1,840	37	44
May	2,346	35	36
June	1,361	41	33
July	2,514	42	32
August	1,733	38	31

In 1916, it cost this company from $34.86 up to $42.64 to manufacture sulphite.

It was brought out in the evidence that the company figured in its expenses on the manufacture of sulphite salaries paid to officers of the company serving with the Canadian expeditionary forces. The difference between the army pay and the salary paid by the company prior to enlistment, up to $10,000 was paid.

This practice was commended by the commissioner, who pointed out that by distributing the expense over their products it made a difference of sixty-eight cents per ton in the cost of news print paper.

It was also brought out that the company figured in the cost of manufacture of sulphite the expense of maintaining golf links.

While the statement of the Eddy Mill was put up for consideration, H. A. Stewart, K. C., Government counsel, raised the question of proper allowance for selling expenses. He pointed out that in the case of the mill in question it was over $2 still while other mills sold at as low a cost as sixty cents per ton, and others sold through the George H. Mead Company at the arbitrary figure of $3.

The statement of the St. Maurice Company showed that in March last 263 tons of sulphite, which cost $41.85 per ton to produce, were sold at an average price of $90.57 per ton.

The statements submitted by the News Pulp and Paper Company showed that the cost of manufacturing news print, exclusive of ten per cent on capital, was $38.81 in August.

In the case of the Howard Smith Company, which stopped making the product in July, it ran as high as $78.93 during the six months of 1917.

Price Brothers' figures for September were $42.08.

An investigation into the book and half tone paper situation will begin shortly, and at this inquiry the sulphite question will be gone into to a greater extent than at the news print probe.

THAYER IN AN IMPORTANT MAGAZINE POST.

John Adams Thayer, the new executive secretary of the Periodical Publishers' Association of America, has long been identified with publishing and advertising. He was the first advertising manager of the Ladies' Home Journal, Philadelphia; advertising director of the Butterick Publishing Company, and became one of the publishers of Everybody's Magazine in 1903, selling out his interest to his partners a few years later.

After some years' residence in Paris, he returned and purchased the Smart Set Magazine, which he edited and published for a number of years. Soon after the commencement of the war he disposed of the Smart Set and the corporation bearing his name went out of business.

Lieutenant Adolph S. Ochs II, of a family of newspaper men, is one of the new army officers to reach England preparatory to active service in France.

The New Haven (Ct.) Register has sent eleven members of its staff into various branches of naval and military service.

Lieutenant Carl ("Shag") Hood, formerly of the Chattanooga Times, was also in the first contingent of new officers to cross over.

The Post Exchange is a weekly paper published by men of the army ambulance training camp at Allentown, Pa. The editorial staff includes: W. W. Farley, editor; William C. Moss, managing editor; Basil L. Walter, city editor; Clifford T. Warner, sports editor; David Kelley, business manager; Sam Botsker, advertising manager. The men who edit are relieved from drill and issue the publication from an Allentown newspaper office.

Allan Rankin, formerly automobile editor for the Chicago Examiner, is now in France with the American flying corps.

Montgomery Shanks, formerly an employe of the Rochester (N. Y.) Herald, is now a yeoman in the Navy and stationed at Newport, R. I. Walter Shanks, a brother, is at the officers training camp at Fort Niagara.

The Reconnaissance is now being published weekly at Camp Bowie, Fort Worth, Tex., under the direction of Captain Frank S. Tillman of Battery D, first Texas field artillery, a former newspaper man. Sergeant T. Arnold, formerly of the Dallas fourth estate, is among the contributors.

Kenneth Proctor Littauer, American newspaper man now flying in the Franco-Belgian Escadrille, has just been decorated by King Albert of Belgium with the order of Leopold the Second and the rank of Chevalier. Mr. Littauer was formerly a writer on metropolitan dailies and served in London and Paris as a staff correspondent. After studying aviation he joined the Belgian flying squadron. He has been also honored with the French war cross for flying and distinguished battery spotting.

Laurance B. Siegfried of Montclair, N. J., until recently associated with the Heintzemann Press of Boston, in the direct advertising department and later engaged in free lance advertising and literary work—has received a commission as ensign in the United States naval reserve, in which he enlisted as an ordinary seaman in June.

John G. Peterson, Abraham N. Rice, John L. Thompson and Harvey Michael reporters of the Sioux City (Ia.) Journal, have enlisted as radio electricians in the sea service. They expect to become students at the radio training school at Harvard University.

Lieutenant George Heffernan, formerly of the Wilkes-Barre (Pa.) News and Independent, has been ordered to report to the aviation school at San Antonio, Tex.

Theodore Delavigne writes The Fourth Estate, from Camp Sherman, Ohio, (where he is a member of ambulance company No. 331, sanitary train) as follows:

WHEN IT IS WRONG TO CUT DOWN ADVERTISING.

"The correct thing for every business man to do, where leakage or waste exists, the great mistake that is made by a large percentage of our merchants and manufacturers, is the cutting down along the line most necessary for business prosperity, which is newspaper advertising.

"Newspaper advertising is as essential to the merchant and manufacturer as his stock of merchandise. It is his selling force. Diminish the selling force and you cut down your business. The cutting of newspaper advertising is not cutting down expenses—it is cutting down receipts."—Edwin T. Jones.

clean baths—good for advertisers and readers also. The right kind of readers do not want to sit down and eat their breakfast with pictures of diseased human insides in front of them; nor lunch seeing disordered kidneys; nor dinner with exhibits of women's diseases in their view.

"This is the situation in the case of newspapers that place before their readers advertisements picturing or describing such objects."

Mr. Clifford exhibited a copy of the Baptist Quarterly to illustrate the need for ad vigilance even among church people.

He declared that Samuel Hopkins Adams of the New York Tribune was deserving of the greatest praise for the work he has done for clean advertising in the past nine years.

AD DISPLAY.

One session of the meeting was devoted to a discussion of advertising display. The speakers were O. M. Brodfuehrer of the Chicago Tribune, on "Newspaper display layouts"; Gilbert P. Farrar of New York on "Magazine layout"; and Frederic W. Goudy of Garden City, N. Y., on "The influence of the private press." The chairman of this session was Elmer Adler of Rochester.

Mr. Brodfuehrer, who is manager of the copy and art service of the Chicago Tribune, was invited to address the meeting on the ground that the Chicago Tribune is the best advertising-set paper in the United States. He explained to the ad men how the Tribune has developed its organization and service to build up and maintain this reputation.

He declared that the different classes of newspaper advertisers should have individual kinds of type and copy. Carefully organized departments of the Tribune look after the plan and lay out details for its local advertisers. Every advertising account of the Tribune must have a different ad layout. Its copy and art services relieve many advertising managers of the necessity of having anything at all to do with the layout of their ads. Seventy Tribune men turn out every night an average of 180 columns of copy from the raw material furnished by advertisers.

The Tribune is greatly aided in its efficiency by the non-distribution system used in its composing room. All type up to fourteen-point is used by the Tribune only once. The Monotypes in the office furnish fully 200 different faces of type. This is handled in 1,000 cases, and fifty tons of type are always on hand. The casting machines work sixteen hours every day, and an instance of their versatile efficiency was illustrated by Mr. Brodfuehrer by a recent instance when 400 border-corners of an unusual shape were needed and there was not a type office in the city that could furnish them in the required time. The Monotypes produced the 400 corners within a half hour.

Eight Linotypes and Intertypes work on ad composition and furnish sixty-three type faces and sizes. Besides these there are fifty-five Linotypes at work on the Tribune's news and ad matter.

The Tribune has issued a special type book showing the faces it uses in the office and advertising men who have seen it have been high in its praise. Copies were distributed by Mr. Brodfuehrer and were highly complimented by the Affiliation men.

The make-up of the Tribune is an important factor in its advertising-setting efficiency. No advertiser has the power to change a Tribune make-up, no matter who he is. The make-up is on the plan of the largest ad at the top and running downward to the small ads at the bottom of the page.

In this way, Mr. Brodfuehrer says every advertiser has an equal chance to get close to reading matter, and, of course, the principal advertisers getting the best position. Ads are not scattered through the Tribune as they are in many other papers.

The Tribune also specializes in photograph ads and ads in the color-section running in four colors.

It is a policy of the Tribune to protect the original ideas of its advertisers by allowing no others to imitate their ads in any detail.

The Tribune makes no charge for the preparation of advertising copy, except in cases where it is to be used in other media also. Nor is any charge made for presenting ideas of advertisers.

Mr. Brodfuehrer showed stereopticon views of typical Tribune advertisements that were recently displayed, especially a charity loan advertisement and another of the Parkway Hotel.

In explaining the illustrations he pointed out that Marshall Field &

Co. have no distinctive type styles, yet their ads are most attractive and there is no mistaking the house they represent, because Chicago people have come to know the house so well.

Charles A. Stevens & Brother are known by a unique border, which the house has used in its advertisements for the past eighteen years, and which is entirely individual.

NEWS MEN WRITE BEST AD HEADS.

In his discourse on "Magazine layout" Mr. Farrar said that reporters and news-trained men make the best headlines for advertisements, as they can pick out the essential news points of the ad and know how to display them in type to the best advantage.

He advised newspaper advertisers, as well as magazine advertisers, on the importance of such things in their copy as:

Forcefulness and simplicity in type and illustrations; using the right type and illustrations for the class of readers being appealed to.

Importance of drawing the reader to the copy and not keeping the attention away by borders that would make better garden fences.

Use photos only to show things that cannot be illustrated as well in any other way.

Make drawings mean something to the advertiser.

Beware of overdoing stunts, lest people remember too much the stunt and forget the point in the ad.

Don't use sensational type, because the office has had in a stock of it and assures you that it is the very latest thing out; build every ad around the class of reader you want to speak to.

The time is coming, Mr. Farrar declared, when the ad man must know the mechanical details of type setting and be able to give the printer the proper orders, making himself perfectly understood.

Mr. Goudy's talk on the influence of the private press appealed deeply to the ad men, who issue their own advertising literature, house organs, etc.

Mr. Goudy said:

"The objective of the private press is primarily an aesthetic one, whose challenge for support on its part is on the basis of a high standard, a basis only possible where commercial considerations are not in question, or where questions of competition with work done by other methods or other ideals are not necessary."

"The private press is not concerned with commercial development of printing, but with the joy of fine craftsmanship. Printing, as a trade, with its mass and hostile, its wonderful mechanical equipment, etc., pays too little thought to printing as a handicraft, to the quickening spirit of craftsmanship which would breathe life and beauty into the output of dead and deadening machines."

AD MANAGERS LAX IN LETTER WRITING.

Homer J. Buckley of the Buckley-Bement Company, Chicago, deplored the fact that so few advertising managers go to any trouble to properly answer inquiries on their advertisements. He told of trying out an experiment that revealed a startling condition of affairs. He took twenty-two advertisements of national advertisers at random and, on a plain, ordinary postal card, sent to each one a specific inquiry.

Only one of the twenty-two advertisers answered the inquiry immediately.

Five took six days to answer, and all the replies were unsatisfactory in that they sent circular-letter replies that didn't answer the specific inquiry made.

Six more took two weeks to answer, and only one of them answered the question.

The rest didn't answer at all. Mr. Buckley said that the mail order man had the only real appreciation of the value of inquiries on his advertising. He answers with real care any question asked of him; each represents dollars and cents to him. Mr. Buckley said that his answer to one unimportant looking postal card inquiry to an advertisement of his brought him an account worth $27,000.

E. D. ANDERSON,

One of the most important things in an advertising manager's stock in trade is a proper system of answering inquiries and follow-up, said Mr. Buckley.

Mail advertisements should work with and follow-up newspaper advertising, telling, as one example, how he had found it profitable to send to certain trade papers proofs of newspaper ads in a nice personal letter the night before their publication. It made these people look for the newspaper advertisements the next time and showed tangible results.

Store advertising managers also should have a record of the credit manager's customers in order to trace active and inactive accounts and stimulate the inactive ones, Mr. Buckley said. The mail appeal will add to the effectiveness of newspaper advertising if it delivers a message. It should be written freely, as the writer would talk.

Another interesting point brought out by Mr. Buckley was that thirty-seven per cent of the advertising managers in the United States change positions every year.

SALESMANSHIP AND ADVERTISING.

Walter B. Cherry, sales manager of the Merrell-Soule Company of Syracuse, pointed to salesmanship as the biggest thing in the world today.

George W. Hopkins of New York, general sales manager of the Columbia Graphophone Company, emphasized the importance of being ready to meet business conditions in America after the war. He said that there will be greater competition than ever in all lines of business then, because thousands of factories and their workmen, now making munitions, will turn their attention to new products. He dwelt upon the human side of directing salesmen, and the art of developing a "clearing house for ideas," as he expressed it, and said that advertising must back up the salesmen.

Mr. Hopkins also discussed after the war conditions. When the factories that have been working at top speed turning out munitions slow down to their ordinary pace, he said, competition will be keener than ever before and we shall have to build up the kind of business that will hold our customers. "We shall have to look to our fences," he said.

Mr. Hopkins told of a vision on the value of lost time, in which a young man at college decided to sell the valuable time he could have used beneficially for himself. He did sell it. Later in life he decided he needed some of the time he had sold, and when he tried to buy it back he had to pay a very large interest on the original price.

In the opinion of Brown Landone of New York, the present methods of selling through salesmen and advertising by purely words have reached their full capacity, and expansion

LUDLOW TYPOGRAPH

The Profitable Medium Between Two Extremes

ONE EXTREME is the system by which you cast and store fully a hundred times more display type than you actually need.

THE OTHER EXTREME is the system of buying foundry display type at a cost which keeps quantities down to the minimum—you never have enough in an emergency.

THE LUDLOW TYPOGRAPH is the happy medium because it is midway between the two extremes of too much and not enough.

The Ludlow Typograph

must be along new paths. He said that appeal must be conscious, instead of unconscious and to twelve senses—additional senses of motion and emotion having been developed by the moving pictures.

Hereafter it will be a case of the salesman and the advertising not saying so much, but doing things by adopting the action idea of the movie—making action develop the results. He said people, owing to new senses developed nowadays, remember what is done—not what is said. In advertising and sales argument visualize—show things. For instance, a billing machine advertisement shows how the machine accomplished phenomenal things that by other methods would have been impossible, etc.

NEW METHODS NECESSARY.

Mr. Landone also said:

"America need have no fear of German competition at the present time. Germany's good will and national credit are gone. What we will have to face after the war are the industrial problems of our allies. American business goes in circles. In 1914 it had the 'morning after the night before' feeling. Just at present it is intoxicated by prosperity."

"Personally I believe there will be greater prosperity for America after the war than now—greater than that of the last fifty years. The only question is: Will American business be prepared to take advantage of it? Business must be trained and trained now for after the war conditions."

Mr. Landone is chairman of the committee of direction of the international social and industrial betterment exposition, which will be held in the European countries after the war to aid in the reconstruction of those countries.

ARTICLE XI.

COAXING THE BUSINESS MAN TO TAKE HIS OWN DICTATION IN THE LATEST APPROVED STYLE.

By W. LIVINGSTON LARNED.

Two business men were seated in a suburban train and the discussion had turned to advertising—to newspaper advertising.

One of the gentlemen had turned to a page upon which a very large display ad of the "Dictaphone" was in evidence. It dominated the paper—there was not the slightest chance of ever passing that advertisement unnoticed.

"I wonder if people really do read the advertisements in their morning paper," Mr. A. observed.

"I'm sure they do," was the emphatic response of Mr. B.

"What makes you so positive?"

"I've watched."

"On the train—here?"

"Yes, every morning, for a lengthy period. That same thought came to me. I was interested—I wanted to know. And I deliberately started in giving the problem a first-hand test. The man or woman, who unconsciously realizes that a certain product is necessary to their comfort or progress, eventually reads the advertising of that particular need."

"If I am dissatisfied with my heating system in the home bungalow, then, a furnace advertisement—or all furnace advertising—will command my attention?"

"Precisely—I watched you only a moment ago—you have read every line of that Dictaphone display. Been having trouble with dictation and stenography and delays in your office of late?"

"Well, yes, in a measure. I was wondering if what they say here is true. If it is true, then I can't afford to be without a Dictaphone."

"Good. On the other hand, the paper is full of interesting war news. You are eager to get at the latest from the trenches?"

"The trip is never quite long enough for me to get far beyond the editorials."

"Nevertheless, you did stop at the Dictaphone copy and you did read it through line for line, despite the big war. That's the way it is with every man on this train—or woman—war news can't stop them if the appeal in the advertisement is there—if it's test is convincing enough."

"And the secret of it—"

"Is simple. The right kind of advertising is really news, whether you want to call it that or not. And news concerning merchandise is as vital to us as war news or sporting news, or all the little and big varieties of everyday life. The Dictaphone copy has set you thinking. You realize that you are missing an opportunity to secure a higher degree of clerical efficiency. You'll end by putting in the Dictaphone."

DICTAPHONE ADVERTISING IS NEWS.

Which was exactly what happened. There is a remarkable story connected with this advertising account.

It has been more difficult to handle than might be imagined. There were stone walls to bump against and discouragements to fight down.

It seemed, for a while, that the public would never quite understand the Dictaphone; that there would always be a prejudice against its use.

Not that this marvelous instrument lacked in a single essential. It was perfect from the first. It did exactly what it claimed to do. But—guess the stumbling block.

Mr. Brown, in the silence of his private office, could not quite get used to hearing his own voice. It embarrassed him. There was a certain uncanny something about that verbal scance with no one present. Mr. Brown's voice had a queer sound to him. He suddenly became self-conscious, as he spoke to that chunk of cold metal. He couldn't warm up to it. There was no real ears to listen and no human brain to harmonize with his mental calisthenics.

If you've ever tried this form of dictation, you can sympathize with Brown, or Smith, or Jones. It is an odd sensation. The human element was missing. Face the wall and talk to yourself for five minutes—see what happens.

Executives would try the Dictaphone for a day and give it up in alarm.

They shivered for a week, at the mere memory of the experience. Those who "stuck it out," however, gradually became accustomed to the metal "stenog." For machines can become humanized, whatever you may think. There's your automobile, for instance. You're pals with a jolly old roadster, eh?

Dictaphone advertising faced this serious disadvantage. It was not so much of a case of combating petty mechanical arguments, as the argument of sensitiveness and personal embarrassment.

Nevertheless, the Dictaphone just could not fail.

It was as progressive and as invaluable as the telephone, or the typewriter, or the telegraph instrument. It was modern, up-to-the-minute, efficiency, personified in terms of real genius. And the advertisers knew that if they persisted, the Dictaphone would come into its own.

An ever-increasing amount of space was employed.

Newspapers were the favored medium.

Mr. Business Man was gradually wheedled into looking at the new machine without kicking over the traces. Here was a great invention. To ignore it was to discourage initiative and progress. No office could be considered complete without the Dictaphone. It was not in an experimental stage—the Dictaphone was a proven success. It worked—and there were a big number of business reasons why it worked in a labor saving manner.

All of these reasons were exploited, carefully, painstakingly, thoughtfully. Brown was made to realize that he was a sort of "baby," in his aversion.

If the big business executives were using the Dictaphone, then he, Brown, could do the same. There was nothing ridiculous after all in the thought of a man talking into a machine. That's what was done in the case of the telephone.

So Brown had a second fling.

He gained courage each day from reading about others who used the invention. His daily paper was interesting and educational, in its discourse on the metal stenographer. He remained over-time at the office one evening and lined up five or six sleek black cylinders of correspondence. The next morning at ten the letters were written and on his desk. He chuckled. It was bully!

ACTION IN THE COPY.

The story of Dictaphone economy and common sense has been told everywhere, locally, in striking pictures and in simple, rugged, matter-of-fact text.

There was the design showing the stenographer's pad, with its mass of hieroglyphics and its numberless little stubs of used up pencils. Think of the valuable time and energy wasted!

Business men have been constantly reminded in Dictaphone publicity, that the big, successful, progressive industrial concerns use the machine.

Four-column space is taken to present an illustration of immense steel plants, with the significant announcement that if a twenty-acre national enterprise finds the Dictaphone the solution of the correspondence problem, then you—even the one-floor man, should find it a labor-money-saving device. Big business is quick to employ big methods. It's the answer to why they are.

It is stated, on safe authority, that the use of this shrewd piece of mechanism cuts down the cost of writing the letter one-third. And they prove it.

The newspaper propaganda has been tactful. Its underlying current of, "Oh, but you're missing a trick when you write letters without the Dictaphone" starts Brown worrying. Then comes a strata of dissatisfaction and doubt.

He asks if his present way is the efficient way.

One rule has held good in Dictaphone publicity—especially of late—it isn't spectacular, it isn't "highfalootin'" and "smart." The showing of the machine in the biggest manner possible, the showing of its use, the comparison with obsolete methods, and the picture suggestion of great organizations employing it, are all the stuff that the powerful campaigns are made of.

WHERE THE NEWSPAPER "STRIKES TWELVE."

You touch a man where the skin is thin, when you suggest that he's a bit old-fashioned—that he isn't conducting his business as it should be conducted, and that the other fellow is beating him to an efficient measure.

And there's no whim to the Dictaphone.

It isn't late mornings.

It doesn't use cheap perfume and stay out two hours for lunch.

It doesn't run off and get married just when you're used to it.

It doesn't observe restricted office hours—it's "on the job" when you are, all the busy distance 'round the clock.

A month by month appeal might have taken years. A day by day appeal simply refuses to let up on the Browns and the Smiths until the machine is safely installed.

That's where your newspaper strikes twelve.

It would be more convincing to the advertiser if you could demonstrate with an individual cost sheet that, although you were efficiently conducting your business, nevertheless his rate was too low, as evidenced by his particular cost sheet.

It would not be so difficult to raise rates and at the same time establish confidence among your advertisers.

Do you know your Productive and Non-Productive Expenses—for example, do you know what you pay every Saturday for "Distribution?" Do you know on which display advertisements you are earning a profit and on which you are losing, and how much?

A Cost System will not necessitate any additional help in your clerical departments. It is an investment, not an expense. It will show you where your leaks are, and where expenses may be cut without risk of damaging the prestige and service of your paper.

Would you like the names of Publishers of Newspapers with approximately your circulation who are today using this system and who are saving money by its use? Would you like the names of Advertising Managers who will vouch for the benefits they have received? They are on the firing line and speak from their personal experience.

TYPE COMPOSITION IN THE NEWSPAPER AD.

STYLES APPLYING TO VARIOUS CLASSES OF BUSINESS—A REAL AD SERVICE DEPARTMENT.

BY O. M. BRODFUEHRER,

Manager of the Chicago Tribune Copy and Service Department.

[This is an address delivered by Mr. Brodfuehrer to the members of the Advertising Affiliation at their meeting in Rochester, N. Y., on October 27. In inviting Mr. Brodfuehrer to speak on the subject of "Type Composition as Applied to Newspaper Advertising," the program committee stated it conceded "that the pages of the Chicago Tribune were better typographically than any other newspaper in the country." Mr. Brodfuehrer presented a concise analysis of his subject by taking the Chicago Tribune as its basis.]

The value of a newspaper advertisement depends much on its ability to attract attention. Type is usually the basis of an advertisement, and as type tells the story of what the advertiser offers the buying audience it must exhibit enough attractiveness to draw the reader's attention.

The successful merchant—the successful store—reflects character and individuality.

Successful advertising reflects character and individuality.

Type, in the guise of an advertisement, is the silent salesman of the successful merchant and must therefore possess character and individuality. The wide variety of types in use today thus justifies itself, since every merchant, every institution, possesses an individuality peculiarly distinctive.

Individuality of an advertisement is determined by the size and shape of the ad, the kind of illustration, the selection of type faces and their composition, the style of border and the use of white space.

It is possible to conceive of one type only, with all the necessary sizes for every purpose. It could be neat—easy to read—easy to set, but as individuality is simply an expression of variety there must be types that express the many kinds of individuality and variety.

There must always be something new, different and distinctive, to portray, by the printed word, the many kinds of emotions and businesses in which mankind indulges.

INDIVIDUAL USERS OF TYPE.

Therefore a type face peculiarly expressive of every particular line of business has gradually been evolved. To illustrate, I find that the following rules usually hold:

Architects, decorators, florists, furniture dealers, furriers, glassware dealers, jewelers, millinery shops, piano dealers, toilet goods shops and other similarly genteel businesses prefer Della Robbia, Caslon Old Style, Bodoni, Art Craft Bold, Puritan Old Style, New Caslon, Caslon Old Style Italic, Camelot Old Style and sometimes Old English.

Automobile advertisers, bankers, druggists, electric appliance shops, foodstuff manufacturers, fixture dealers, investment houses, lumber dealers, machinery establishments, motor truck concerns, plumbers, railways, roofers, rubber goods stores, shoe dealers and tobacco purveyors find such types as Bookman, Machine Old Style, Cheltenham Wide, New Caslon, Cheltenham Bold, Art Craft Bold, Caslon Heavy, Franklin Gothic, Hancock and similar types for their use.

Clothing dealers, candy shops and laundries have a strong preference for Puritan Old Style, Art Craft Light, New Caslon, Cheltenham In-line, Caslon Old Style Italic and Cheltenham Bold Italic.

The printed matter of the junk dealer would look absurd printed in Della Robbia, Camelot Old Style, or Old English.

Your announcement of a Fashion Display De Luxe done in Gothic Square, Roycroft or Charter Oak would appear equally ridiculous. The cheap, gaudy bargain house with its $7.98 Men's Suits or $2.89 chapeaux displayed before a bargain-hungry reading public in Camelot Old Style, Puritan Old Style, Clearface Bold Italic would lose its power of appeal.

"Gentility associates with gentility" and refined mediums and methods are its instruments.

The antitheses are just as true. The house catering to a clientele of distinction in dress or art, home furnishings or automobiles must maintain a harmonious relationship between the matter it prints and the materials it sells.

Your individual coal dealer is in a class of coal dealers, and there is a type that radiates a certain individuality that is analogous to coal.

Your women's apparel shops appeal to the instinct of beauty, self-adornment, personality. To secure maximum results for such advertisers the type and text must be in harmony.

O. M. BRODFUEHRER.

The banker, broker and investment house usually runs to heavy, cold type.

Conservatism is rampant although the newer advertising of this class is beginning to take on the earmarks of greater attractiveness. But Gothic, Cheltenham and a little Old Style now and then still have the lead. Heavy borders, or slight variations thereof, enclose these every day, monotonous varieties of type, usually set without thought to artistic arrangement. It is an example of "class type" brought to its highest fulfillment—the psychology of the crowd.

Your florist and jeweler, your shoe shop and food manufacturer display their advertisements in a different type face, type display, type composition, from your furnace man, your boiler manufacturer, your building material exhibitor or your real estate dealer.

An important feature of the usual newspaper advertisement is its illustration. On the staff of the Chicago Tribune we have a variety of artists, men and women who work in different mediums and styles.

Where we have a drawing done in a fine line, delicately maneuvered, the usual types used consist of Clearface Bold, Cheltenham Italic, Caslon Old Roman, Jensen and similar type faces.

Some of the artists wield a heavier pen or brush and then we use Gothic, Cheltenham Bold, Plymouth, Blanchard and types of that class. In other words, type and illustration must reflect an atmosphere of unity.

We have been considering the relationship of type to individuality as the basis of ad-setting. We know in setting an ad that we must take into consideration the nature of the advertiser's business and the standard of business he maintains. We see that type and art work are interwoven and therefore must be considered as a combination if we are to get the best results.

These things were brought to your attention first because they are the things which give the pages of the Chicago Tribune its world-wide reputation as the newspaper with the best record for clear, artistic, harmonious typography.

THE TRIBUNE ORGANIZATION.

This result is not due to "hit-or-miss" methods, but to the intelligent and arduous efforts of the various departments sharing in the responsibility. These departments include the composing room, with its seventy-odd hand compositors, its Linotype machines, Monotype and other equipment; the copy service and art department.

The copy service department has developed many of the "individualized" styles of accounts seen in the columns of the Chicago Tribune and has been so successful that in the last three years the number of accounts on which it has rendered service has grown four-fold.

Now we come to the active work of the Tribune ad-setting room. This is a highly specialized department. Its men are trained under the supervision of managers of broad ability and carefully defined policies.

The execution of ad-setting has been so systematized that many an advertising man is relieved of the necessity of preparing laborious layouts with exact measurements of types and rules indicated. If you could see the hodge-podge of copy which enters the composing room night after night and then see the same material coming out the next morning in attractively set proof form you would marvel at the efficiency of the system.

You would wonder how seventy men working under intense pressure could set approximately 180 ad columns of new material every night and produce such excellent results.

On some of the big nights as high as 235 columns have been set. It is a sight worth seeing and without boasting we are able to say that in the number of men employed, in the ability of these men, in the variety of type faces and in the quality of the type the Chicago Tribune is without a rival among Chicago newspapers.

FROM RAW TYPE.

Type is the raw material of which ads are made and that is why the Chicago Tribune has spent so much time, money and energy in developing an efficient composing room for setting up advertisements that will bring profitable returns to the advertisers and readers who make this great institution possible.

You have probably noticed the clear, clean-cut appearance of the type itself in the Chicago Tribune. The reason for it is this: We use the "non-distribution system," that is, type up to 14-point in size is never used more than once. New type is used in each set-up and we make this new type at the rate of a ton a week.

The Tribune was one of the pioneers in the development of the Monotype for casting type and now has a Monotype machine with 200 different type faces, most of them ranging from 6 to 36 point.

More than 1,000 cases receive this type. Over 50 tons of type is kept on hand for use and the machine works 16 hours a day casting forth new type to take the place of used type. This machine enables the Tribune "ad-room" to meet not only its ordinary daily performances with facility and ease—and these common performances would stump some of the nation's best equipped shops—but it performs unusual "stunts" every now and then.

For instance, recently 400 corners of unusual shape were needed for the "boxes" in a double-page advertisement. No print shop in the United States had that many in stock, but the Monotype machine cast the required number within half an hour.

Within the last few months a wonderful new invention has been added to this machine so that now rules, borders, lines and slugs can all be cast in any length and up to 18-point sizes. The tremendous saving in time, labor and expense is readily apparent.

Besides the Monotype machine there are 8 Linotype and Intertype machines with 63 type faces and sizes. There are two double-deck Linotypes with 4 styles of type in the magazines of each. There is a total of 55 Linotypes for the news and ad department.

With this equipment no emergency can stagger the work.

The number of type faces in the composing room is comparatively small in relation to the hundreds of faces used today, but every type face in the establishment is useful stuff. The selection, in fact, might be called nation-famous because hardly a day passes that a request is not received for the Tribune's Type Book. Advertising agencies, advertisers, schools of journalism, smaller newspapers and several of the advertising departments now being established in the larger universities have requested copies because they consider that it shows a representative collection of the best faces for newspaper work.

TRIBUNE PLAN OF MAKE-UP.

An important feature of newspaper typography which is frequently overlooked is the "make-up" of the pages. The Tribune's make-up is so rigid in adherence to its rules that no advertiser, no matter how influential he may be, has power enough to change them. This is to protect all advertisers and readers.

By this system every advertiser has a better chance to secure space next to reading matter. As a result of "pyramiding" from left to right, commonly known as the "step-system," both the news and advertising sections have an improved appearance. There are no ads scattered all over the page in an apparent effort to give some advertiser preferred position, and incidentally make the page look unsightly and "messy." There isn't any of that helter-skelter, scattered appearance so commonly seen even in some of our very best papers.

Another great development of the Chicago Tribune is its rotogravure section, printed in a beautiful green or brown tone. More artistic advertising is hardly conceivable and realizing its importance, this newspaper gives special attention to setting "roto" advertisements in a particularly careful manner.

As a general rule Bookman type is selected unless the illustration is of an exceptionally delicate finish. This type works well on "roto" since it is a smooth, even type of uniform thickness and has no sharp corners on thin lines.

Advertisers are now also offered the use of our colored magazine section, which is printed in four colors.

I have used the Chicago Tribune as the basis of my discourse because ad men who know what a good paper should be admit that the pages of the Chicago Tribune are at least the equal, if not the superior, of those of any other newspaper of the United States. I have shown how this result is produced by a combination of intelligence, skill and equipment.

KITCHEN ADDS TO HIS MANY ACCOMPLISHMENTS.

—and even Petrograd and Moscow. He spent a year abroad making a special study of the theater in all the leading capitals of Europe.

In addition to being a member of the editorial staff of the New York World, Mr. Kitchen is the New York correspondent of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, in which his daily letters are an editorial page feature. Prior to coming to New York, Mr. Kitchen was Sunday editor of the Plain Dealer and he has been connected with that publication for fifteen years.

Two years ago Mr. Kitchen was sent to Germany by the World and the Plain Dealer. He made a trip through Belgium in addition to visiting all the war capitals. His book, "After Dark in the War Capitals," had a large sale. He has been "literary advisor" to Raymond Hitchcock, the celebrated comedian, for many years.

Joseph A. Whitstone, owner of the Glentanna (Mont.) Reporter and the Baylor World, has bought the Opheim (Mont.) Observer.

FINE ADVERTISING IN ROCHESTER.

SOME THINGS PUBLISHERS OF THAT HUSTLING N. Y. STATE CITY ARE DOING.

The Rochester (N. Y.) newspapers carried more business in the month of October than ever before in their history, but a great deal of this income must go to meet the year's increased production cost. So profits will not show a proportionate growth.

The Rochester Democrat and Chronicle is the only Rochester paper that has increased its price. The rate to out-of-town dealers has gone up a quarter of a cent a copy, now being three-quarters of a cent a piece.

General Manager W. C. Cook says that many out-of-town copies have been cut off, and still the paper is running daily 69,000 and Sunday 66,000.

When the supply of paper was low this year the management refused to take department store ads of more than four columns, where they were formerly a page. Although paper conditions are better now, Mr. Cook says advertisers in the Democrat and Chronicle are not yet allowed to use all the space they want.

Except on Friday and Sunday, the size of the editions is kept down to eighteen to twenty-four pages. On Friday, the Democrat and Chronicle is now running from twenty-eight to thirty-two pages, and on Sunday thirty-two to forty pages, exclusive of supplements.

George Schmelz is now telegraph editor of the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle in the place of Fred Walker, who has enlisted in the Canadian mounted rifles.

J. E. Morey, president and general manager of the Rochester Evening Times, expects to install a new press in the spring, and he is now working on plans to allow room for the additional machinery in the building on State street, which the newspaper owns. Mr. Morey is very proud of the fact that the Times circulation has increased 16,000 in two years, entirely unsolicited.

Another interesting thing about the Times organization is that eighty-two per cent of the staff has been with the Times for a period of fourteen months or more. For this reason, Mr. Morey says, there is a strong office spirit among the Times employees that most other newspapers do not have.

William J. Curtis, Jr., vice-president of the Union and Advertiser and manager of national advertising, is a second lieutenant at Camp Dix.

Besides a very satisfactory increase in business, the circulation of the Union and Advertiser is now about 2,000 more than last year in spite of the efforts of W. J. Curtis, president and business manager, and Circulation Manager J. A. Ritz to hold it down.

The Union and Advertiser has installed four new Intertypes, making a battery of six of these machines now in the plant, which includes two Linotypes also.

Led by Mr. Curtis the publishers of the five Rochester daily newspapers (the Herald, the Times, the Democrat and Chronicle, the Post-Express and the Union and Advertiser) contributed $1,700 to the Rochester Liberty Loan fund.

Instead of the newspapers giving free advertising space to the Liberty Loan campaign, as they were asked to do, the publishers turned over the above amount to the committee and said that advertising space could be purchased in any amount desired and that they would be glad to co-operate in every possible way in the matter of boosting the bonds through the news and editorial columns.

Thus the publishers contributed like every other contributor and six or seven pages of space were bought by the committee in each of the newspapers on a business basis.

The Rochester Herald is now completely installed in its new building, running from Aqueduct to Graves street. The business and circulation office is located on East Main street. The new Herald building is a seven-story structure, with about 36,000 feet of floor space.

A unique feature of the Herald's location is that it has water rights to a mill race of the Genesee River running directly underneath it. This will permit, whenever the Herald wants it, to install a water power electric plant of its own. As yet this has not been done, but L. M. Antisdale, the president and editor, says it may be in the near future.

On moving from the old plant on Exchange street, the Herald installed complete new steel equipment in its composing room and new Hoe stereotype machinery.

All of the seven floors in the Herald building are used by the newspaper, and there is room for the storage of about three car-loads of news print at all times.

The Herald has a new advertising manager in William Pfaff, who has taken the place of E. R. Mason. The latter is now vice-president of the Herald company.

Francis B. Mitchell, the president and general manager of the Rochester Post-Express, is very well satisfied with the way things are running for his paper. He and the rest of the management were much elated by the fact that the Post-Express was able to tack onto its publication of Edwin L. Clifford's attack, at the Advertising Affiliation meeting, on objectionable advertising carried by newspapers, the following note: "The Post-Express is one of the few papers that does not print objectionable medical ads."

The Herald maintained a pretty Liberty Loan display window in its business office on East Main street. A special attraction was a number of framed bonds issued by the Government to meet the Civil War debt, which are redeemable today at face value, plus the accrued interest of four per cent.

The Herald has an "Honor Roll" of twelve staff members with the colors. They are: Abram Bowitz in the Navy; Miles H. Dodge, marines; E. Dewey Kemp, Navy; Theodore Makowski, engineering corps; Clement G. Lanni, Navy; J. Charles McClelland, artillery; Harry F. Gibson, infantry; Samuel Phillips, artillery; John Sullivan, Navy; Albert B. Willey, signal corps; Gilbert Marvin, infantry; John McCarthy, marines.

PURCHASES INTEREST.

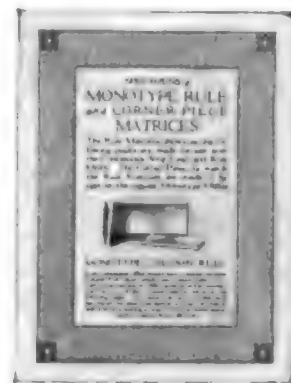

Scott McClure, editor of the Pomeroy (Ia.) Herald, has purchased an interest in the Storm Lake (Ia.) Register, owned by John R. Bell. Mr. Bell will be manager and Mr. McClure editor of the Register.

PRINTERS TAKE UP BONDS.

Members of the composing department of the New York World have subscribed $5,200 toward the second Liberty Loan, it was announced at a rally in the composing room of that paper on October 23.

MONOTYPE FACES ARE IN BIG DEMAND.

The Lanston Monotype Machine Company of Philadelphia reports that the steady increase in the number of new Monotype faces and the demand for matrices for existing faces are keeping a constantly growing area trix department busy turning out matrices to supply the demand.

The September issue of the new specimen sheets consist of about eighty new pages and includes new title pages for the border and ornaments and continuous strip rule sections of the company's big loose-leaf specimen book.

VETERAN RETIRES.

After serving for twenty-seven years as editor of the Purcell (Okla.) Register, W. H. Walker has retired from active service. Mr. Walker is said to have written the first editorial advocating one statehood for Oklahoma and Indian Territory. He was temporarily expelled from the Territorial Press Association because of this article.

BOSTON HERALD'S "COME-BACK."

AND THE MAN WHO HAS AGAIN PLACED IT IN FRONT RANK OF NEWSPAPERS.

It is an opinion expressed among many newspaper publishers throughout the country that the "come-back" of the Boston Herald in the last four years has not been duplicated by any newspaper in a large metropolitan center within the last decade.

In talking over this matter with James H. Higgins, general manager of the Herald, which recently took over the Boston Journal, THE FOURTH ESTATE gathered some facts and figures on the Herald's growth that are really remarkable. Mr. Higgins said:

"In 1912 the total volume of advertising carried in the Boston Herald was $404,000.

"This year we shall add a million dollars on top of that. This is certainly a remarkable growth.

"In point of circulation within the same period the Herald has gone from an all-day circulation of 152,000 to a net paid sale of 220,000.

"The recent acquisition of the Boston Journal has proven from the present point of view to be a success exceeding our expectations. We have reason to believe that the combined Herald-Journal has, after eliminating duplications, service papers, etc., been able to take over practically the entire Journal circulation, and we are building today a paper that in our judgment will retain these readers.

"Although realizing fully that it will take some sixty or ninety days before a final determination can be made, we are confident that the final figures we shall be able to announce on January 1 will exceed our expectations.

"For the nine months of 1917 the Herald made greater gains in both local and foreign advertising than any other newspaper in Boston, and is still making rapid progress.

"The Sunday Herald has in the period from 1912 to the present time gone from a net paid circulation of $8,000 to a present net paid of more than 120,000, and is still consistently showing progress."

From a severe financial loser in 1912, the Herald is today a profitable and prosperous institution.

THE STORY OF JAMES H. HIGGINS

The man who managed the Herald in its upbuilding furnishes another realization of the old story of a boy "farmed out" to the job printing business (at the age of seventeen years after trying many other things, from office boy in a coal office to painting blinds in the attic of a paint shop) working his way up the ladder of success.

James H. Higgins' first year's apprenticeship as a "printer's devil" was fully compensated in the opinion of his employer, in the munificent sum of $9 a month. The second year brought $12 a month and the third reached the heights of $15 monthly.

That was in the days when the youngster's employer was not privileged to advertise himself as a "steam printer," because the power to run the press was furnished by Higgins standing on one leg and "kicking" the press with the other. This was not exactly "fun" on days when a job was run on the half medium Universal.

At the end of the third year Higgins secured a one-third interest in his employer's business. In two years more he took on the entire business.

In 1887 Fred E. Smith launched the Newburyport (Mass.) Daily News, and shortly suggested the amalgamation of his newspaper with Higgins' job printing business. It was done, and that episode marked the beginning of his life in newspaperdom which has continued to the present.

In 1892 the News Building was built, a fine brick building—a permanent home for the Newburyport News. In 1911 the News Publishing Company was incorporated with three old employees interested in the corporation as officers and stockholders. Mr. Higgins still continues as treasurer and general manager.

The Newburyport News was among the first of the country dailies to adopt the Linotype. Ten weeks' apprenticeship at the Mergenthaler factory comprised the foundation of knowledge which enabled Higgins to act as his own Linotype machinist for several years, until the paper was strong enough to employ a man in that capacity.

In 1898 Mr. Higgins was called to the Worcester Post to reorganize and systematize that paper and remained until the object was accomplished.

In 1908, with Fred E. Smith, Higgins acquired the controlling interest in the Gloucester Daily Times, forming the Gloucester Times Company and assumed the duties of treasurer and general manager, with Mr. Smith as editorial executive. This lineup is still in operation.

In 1912, again in collaboration with Mr. Smith, Mr. Higgins purchased the Lynn Evening News, and they have operated that newspaper to the present time with Mr. Higgins as treasurer and Mr. Smith as editor.

In December 1911 Mr. Higgins was called to join the management of the Boston Traveler, and on July 1, 1912 it was consolidated with the Boston Herald: a coalition that worked out very successfully.

Mr. Higgins remained with the Herald institution as business manager until 1914, when he was elected treasurer and general manager of the Boston Herald, Inc., publishing the Herald (morning), Traveler (evening) and Sunday Herald, in collaboration with Robert L. O'Brien as editorial executive.

On October 8, 1917, the Herald acquired the Boston Journal and consolidated it with the Herald as the Boston Herald and Boston Journal.

Mr. Higgins' early experience comprised everything from washing rollers to the news and editorial line. The times when he went out in the night to "cover" a murder case, returned to the office to write it up, stood at the case to set it up (this before Linotype was known), made up the paper, ran it off on the press, and went out in the grey of the morning and sold the papers on the street, were not confined to one instance.

So, (like the old time shoemaker, who sat at the bench and built a shoe from start to finish as contrasted with the present day method, in which men know only cutting or lasting, or bottoming—specializing as compared to complete knowledge of the whole), James H. Higgins is doubtless of that class of men fast passing out of existence, whose whole life has been devoted to all parts of the printing business—a knowledge acquired in the school of hard knocks where the college colors are aptly said to be "black and blue."

only to give mills an opportunity to increase the weight to the publishers and, therefore, to increase their already high prices.

ONLY ABOUT TWO EXCEPTIONS

"The right to these variations, which manufacturers have forced on publishers in a time of stress, has been under the year's operations very much abused.

"With probably not more than two exceptions, mills in this country are running much overweight, in many cases to 33 to 35 pounds and in a few cases, even over that, when they are contracted to sell standard news print on a 32-pound basis.

"Publishers are now paying sufficiently high prices for news print without paying prices increased by overweight.

"In addition to this, the country today is interested in every possible form of economy. In this campaign, publishers are co-operating, yet when the country is in such stress, manufacturers are recklessly wasting raw material by increasing the weight in news print paper, so that a ton of paper does not go nearly as far as it did previously.

"The natural resources of the country, power and wood, are thereby wasted just to that extent, when we need every possible conservation.

"This on top of the unusual inefficiency of many marginal mills in the United States, which are attempting to make news print paper is probably as gross an example of deliberate waste and neglect as there is in the country at the present time.

A. N. P. A. WILL TEST SAMPLES.

"The paper committee has opened a testing bureau at 803 World Building, New York City, where all members may have their paper tested for strength and weight by submitting samples.

"There should be at least three samples, 3 feet square.

"Publishers are urged to send in samples and have their weights tested in order to know the manner in which their own mill is supplying paper."

F. J. WARBURTON IS DEAD.

WAS SECRETARY-TREASURER OF LINTYPE COMPANY SINCE ITS BIRTH.

Frederick J. Warburton, secretary-treasurer of the Mergenthaler Linotype Company during its entire existence (from 1886), died yesterday at his home in Scarsdale, N. Y., after only a few days' illness. He was a man who had a host of friends in the newspaper field and was a close aide to President Philip T. Dodge in building up the magnificent Linotype organization.

Mr. Warburton was seventy-six years old and was born in Ireland. He came to America when he was thirteen years old and worked his way up to the important positions he occupied. He began by studying law, worked as a court reporter and was admitted to the bar.

In the early days of his connection with the Mergenthaler Company Mr. Warburton was also treasurer and a director of the National Typographic Company, the owner of the Linotype patent rights abroad, and in his work as secretary and also attorney in civil litigation, he won many friends for the Linotype Company.

Mr. Warburton was among the first to appreciate the great advantages of the Linotype and its vast possibilities in the publishing world. He was interested in the More rotary machine, which gave the first suggestion of the Linotype to Mergenthaler, who was then a workman employed in building models of the More machine.

From that time on Mr. Warburton was actively engaged in the interests of the Linotype.

At the time of his death, Mr. Warburton was also vice-president and a director of the American Graphophone Company, vice-president of the Columbia Phonograph Company, director of Linotype Machinery, Ltd., and held other important offices in the business world.

ENGLISH CRITICISM OF OUR AMERICAN ADS.

The advertising of the American Selfridge Store, in London, was recently raked fore and aft by the quick-fingers of a London advertising journal. The writer says that there is a tendency for Selfridge advertising to grow frivolous.

That your British advertising may never be indicted of that grievous offence, avoid such terms as "nobby," "natty," "stunning," and don't talk of any article of dress as "sweetly simple."

In other words, "When in Rome, do as Rome does." Or, the partisans of the King's English will get you if you don't watch out.

The Winnipeg Saturday Post with its issue of October 13 discontinued publication.

THE A.N.P.A. PAPER RECOMMENDATIONS

A. G. McIntyre, special representative of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, said to THE FOURTH ESTATE yesterday:

"We have recommended to all publishers to only make contracts for next year under certain conditions.

"We wish to reaffirm this decision and to particularly ask publishers to again read the recommendations, printed in THE FOURTH ESTATE this week.

"Manufacturers, when informed of the recommendations of the paper committee, attempted to convince many publishers that this advice was unwise, claiming that publishers with stocks on hand must therefore have the whip hand.

"This is partially true, even under present conditions.

"You will notice, however, that the recommendations of the committee were not to absorb stocks on hand entirely, but to deduct from the quantity of next year's contract (when a contract is made) the quantity in storage on December 31. This storage will only be gradually used up during the year and it would not be until December, 1918, that it would be entirely exhausted.

"In this way, the manufacturers' argument falls down, as a publisher during the life of his contract, by operating in this way, would always have surplus paper on hand.

"The committee further advised that if publishers are unable to obtain a satisfactory contract, to depend on the open market. They can then keep two or three months' supply ahead, so that during difficult market conditions they may be able to keep out of the market for a month or two in the case of a 'peak' price.

"We find on checking over the figures quoted of paper in storage, and which we estimated last year at 200,000 tons, that this is now certain to be about 300,000 tons, or practically between two and three months' supply.

"This probably will not be decreased during the year on account of increased production, increased importation and decreased consumption over a similar period last year, although an increased consumption over the summer months just passed."

FOR THE WEEK ENDING NOVEMBER 3, 1917

KEEP WORKING FOR WATER POWER DEVELOPMENT.

While it was found impossible to secure action on water power legislation at the special session of Congress, owing to a pressure of war emergency legislation, very satisfactory and substantial progress was made in the matter.

The representative of the American Newspaper Publishers Association committee on paper at Washington reports that it now appears certain that water power legislation will be among the first matters to be considered by Congress at the regular session which convenes early in December.

As has heretofore been pointed out in THE FOURTH ESTATE, if the vast Western stands of pulp wood timber are to be made available for the manufacture of news print, the present restrictive laws with regard to water power development must be modified so that private capital may find therein a basis for investment.

Immediately following the adoption of resolutions by the American Newspaper Publishers Association at its convention at Washington in June, which was followed by the adoption of similar resolutions by the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association at its convention in July, active work was started by the committee on paper to secure, if possible, action on this legislation at the special session of Congress.

That was, however, not found possible; therefore attention was given to having early consideration at the coming session of Congress.

There are now four bills, which have been introduced and will come up for consideration.

The Walsh Bill and the Myers Bill in the Senate relating to water powers in the public domain, the Shields Bill in the Senate and the Small Bill in the House relating to water powers on navigable streams.

All the bills embody generally the same basic feature of an irrevocable fifty-year permit or lease under proper regulations. They will undoubtedly all be considered in committee and reported back with modifications, but there seems to be every reason to believe that satisfactory legislation will be passed at the next session of Congress as a powerful and steadily growing interest is being evinced in this matter by not only the newspapers but commercial organizations throughout the country.

The importance of editorial comment favorable to this legislation can not be overestimated. Newspapers are therefore urged to give this subject prominence in their editorial columns, and when doing so to send a marked copy direct to the office of the A. N. P. A. committee in the World Building, New York.

Publishers are also requested to urge upon the representatives in Congress from their district the importance of this legislation.

PRACTICAL ADVICE ON WAR NEWS EDITING.

Lord Northcliffe, in his address following the Kansas City Star's luncheon in his honor last week, intimated to the large number of editors present from Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa and Missouri just what his opinions are regarding the nature of war material to be printed.

Here are some of the things he favors as being applicable to the newspaper situation in the United States:

Print the whole truth.

Do not make a scare-head about the 7,500 prisoners captured by the French today and bury the story about the 27,000 British casualties last week. The casualties are more important than the captures.

Do not pay much attention to trench matters. Tell more about the vaster army behind the army in order to give the people some idea of the amazing mass of materials and munitions that must be transported to keep a great army in being.

Do not talk about a short war. There is no basis in fact for the theory of a short war.

Get a lot of good maps of the fighting front and use them frequently to help the reader acquire an accurate interest in the fighting zone.

Minimize the stories that come out of Germany about changes in the social system, changes in the government, revolution and the like. That is German propaganda.

Give much space to educating your readers in the difficulties of transport. Emphasize the necessity of ships, more and more ships.

Don't be afraid of being unpopular by displaying adverse news; you will be rewarded for your stand later.

GET SUBSCRIBERS TO PROTEST AGAINST MAIL DELAY.

The delay in the handling of second class mail has become well nigh exasperating to newspaper publishers. From every part of the country THE FOURTH ESTATE hears complaints that the Post Office Department is paying no attention to protests by publishers.

Of course, we must all put up with necessary delays caused by the war emergency, but there seems to be no excuse for the long time it is taking on the average to get newspapers to their subscribers.

Newspapers are a perishable commodity in the full meaning of the word—but the Post Office people never seem to realize it—even in normal times.

Whenever there is a choice of holding up various kinds of mail matter, the newspapers are so favored.

And still the Post Office officials always take pleasure in exploiting the alleged splendid service that is given to newspaper publishers at such a terrible loss to the Government!

Rather than take the blame for the delays without explanation, publishers ought to go to more pains to explain the situation to their readers, and ask their aid to give the newspapers a fair chance in the mail.

Publication of a box notice at the head of the paper, prominently displayed, along the lines of the following might help matters:

DO YOU GET YOUR PAPER ON TIME?

Subscribers who do not receive their paper through the mails in the proper time are hereby advised that it is no fault of the publishers.

You are requested, therefore, to write a personal letter to the Postmaster General at Washington each and every time there is delay—so that the head of the department may realize what the conditions are—in the hope that they may be improved.

By pursuing this course you will not only help yourself but will help the publishers.

It is expected that the Post Office Department will welcome definite knowledge of present unsatisfactory service.

THE FOURTH ESTATE is among the newspapers affected by the Post Office laxity, and it recently published the above notice in a box on its editorial page.

It met with much favorable comment by readers, who acted on the suggestion.

A number of prominent newspaper men declared that the advice ought to be published in all newspapers and it would do a great deal to help the situation.

NOTE AND COMMENT.

Not only did Chicago make a great record in subscriptions to the second Liberty Loan, but she has also furnished a plan that helped cities all over the country in their Liberty Loan campaigns.

When it was learned that there would be no paid advertising campaign by the Government, a plan for a complete advertising campaign, and a whole series of advertisements, assembled in the Liberty Loan News was sent out to cities by William H. Rankin of Chicago, vice-chairman of the National Advertising Advisory Board, and mats of the advertisements were furnished at cost to all newspapers running the advertisements.

Edwin Markham, the author of "The Man With the Hoe," told a Chicago audience that the poem produced nine barrels of newspaper clippings.

"I paid for four barrels myself," said the poet, "but then my bank account was exhausted and friends came to my rescue and paid for the other five barrels."

"Poor old Russia! Could it have had our host of daily and weekly newspapers to foster a unity of national thought, it would not now be crucified on the cross of ignorance and revolution."

Thus spoke J. H. McKeever, editor of the Aberdeen (S. D.) Daily American, in a talk to the students in journalism of the Northern Normal and Industrial School of that city.

Mr. McKeever called the people of the United States the "greatest newspaper readers on earth." Taking up the structure of the news story and the writing of headlines, he stated that headlines today are recovering their sanity.

"In the days of the Spanish-American war, when Hearst broke into New York City," he said, "and the rivalry between his paper, the Journal, and the World became white hot, they went wild. The limit was reached when the Journal carried in red ink on its front page only three letters, spelling W A R."

A reader of THE FOURTH ESTATE makes a suggestion that automobile advertising may be so worded as to make a man proud to own a car on which he had paid a tax that will assist the Government in winning the war for democracy. He will be "doing his bit." By suppressing his timidity about buying a car he will help to keep business moving, thousands of men employed, wives and children housed and fed and clothed.

Some skilful copy man might make real selling stuff out of this.

SUGGESTION FOR CANADIAN NEWSPAPERS.

Judging from the report of W. F. O'Connor, acting commissioner, who has been investigating the cost of living, Canadian newspapers could do their country's business men a great good by educating them to the necessity of greater efficiency in industry which will permit of reductions in the costs of production and make it possible for Canadian manufacturers to lower their prices and thus have a better chance in the keen competition for world trade that will follow the termination of the war.

Mr. O'Connor says that his investigations have convinced him that a large number of Canadian manufacturers do not know how to figure costs, and that they sell goods at whatever price they can get. Far too many of them, he says, charge themselves with nothing or with too little for depreciation.

Others have no accounting system at all. Some are manufacturing or selling lines which pay and other lines which do not pay, the losses due to the latter operating as a drag on the profits earned by the former.

If they knew the facts they might drop the unprofitable lines. The matter is indisputable that business men who carry on their enterprises vainly imagining that they are making profits which the services of any expert cost accountant for a few days would show are non-existent because of this cause or that, are headed straight for the road to bankruptcy.

Some businesses do not pay. There are too many of them.

Others are being inefficiently conducted.

Proper cost accounting systems will disclose real conditions. Every business man should know just where he stands.

Through the excellent work of the Canadian Press Association, the newspapers of Canada have profited by being themselves educated in proper cost accounting.

They can now profit further by telling what they have learned to their less fortunate local business men, teaching them how to save money in production, and to spend it wisely in more advertising.

PURELY PERSONAL.

William Sevier of the Wilmington (Del.) Evening Journal is doing the publicity work for the next Delaware poultry show, which will be held in Wilmington in November.

William F. Metten, business manager of the Wilmington (Del.) Evening has returned from an extensive business trip in the West, during which he made his annual calls on some of the largest Western clients of that paper.

Miss Helen Price, assistant treasurer of the Wilmington (Del.) Evening has returned from a two-week vacation.

Edward G. Brown, editor and owner of the Centreville (Md.) Record, and Mrs. Brown have been spending a vacation in Atlantic City, N. J. Mr. Brown is also state's attorney.

Joseph T. Mannix of Minneapolis, former Minnesota state printer, has reached Tacoma, Wash., in the course of his leisurely tour to the Orient.

Dr. William E. Aughinbaugh, associate editor of Leslie's Magazine, has purchased a new home on Clinton avenue near Llewellyn Road, New York.

Judson C. Welliver, London correspondent of the New York Sun, is home on a leave of absence. He was the guest of honor at a recent dinner given by the Washington Times staff in the National Press Club.

M. A. Morgan, formerly editor of the Harrisburg (Ore.) Bulletin, has bought a 100-acre farm and has left the newspaper field for good.

John Gilbreath of the Chattanooga (Tenn.) Times staff has been severely ill with threatened pneumonia.

George Gifford, copy reader on the Chicago Daily News, is back at his desk again after being laid up since June because of an accident. While riding a bicycle he was struck by an automobile truck and seriously hurt.

Joseph E. Sharkey, chief of the Tokio (Japan) bureau of the Associated Press, and Mrs. Sharkey are in New York visiting.

THOMPSON WOUNDED ON ITALIAN WAR FRONT.

A party of American journalists were on the highest rampart of the castle at Gorizia, on the Isonzo front, during a violent cannonade, when a shell fell a few feet from them burying the whole party under earth and mud, says a Reuter dispatch from the Italian front.

Although all were knocked down, only one, Charles T. Thompson of the Associated Press, was hurt. He was wounded slightly in the left cheek, and his injury was dressed immediately at a neighboring post.

MRS. KEELEY HOSTESS.

While at Chicago, Lord Northcliffe was entertained at a reception and tea given in his honor at the Blackstone Hotel by Mrs. James Keeley, wife of the proprietor of the Herald.

"Jack" Byrne, formerly on the Chicago Examiner, has been released from military service at Rockford and is now back in Chicago working as a reporter on the American.

"Jack" Malloy, at one time connected with the Chicago Day Book, is now on the local staff of the Chicago Daily News.

Vinton E. McVicker, for the past three months manager of the Philadelphia bureau of the United Press, has resigned to become director of publications with the Ohio state health department at Columbus. He will take up his new duties on November 5.

Walter H. Averill, who has been connected with the selling force of the Thomas Cusack Company, has joined the advertising department of the St. Louis Times.

Lisle D. Bell, New York correspondent for the Columbus (Ohio) State Journal, is now editing a series of humorous reviews appearing in the City Life section of the New York American.

B. A. McKelvie, formerly with the Vancouver (B. C.) Province, is now managing editor of the Vancouver Sunday Tribune published by George M. Murray.

Lester A. Lear, formerly of the Lantern, published by the students of the University of Ohio at Columbus, Ohio, and the Wheeling (W. Va.) Register, has become editor of the Callipolis (Ohio) Journal.

Felix Barriere, formerly manager of L'Echo Publishing Company, New Bedford, Mass., is now advertising manager of Le Prix Courant, Montreal.

KANSANS ELECT MARBLE.

The Second District (Kan.) Editorial Association, which met last week in Lawrence, chose the following officers: George W. Marble, Fort Scott, president; C. E. Craig, Pleasanton, vice-president; Mrs. C. B. Wiard, DeSoto, treasurer; and Asa F. Converse, Wellsville, secretary.

The next annual meeting will be held at Fort Scott.

The fifty members attended the Ames-Kansas football game and were entertained by the staff of the University Kansan, the Kansas University publication.

NEWS NOTES OF CIRCULATORS.

Edwin L. Tucker, circulation manager of the Rochester (N. Y.) Post-Express believes that the only real circulation building method is the house-to-house canvass. He works it on the Post-Express with most satisfactory results.

Morris Blakeslee has been appointed superintendent of carriers for the Rochester (N. Y.) Herald in the place of Harry Gibson, who has been called to the colors.

Circulation Manager Fonda's department on the Rochester (N. Y.) Democrat and Chronicle is now minus John G. Crisfield and Charles Westfall. Both are in the Government service. Criswell is a second lieutenant at Camp Dix, and Westfall is with the aviation corps at San Antonio, Tex.

After seven months in the trenches on the Western front, Joseph P. Clinton, formerly a San Francisco newsboy, has returned to San Francisco with an honorable discharge from the Canadian Army. He will go to Arizona to recover from the effects of gas shell.

Distribution of the New Universities Dictionary has started with indications that hundreds of readers of the Philadelphia North American will take advantage of the offer to obtain at extremely low expense a volume which many will find a valuable addition to their libraries and reading tables.

For three coupons from issues of the North American readers can obtain dictionaries.

Twenty-five supplementary dictionaries.

In one book, besides all the other aids to studying modern English, are special dictionaries of words used particularly as Americanisms and in automobiling, aviation, golf, baseball, commerce and law, football, lacrosse, tennis, war, music, photography, polo, wireless telegraphy and yachting.

Besides these are dictionaries of atomic weights, Christian names, classical abbreviations, everyday allusions, foreign words and phrases, forms of address, most common abbreviations, noted characters in literature, state names and meanings of words of opposite and like meanings.

The quarterly meeting of the New England Association of Circulation Managers will be held in Hartford, Ct., next Thursday and Friday. The complete program was announced in THE FOURTH ESTATE last week.

Formation of the Western Canada Circulation Managers Association was completed at a meeting in Winnipeg on October 25. The following officers were elected: President, A. J. Hilliker, Calgary Herald; vice-presidents, A. G. Gowan, Winnipeg Free Press; and M. Edelstein, Farmers' Advocate, Winnipeg; secretary-treasurer, J. S. Sweeney, Winnipeg Free Press. The annual convention will be held in August.

The Baltimore News has begun the publication of an early edition on Sunday morning, the paper appearing at 9 o'clock. This is followed by the regular edition of the Sunday Evening News at the regular time. The price of the morning edition will be one cent.

A number of publications are reported to be using with satisfactory results the "Giant Playground Equipment for District Schools" plan. This equipment is purchased by the newspaper and given as a prize to the school pulling the most votes in a subscription contest campaign. Walter G. Brooks, who formerly directed tourist promotion campaigns for newspapers, is handling the school equipment scheme. Newspapers running it at present include the Denison (Ia.) Bulletin, Carroll (Ia.) Herald, Missouri Valley News, Scranton (Ia.) Journal, Auburn (Ia.) Recorder, Clarion (Ia.) Clipper, Rockwell City (Ia.) Advocate and Every Child's Magazine, Omaha, Neb.

NEWSIES SELL $64,000 IN LIBERTY BONDS.

The Boston Record newsboys made a great last day "drive" for the Liberty Loan, and it was a big success, although the decision to tackle it was made by Circulation Manager Samuel Sklar only the day before. Each bond the boys sold was credited to the Boy Scouts, who worked in conjunction with the newsies.

The campaign was started right in "Newspaper Row," where the street was all torn up at the time on account of being repaved. This did not hinder the newsboys a bit. They pitched right in and planted tables and boxes on top of the sand piles and paving stones, and opened fire with their best oratorical guns on the crowd.

At 12 o'clock noon the meeting was transferred to the famous Old South Church. Master Louis Newman, one of Boston's brightest "newsies," opened this meeting as he did the other, in masterly style, and after making a stirring speech introduced Judge Murray, W. T. A. Fitzgerald, and Pliny Jewell, all of whom made strong appeals to the audience. The committee in charge estimates that the complete returns will show over $64,000 worth of bonds sold.

CARRIERS SEE PLAY.

Philadelphia newspaper carriers were the guest of Messrs. Elliott, Comstock and Gest, producers of "The Wanderer," and the Philadelphia North American at a matinee performance of "The Wanderer" at the Metropolitan Opera House of that city, on October 20.

NO ACTION YET ON CURTIS SELLING METHODS.

Representatives of the Curtis Publishing Company and the Pictorial Review Publishing Company were summoned to Washington on October 23 for a hearing by the Federal Trade Commission on the charges made by the Pictorial Review that the Curtis Company's selling agents methods were unfair.

The Trade Commission declared the Curtis system to be unfair last summer after suit had been instituted by the Pictorial Review.

The commission previous to the hearing had handled the matter in an informal way. Further action has been postponed by the commission, with no later date specifically set.

BOOKS FOR BOYS IN SERVICE.

The Philadelphia North American is giving much attention to the work of furnishing books to soldiers and sailors. Besides maintaining a bureau at which proper books can be purchased, the North American is publishing a series of page advertisements urging the public on the matter.

SILENT SALESMEN SELL PAPERS.

ROCHESTER HERALD HAS A SYSTEM THAT IS VERY PROFITABLE.

Leslie M. Kruschke, circulation manager of the Rochester (N. Y.) Herald, reports success with a "Silent Salesman" method of selling the Herald. The "Silent Salesmen" are strong canvas bags that are placed throughout the city at points not conflicting with dealers or corner boys.

Each bag contains an average of eighteen papers and is hung to a post or tree at the desired point. About 4,000 papers are sent out in the bags each morning by automobile distributors, leaving the mailing room at 4.30 a. m. and all being in their places by 6.30. There are two routes of distribution. The hanging places are at points where cars stop to take on or discharge passengers.

When a person takes a paper, he deposits one cent in a small open pocket on the outside of the bag. Of the 4,000 copies thus put out there is a return of only about eight per cent.

Over 200 bags are placed and the cash returns from $31 to $34 a day. There is an exceedingly small percentage of loss, and in cases where the bags have been cut or robbed, the police and Herald men watch out for the next time.

The bags are collected each morning by the automobile service and are back in the office for checking up at 9.30 or 10 a. m.

Mr. Kruschke says the "Silent Salesman" method is very economical. Each bag costs only thirty-five cents and it is very durable.

Whereas Heralds are sold to newsboys at 50 cents per 100, there is no expense to the "Silent Salesman" except the initial cost of the bags and the salary of the two collectors.

The Herald also has an automobile delivery service for towns in the Genesee Valley within a radius of fifty-five miles of Rochester, which beats the train schedules in some places by as much as five hours.

Mr. Kruschke has been in charge of the Rochester Herald circulation department for the past year, going there from the Chicago Tribune. He is a cousin of Max Annenberg, circulation manager of the Tribune.

TEXAS CHURCH PAPER.

The Fort Worth (Tex.) Tribune is a four-page, six column weekly newspaper, devoted to the church interests of the city, just launched. Three young newspaper men own and publish the paper. They are Douglas Tomlinson, of the Pulitzer School of Journalism; Horace Jones, formerly of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram staff; and Homer Tomlinson, formerly of the Texas Christian University publication, the Skiff.

WANT FEDERAL CONTROL.

At a meeting held in Rochester on October 20, the Western New York Newspaper Publishers Association adopted a resolution protesting against the action of paper manufacturers in setting unjustifiable prices.

It also endorsed the bill of Senator Smith of Arizona for Federal control of production, distribution and selling price of print paper.

BIG CARTOON COLLECTION.

Mortimer N. Wisdom of Boston, formerly dramatic editor of the Chicago Journal, is said to have the largest collection of cartoons in the country. It includes sixty-three volumes, covering a period of years from the Bryan and McKinley campaign in the fall of 1896.

OHIO NOW HAS AN ASSOCIATION.

CIRCULATION MANAGERS OF TWENTY PAPERS ELECT KAVANAUGH HEAD.

For the purpose of being able to exchange trade ideas and best promote newspaper circulation in general, the Ohio Circulation Managers Association was formed at a meeting in Columbus on October 30.

Twenty circulation managers were present, representing every large city of the state. An effort will be made to secure the membership of representatives of smaller papers, also.

T. J. KAVANAUGH.

T. J. Kavanaugh of the Dayton News was elected president, with the following associates:

Vice-president, Leslie E. Neafie, Toledo Blade; secretary, B. J. Ullman, Youngstown Vindicator; Directors, James Ragan, Cleveland News; C. J. Kirk, Cleveland Plain Dealer; E. L. Cohan, Cincinnati Commercial Tribune; and F. C. Wilson of the Columbus Dispatch.

The next meeting will be held in Dayton during April.

LAW FIRM CHANGE.

The firm of Morris, Plante & Saxe of New York has succeeded Morris & Plante. This firm is counsel for the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

The members now are Robert C. Morris, Martin Saxe and Guthrie B. Plante.

Mr. Saxe has resigned the presidency of the New York State tax commission and will act as counsel in Federal, state and local tax matters.

Charles R. McSparran, formerly deputy Attorney General and late counsel to the state tax commission, will be associated with the firm.

BIG BOOST FOR NEW YORK SUN TOBACCO FUND.

Seventeen thousand dollars in five days of this week toward promoting the comfort and efficiency of our soldiers in France was added to the New York Sun's Tobacco fund. This big jump was largely accounted for by the $5,000 offering of A. Paul Keith and Edward F. Albee and $8,000 representing a portion of the proceeds from the big show at the Hippodrome Sunday night.

THE BILLBOARD MAGAZINE'S CHRISTMAS NUMBER.

The special Christmas edition of the Billboard, the New York theatrical magazine is now being made up and the last form for the advertising will close on December 16. The management guarantees that the circulation will exceed 45,000 copies and will be obtainable wherever papers are sold throughout the English speaking world.

FOUR-STATE BODY OF CIRCULATORS

WILL BE FORMED AT MEETING IN PHILADELPHIA ON NOVEMBER 20.

Plans for the organization of a four-state circulation managers' association will be perfected at a meeting to be held in Philadelphia on November 20. Circulation managers of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland and Delaware have been requested to attend in invitations sent out by A. E. MacKinnon, circulation director of the Philadelphia North American.

A lively discussion is expected on the circulators' problems in dealing with military camps.

It is expected, however, that before the meeting Secretary of War Baker will have approved the proposition to regulate the sales of newspapers and magazines at camps, thereby doing away with the present confusing and costly methods and assuring equal representation.

The circulation managers of the four states feel that common interests demand closer working arrangements and expect that co-operation will bring equal economies throughout the states, when the organization will be perfected.

COUSINS' REVIEW NOW IN NEWSPAPERS.

Newspaper publishers know of the Cousins Financial and Business Review, compiled by W. S. Cousins, editor of the American Banker, New York, for the past ten years. Now his review is being published by thirty or more of the leading daily newspapers of the United States.

Mr. Cousins has been writing for a number of the prominent daily papers for more than six years. His work is not confined to Wall Street topics, but embraces a broad and general survey of financial, business and industrial conditions. His subjects cover the wide range of stocks and bonds, cotton, grain, corporation and industrial expansion, Government financing, iron and steel, copper, oil, with special relation to money and credit.

In order to provide better facilities for the enlargement of his service to newspapers, Mr. Cousins has opened a fully equipped office at 52 Broadway, New York.

NEW ERA STOPS.

The New Era of New York has been temporarily discontinued until the termination of the war, following the commissioning of Maurice Campbell, its editor, in the Army.

N. Y. MAYORALTY CANDIDATE COMPLAINS OF PRESS.

William M. Bennett, candidate for mayor of New York on the Republican ticket, made speeches in Printing House Square and Times Square on October 30 denouncing the Sun and the Times, respectively.

Summed up they amounted to a complaint that the newspapers do not share Mr. Bennett's views on some subjects or agree with him as to the amount of space that should be devoted to his exposition of the same.

He called attention to the fact that though he had made more speeches in the last three months than all the other candidates together it would be impossible for voters in Manhattan to know from the newspapers that he was even in the race.

PITTSFIELD NEWS DEAD.

The Pittsfield (Mass.) Daily News, an evening newspaper published for the last thirty-four years, made its farewell appearance on October 30.

Although its circulation had doubled in the last year and it was carrying more advertisements than ever before its publisher Charles W. Power, found it advisable to lease publication because of increased cost of production.

J. H. Pittman has discontinued publication of the Kramer (N. D.) Journal and has moved his plant to Mobill.

HEARST MUST PAY FOR FIRE WORKS DAMAGES.

A judgment for $21,783 against William Randolph Hearst in favor of the city of New York was affirmed by the Court of Appeals of New York State on October 30.

The action originated from a suit brought against the city by persons injured by an explosion of fireworks in Madison Square on an election night more than ten years ago. The city compromised the claims and brought suit against Mr. Hearst as president of the International Association of Democratic Clubs, which had provided the fireworks.

A lower court sustained the city. It was this judgment that was affirmed by the Court of Appeals.

BARTHELME DEPORTED.

In pursuance of a policy of action against enemy agents who seek to embarrass the Government by spreading premature peace propaganda, the United States has ordered Dr. George Barthelme, former Washington correspondent of the Cologne Gazette, deported to Germany.

Dr. Barthelme left Wichita, Kan., where he had been under surveillance, on October 24.

LIBEL SUIT OVER POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT.

A libel suit of an unusual kind is being contested in Rockford Ill.

The Morning Star was sued by the Socialist party for publishing advertising in a municipal election that was derogatory to that party. Suit was brought in the name of Oscar Ogren, candidate for mayor.

The Star was found not guilty by a jury and the motion for a new trial was overruled by the court. Now the case is on its way to the supreme court of the state.

The case is an interesting one to newspaper men because the Star offered in evidence books containing the writings of certain Socialist writers, also parts of addresses made by Socialists.

The advertising was prepared by a citizen's committee and the Star's service was that of printing the advertising. The articles were run as display and signed by "The Citizens' Campaign Committee."

HAS THIS "BADGER" EDITOR "BLAZED A TRAIL?"

EDITOR THE FOURTH ESTATE.

Sir: Observing with sympathetic interest the sturdy, well directed and determined efforts of publishers of all classes to meet the unprecedented exigencies of the paper situation and noting in your current issue an item mentioning an increase of column length from twenty to twenty-one inches, by the Wausau (Wis.) Daily Record-Herald, is there not therein suggested a means of economizing the paper supply which is available by the general increase of relative printed service, with a corresponding reduction of the usual margin as a war measure of relief?

Such an arrangement, if fostered by the publishers' associations and co-incidentally inaugurated by some of the "big fellows" of the metropolitan press, would surely work toward the desired result—to make the paper in hand or in sight go further and to reduce waste.

And if also, there should be a widespread systematic effort to reduce head line space—especially that of heads breaking columns, which many of the best papers typographically appear to have found to be feasible as well as a more attractive make-up—quite often an expensive two or four page tip or form might be saved and the total paper bill and waste reduced accordingly.

The writer would be sorry indeed to see such a practice become permanent. We all—in the demesne of printer's ink—are fairly well agreed as to the merits and importance of "white space" and plenty of it, and any lasting retrogression in typography on this scale would be truly pitiable.

But War is...lots of things.

We, many of us, prefer three lumps of sugar in our breakfast coffee, but we are willing (to help Hoover) to worry along for a while on two lumps or one.

Less margin and heading space for a while would not "hurt."

Perhaps the "badger" daily has "blazed a trail!"

COURT ASKED TO STOP SALE OF MONTREAL HERALD.

In the practice division of the Superior Court, Montreal, Stephen John Leburay, a shareholder in the Montreal Herald, petitioned Justice Bruneau to issue an injunction to prevent the transfer of the machinery and plant used for printing and publishing the Herald newspaper, as per lease decided upon at a special meeting of the Herald shareholders, the lease being for ten years, with option of purchase.

The petition alleges that the majority of the capital stock of the Herald is controlled by Lord Atholstan (Sir Hugh Graham of the Montreal (Star) and associates unknown; that the lease and proposed transfer of machinery and plant represent concerted action and are inimical to the interests of the Herald Company itself, and oppressive to the rights of the minority shareholders.

In answer to a telegraphic inquiry on the Herald situation made by THE FOURTH ESTATE yesterday, C. Gordon-Smith, publisher of the Montreal Herald replied:

"The Herald is not sold. No sale is contemplated."

NEW YORK TIMES BIDS FOR NEWS PRINT MILL.

John A. Dix appeared on October 26 in the United States Court in Auburn, N. Y., in connection with the bankruptcy case of the Iroquois Pulp and Paper Company Alfred A. Cook, representing the New York Times, appeared and made an offer of $300,000 to the creditors and stockholders for the assets of the concern. As they could reach no agreement the question was submitted to Judge George W. Ray for decision as to the method which must be followed to arrive at an understanding.

After an argument in which former Senator Harvey D. Hinman of Binghamton, representing certain creditors and stockholders, opposed the sale, Judge Ray adjourned the case until November 7 and issued an order restraining the Iroquois Pulp and Paper Company from distributing dividends to the stockholders in the meantime.

The former governor is one of the stockholders of the bankrupt concern.

NEWS OF THE AD AGENCIES.

The Arkenberg Special Agency has moved its Toledo office to Chicago, where it has new quarters on the seventh floor of the Lytton Building. This firm makes a specialty of newspaper classified advertising, dealing with recognized agents throughout the United States and Canada, allowing them commission on business cleared.

With offices in New York and Chicago, the Arkenberg Agency expects to be able to give more efficient service than ever before.

Mr. Arkenberg says his company has some new original plans for promoting classified advertising for the newspapers that will soon be presented to publishers throughout the United States.

"I am heartily in sympathy with the movement of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World in working for clean copy in advertising," he said to THE FOURTH ESTATE. "No skin-game or other objectionable ads are accepted. The publishers have enough troubles without handling ads put out by pickers and fly-by-night fakirs."

W. J. Tanzey, formerly sales manager of the Meininger Studios, Detroit, has become connected with the sales force of the C. S. Von Poettgen Advertising Agency, Detroit.

The Myers Advertising Agency of Rochester, N. Y. (including Myers' List of Country Weekly Newspapers) has been purchased by the Lyndon & Hanford Company of Rochester.

Homer J. Buckley of the Buckley-Dement Advertising Agency in Chicago recently addressed the Peoria Advertising Club on "Practical Application of Mail Methods."

J. P. Roche, formerly of the McJunkin Agency's copy department, in Chicago, is now quartermaster sergeant in Texas. He has written a poem condemning the gaiety and levity of the cabarets in war time, which appeared in "B.L.T.'s" column of the Chicago Tribune and later supplied the basis for a Tribune editorial.

An innovation in Chicago advertising methods has been instituted by the W. D. McJunkin Agency. All copy writers and artists of the agency hold a council each week to consider the best ways of handling all accounts in the hands of the agency.

J. D. Driscoll of the New York office of the William H. Rankin Company, Chicago, was one of the speakers at a banquet given by the Connecticut Association of Insurance Agents at Norwich on October 26. Mr. Driscoll spoke on "Group advertising for insurance men."

W. J. MacInnes, who looked after the interests of the William H. Rankin Company in the Carnation Milk Company, during the National Dairy Show at Columbus, is now in Akron, Ohio, assisting the Goodrich Rubber Company to outline an extensive advertising campaign.

E. Virgil Neal, head of the advertising concern bearing his name, has leased an entire floor of a new building at the south corner of 74th street and Fifth avenue, New York.

A. J. Massie has resigned from the staff of the A. McKim, Ltd., (Winnipeg office) to establish the A. J. Massie, Ltd., general advertising agency. Mr. Massie has offices in the Merchants Bank Building and reports he is placing quite a number of well known Western accounts. Before going to Winnipeg, Mr. Massie was for five years with the Toronto Globe, but the West called him in 1907 and until 1913 he was with the Winnipeg Telegram. In that year he went with the Free Press and acted as advertising manager prior to 1915, when he joined the McKim Winnipeg office. Mr. Massie has applied for recognition by the Canadian Press Association.

The Hamilton Advertising Agency, Hamilton, Ont., has made several changes in the staff.

George F. Hobart has entered into business for himself in Hamilton and E. D. Reed has joined the F. F. Dalley Company of Canada, Ltd., of Hamilton.

J. P. Shaddock has been appointed to succeed Mr. Hobart.

Charles Ward, a member of the copy staff of the Toronto office of A. McKim, Ltd., has enlisted in the Royal Flying Corps.

It is reported that George S. Hobart of Hamilton; K. S. Fenwick of Toronto and George S. McCullough of Montreal will act as free lances handling the service work on their own respective accounts and placing their business through the Consolidated Advertising Agency, formerly the Gagnier Ad Service.

The Bankers Publicity Company, New York, has added F. S. Woodrow to its staff. He has been with the Meisel Ferguson Company of New York.

The Spafford Agency of Boston has enlarged its staff by the appointment of Richard D. Northrup, late of the Greenleaf Agency.

Donald B. Wheeler and Clarence L. Davis have been added to the staff of the E. P. Remington Agency, Buffalo, N. Y. Mr. Wheeler was formerly art director of the Fowler-Simpson Agency, Cleveland, and Mr. Davis was with the House of Hubbell of Cleveland.

R. H. Houston, late of the Western staff of the Cosmopolitan Magazine, is now with the Touzalin Agency, Chicago.

W. H. Denney, until recently with the Foster Debevoise Agency, has been appointed to the staff of Sherman & Bryan, New York.

J. Horace Lytle has become associated with the Ewald-Campbell Agency of Detroit and New York. He was formerly vice-president of the Sloman Agency, Dayton, Ohio.

"SPECIALS" CHANGE NAME.

The publishers' representative firm of Bryant, Griffiths & Fredrichs, Inc., New York, Chicago and Boston, has changed its name to Bryant, Griffiths & Brunson.

George B. Brunson has been manager of the Chicago office for some time past.

The firm of Frost, Green & Kohn, Inc., has succeeded Lorenzen, Green & Kohn, publishers' representatives, with offices in New York, Chicago and Atlanta.

MARTIN IS AD MANAGER.

Harmon B. Martin has been appointed advertising manager of the Duffy-Powers Company, Rochester, filling the vacancy caused by the resignation of William H. Campbell. The latter's place on the board of directors and as secretary of the company has been filled by the election of William P. Healy.

Mr. Campbell has gone to Cleveland to take the management of the William E. Bedell Store.

PUBLIC LEDGER GETS TAFT.

The Philadelphia Public Ledger has obtained the services of William H. Taft as contributing editor.

AD FOLKS' NEWS.

S. A. Weissenburger has been appointed sales and advertising manager of Halle Brothers, the well known Cleveland department store. In taking his new position Mr. Weissenburger retires as secretary and manager of the Better Business Bureau of the Cleveland Advertising Club.

The Canton (Ohio) Ad Club displayed a service flag at the Affiliation meeting in Rochester, N. Y., showing that sixteen of its members are with the colors.

The Portland (Ore.) Advertising Club has aimed a practical blow at the high cost of living by establishing a fish market in Portland. Three tons of fish were sold on the opening day.

The Rochester (N. Y.) Ad Club has resigned from membership in the A.A.C.W.

"Hal" McNaughton, sports editor of the Toledo (Ohio) Times for the last four years, has resigned to become assistant advertising manager of the Champion Spark Plug Company.

Walden & Co., Inc., 137 Fifth avenue, New York, have been elected to membership in the Association of National Advertisers, being represented by M. T. Dannreuther, secretary-treasurer. This firm manufactures "Koh-i-noor Snap Fasteners."

The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, an organization composed of the foremost advertising and publicity men of the biggest motion picture concerns, has passed a resolution calling on all its members, as advertising men, to refuse to patronize or support publications and periodicals that are pro-German or anti-American in their sentiment, and to withhold all advertising from them.

The organization is appointing a committee to investigate newspapers and other publications.

It is estimated that the members of this association, last year, distributed over four million dollars in advertising.

The Young Ad-Men's Club of New York has grown up. It is a strong healthy live organization now and in its proper environment, for its meetings are held in the New York Advertising Club.

The young fellows have started out with a will to prove to the older advertising men, that they are worthy of their new surroundings.

The meeting on October 26 was addressed by Sam Cherr, merchandizing manager of Frank Seaman, Inc.

Mr. Cherr is noted for his ability to puncture the "clever ideas" baloon with the pin of "fact" and he did just that to some of the pet theories of the "juniors." After the meeting, many of the young men found that they had new ideas on consumer demand, particularly.

The meeting was full of snap from the word go, and there was hardly a man in the well filled room who did not show his interest by asking at least one question of Mr. Cherr. The speaker, though finished with his talk in about one hour, remained two hours longer, answering questions.

This was one of the most interesting and enlightening talks the club has enjoyed, and there are many more like it "on tap."

The next talk in a well constructed program will be by Bruce Bliven on "How the retailer affects an advertising campaign." Mr. Bliven is well qualified to talk on this subject as he knows both the theoretical and the practical side. Mr. Bliven was chairman of the journalism course in the University of California and was for three years advertising manager of one of the largest department stores in the Southwest.

The meeting will be held at 7.45 on next Friday night in the New York Advertising Club. All advertising men and students are welcome.

The tenth year of the advertising class of the Detroit Y. M. C. A. was started on October 15 with an address by William S. Power, president of Power, Alexander & Jenkins Company, on "Advertising as a profession."

James E. Shields of Chicago is now in the advertising department of Elms & Sellen, New York, makers of drapery fabrics.

The New York Advertising Club has extended an invitation to advertising men from other cities who are stationed in training camps in or near New York to come to the club as often as convenient.

Police Commissioner Arthur Woods addressed the club at luncheon, Thursday on "Advertising and the police."

The club made the first contribution to Harry Lauder's "million pound fund" for maimed soldiers after Mr. Lauder's talk last week. Three hundred and sixteen dollars were collected.

Chester A. Brown, advertising manager of the L. S. Plaut & Co., has been appointed to succeed Frank Wilkinson as secretary of the Newark (N. J.) Ad Club.

J. Elwood Wingate, a former advertising writer of 141 East 26th street, New York, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $4,607 and assets of $1,389 in a judgment.

A novel feature of last week's meeting of the Cincinnati Ad Club was a dedication service and raising of the Ad Club service flag and national colors.

New officers of the Advertising Club of St. Louis are: President, John Ring, Jr. first vice-president, Max Koenigsberg; second vice-president, Arthur Siegel; third vice-president, Edward Mead; secretary, Charles R. Ketchum; treasurer, F. H. Staley.

The fourth annual meeting of the Association of Canadian Advertisers will be held in the Hotel Connaught, Hamilton, Ont., on November 8 and 9. A feature of the programme will be a dinner on the night of the 8th, which will be a get-together of national advertisers, advertising agents and publishers, including members of TEACHING NEW ENGLANDERS VALUE OF ADVERTISING.

The Pilgrim Publicity Association of Boston is vitally interested in the prosperity of New England, and through its trade extension committee has of late been studying the problem presented by the class of business men who are as yet unconvinced of the value and power of advertising. The ad men have come to the conclusion that it would be better for New England as a whole if these men could be made to realize how big a part advertising has played in the notable business successes of recent years—if they could be made to understand that the good will established through proper publicity may easily be worth a hundred times its cost, whether the business be local, sectional or national.

As a result a plan has been developed which, the Pilgrims believe, will be of value to newspapers and of value to the merchants and manufacturers who read newspapers.

A series of advertising articles and stories will be prepared, each one of which will have a direct application for the average business man, and most of which will be based on actual facts gleaned from the experience of successful advertisers. These stories and articles will be sent to the publishers ten at a time, and there will be fifty-two in the series, thus supplying one for each week in the year.

ANOTHER WIN FOR A.A.C.W. VIGILANCE COMMITTEE

The Grant Locating Company and C. Ferguson Smith, its sole promoter, have come under the ban of the Post Office Department in the form of a fraud order just issued against the concern, which has had its headquarters at Portland, Ore.

This substantiates the conclusion of the A. A. C. W. national vigilance committee, which in June set out its findings of fact based on an investigation made at that time.

Smith advertised that the United States Government was opening certain Oregon lands for entry and agreed to sell maps of the same to prospective locators for $1 each. He represented that immediate action was necessary in order to secure the pick of the area open to entry.

As a matter of fact the lands were not open to home-seekers and had not even been classified, a necessary preliminary step. In addition to that the maps were practically worthless for the selection of desirable tracts of land in that they did not show the comparative advantages of one section over another. General descriptions on the back of the map had been taken bodily from an Oregon almanac.

WOMEN'S PAPER OUTGROWS ITS HOME.

The next issue of the Women's Press of Chicago will come from the new home, 1714 Stevens Building. Because of the unexpected response of Chicago and Illinois women to the big idea of a woman's newspaper it became necessary to move into larger quarters at once.

INTRODUCING AD FOLKS.

Wesley T. Engelhorn, now secretary of the Cleveland Advertising Club, was formerly assistant secretary of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce convention board.

Besides advertising, Mr. Engelhorn's hobby is athletics. He is a graduate

PUBLISHER HANGS SELF.

The body of Frank E. Eismere, publisher of the Danvers (Mass.) Mirror and known as Frank E. Moynahan until his name was legally changed a year ago, was found in his office on October 29 where he had killed himself by hanging. Friends attributed his act to business worries.

ANDERSON RE-ELECTED HEAD OF COLUMBUS AD CLUB.

At the annual election of officers of the Advertising Club of Columbus (Ohio) Chamber of Commerce the club departed from the one-term custom that had prevailed during the seven years of its existence and re-elected its president, Charles S. Anderson, advertising manager for the Ohio National Bank and a member of the Financial Advertisers Association of the A.A.C.W.

This compliment to Mr. Anderson probably was the club's expression of its appreciation of the fact that the first year of his administration was conceded to have been the busiest, most interesting and most successful in its history.

One of Mr. Anderson's ideas which was carried to complete fruition, and which added considerably to the club's prestige, was the organization of the Christopher Columbus Bugle Corps, composed of twenty-four young Americans of Italian parentage—Italians, because the great discoverer for whom Ohio's capital city was named was of that race.

Garbed in costumes modeled after those of court heralds at the time of King Ferdinand, these young men were a feature of the parade at the St. Louis convention of the Associated Clubs last June, and helped to spread the fame of their home town.

There were three candidates for the presidency at the recent election.

CHARLES S. ANDERSON.

and by the rules of the club the candidate receiving the second highest number of votes automatically became first vice-president. This fell to L. A. Feibel of Feibel Brothers' department store. The second vice-presidency, by the same rule, went to Arthur M. Crumrine of the A. M. Crumrine Advertising Agency.

In recognition of the strength of these two candidates, between whose totals there was the difference of but one vote, and desiring that the club should have full advantage of their abilities, the re-elected president designated Mr. Feibel to have charge of the department of growth, which will have to do with the membership and allied features of the club's organization, while to Mr. Crumrine was assigned the department of life, which includes the program committee. Planning always two months ahead, this committee is able to present really worth-while speakers and topics for the regular weekly luncheon meetings.

The board of trustees, nine in number, constitutes the vigilance committee of the club, and each individual case that comes up is assigned to such members as seem best fitted, by business or other connections, to handle it. This plan has worked very well, and a great deal of good has been accomplished, without resorting to prosecution except in three cases.

To insure representation at the San Francisco convention in July, the club has instituted a "pool" into which members in blocks of ten pay $17 each. For each block of ten, one delegate will be chosen by lot, and the successful one will be given the $170, contributed by his block, for the trip.

Members of the club were very active in the publicity campaign for the Red Cross $100,000,000 drive, and for the two Liberty Loans. Nearly 100 full-page displays were sold through the efforts of members for these three campaigns, in addition to other kinds of display.

MAGAZINE NOTES

Recreation, published in New York, will be consolidated with the Outer's Book, published by the Outer's Book Company of Chicago, starting with the December issue.

Charles F. Tonjes, formerly of the American Tobacco Company, as Western representative, is now connected with the advertising department of Nugent's, the New York garment weekly.

Mason W. Wadsworth is now Eastern advertising manager of the Metropolitan Magazine, with headquarters in New York.

Mrs. Hilda Wooster has been appointed editorial assistant and head of the inquiry department of McCall's magazine, New York.

Gilbert R. Lowe has been appointed manager of the educational department of the Cosmopolitan Magazine.

American Khakiland is the name of a new magazine, published from the Oriental Building, Seattle, Wash., containing stories and other reading matter, particularly on soldier life.

W. W. Woodbridge is managing editor and vice-president; John T. Smith is secretary; A. D. Stone is advertising manager; and E. B. Johns is associate editor, with office in the Hibbs Building, Washington, D. C.

Norman E. Beck, who was president and business manager of the magazine, is no longer connected with the company.

A CLUB DINNER IN KANSAS CITY.

The annual banquet of the Topeka (Kan.) Press Club will be held November 9.

Among the invited speakers are Dr. Henry I. Waters, newly appointed editor of the Kansas City Weekly Star; Governor Arthur Capper, E. W. Hoch, former governor; M. M. Beck, editor Holton Recorder; Fred Trieg of the Kansas City Star; Frank P. McLennan of the Topeka Journal; Ralph Tennal, editor of the Sabetha Herald; and Charles Sessions, private secretary to Governor Capper.

DO YOU KNOW JASIN?

Chicago newspapers have been asked to assist in locating "Jack" Jasin, formerly reporter and advertising man on newspapers in Chicago, Lincoln, Nebraska, Fort Smith, Arkansas and Springfield, Ill. Jasin is twenty-six years old, five feet, seven inches tall and weighed when last seen, a year ago, 135 lbs.

His mother, Mrs. Israel Jasin of Schenectady, N. Y., is anxious to get in touch with her son.

SOME NEW BOOKS.

"OLD ROADS FROM THE HEART OF NEW YORK," by Sarah Comstock; G. P. Putnam's Sons, publishers.

This is a book telling of "Journeys of today by ways of yesterday" within thirty miles around the Battery. The author has arranged the routes so that they are easy to find. The book recalls some of the most interesting history of the old city of New York.

"AMMUNITION FOR FINAL DRIVE ON BOOZE," by Louis Albert Banks, D.D.; Funk & Wagnalls Company, publisher.

This volume is designed to aid the speaker against liquor by giving him the arguments and language of today, which he needs to equip him effectively "for the last drive on the enemy." There is a topical index of authors quoted from and authorities referred to, in alphabetical order.

"THE RESTORATION OF TRADE UNION CONDITIONS," by Sidney Webb; B. W. Huebsch, publisher.

One of the most amazing results of war conditions has been the tremendous productive capacity increase throughout the shops and factories of England. The influences tending to restrict, and in some cases actually limiting, the output had been so long continued that the facts of their existence were often obscured.

Labor conditions, particularly trade union conditions, in England are not understood in this newer and younger country, and it is surprise that follows Mr. Webb's excellent exposition of the labor situation and his logical conclusion as to the possibility of Great Britain's redemption of her pledge to labor—her promise to restore all of the trade union conditions as soon as the war is over.

"FINANCIAL STATEMENTS MADE PLAIN," by Earl A. Saliers, Ph.D.; Ticker Publishing Company, publisher.

Written by the assistant professor of accounting in the Sheffield Scientific School and published as separate chapters in the Magazine of Wall Street, this book contains conservative information calculated to constitute a solid foundation for study. It is particularly constituted for the investor or the executive possessing no technical accounting training.

"THE WANDERERS," by Mary Johnston; the Houghton Mifflin Company, publisher.

A story of the unfolding love relation between man and woman from prehistoric times to the present moment. It is a book designed to provoke searching reflections and to throw a light upon some of the perplexing problems that are harassing the minds of today's men and women.

THE BOOK PAPER MEN TO BE HEARD NOVEMBER 8.

The Federal Trade Commission will have a conference in Washington on November 8 with attorneys of the book paper manufacturers, when it is hoped that the whole book paper matter will be finally settled.

It is understood that the book paper manufacturers may be invited to attend the conference with officials of the commission in connection with the revision of the monthly book paper report. It is probable that this conference will be held about the middle of November.

THE OLDEST WRITTEN WORD.

"How many, if asked what is the oldest written word found in an extant document and still in use—not mark you, the oldest root—could answer correctly?"

This question is asked by the Interstate Medical Journal, which itself supplies the following answer:

And yet the word is one appearing frequently in our advertising columns, and it is the name of a therapeutic agent and toilet article in common use.

In the office copies of the letters and instructions given to the envoys of the heretic king of Egypt, Akhenaton (Amenophis IV.) in the fourteenth century B. C., which office copies were discovered at Tel-el-Amarna, there occurs a passage which was read as follows: "We hope that the sale will not interfere with you."

It was taken for granted that "sale" was the name of some warlike tribe in the hills of North Syria; but it was remarkable that a tribe, powerful enough to brave the wrath of such great monarch as those between whom this correspondence was passing, should not be mentioned in any other of the voluminous records of those times.

Pondering this, a philologist remembered that s, th, and t were interchangeable, especially in Semitic languages.

For example, the name that we, imitating the northern Semitic races and the Turks, call Osman, is spelled and in southern Arabia is pronounced Othman, while the Empire of Osman is known to Europeans as the Ottoman Empire. Now, there exists in the Semitic languages a word for ice and snow which, in various places, takes the sound of thalg, salg, and talc.

The mystery was thus cleared up. The envoys had to pass the mountains of northern Syria in winter, and the august master expressed a hope that the ice or snow would not interfere with their passage. The Egyptians, having no acquaintance with ice or snow, would naturally borrow the name from their northern neighbors.

POST OFFICE NAMED FOR BROOKLYN TIMES.

Recognition of its standing in the community has come in many forms to the Brooklyn (N. Y.) Daily Times, but probably the two biggest compliments paid to it have the city's naming its location in Brooklyn as Times Plaza and to have the Government name the local post office as Times Plaza Station.

The Times Plaza post mark is now going on mail to all parts of the world. The Times richly deserves the honor of having the busiest post office station in Brooklyn named after it for there have been no greater influences in the upbuilding of Brooklyn than the Times.

John N. Harman, its present editor and manager, is keeping up the Times' admirable record of the past in standing for the best in the community.

END OF BUTTERFIELD REIGN.

Hugh H. Butterfield has retired from the management of the North Troy (Vt.) Palladium, and has leased the plant to Arthur L. Keeler, formerly of Norwood, Mass. For more than forty years the Palladium has been issued by the Butterfield family. Mr. Butterfield moves to Newport to engage in the insurance business.

JOURNALISM IN THE COLLEGES.

Free instruction classes in printing are being held at Public School 158, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Campus, a weekly newspaper of the students of the University of Rochester, N. Y., made its first appearance of the autumn term in smaller form because of the increased cost of paper and publication.

A free course in advertising is being given at the Murray Hill Evening Trade School, New York City.

The course will be a practical one designed particularly for the printer who is not satisfied with the daily grind of typesetting; the young man working in a store or connected with a concern doing advertising, and for those employed in lines closely allied to advertising.

The St. Paul (Minn.) Board of Education is preparing to launch a night course in journalism. St. Paul newspaper men will act as instructors.

A course in advertising at the Western Reserve University, Cleveland, O., opened on September 28. It consists of sixty sessions, two a week, under the direction of A. M. Ingraham, bank advertising expert, and is planned for business men and women as well as students.

President A. Ross Hill has announced that the next annual Journalism Week at the University of Missouri, Columbia, Mo., will be held May 6-10, 1918.

Fred Tarman, telegraph editor of the Oklahoma City Times, will succeed Chester Westfall as instructor in journalism in the University of Oklahoma.

Frank B. Thayer, who was last year a member of the journalism teaching staff at the University of Kansas, will succeed Professor Reynolds as head of the journalism department at the Iowa State University. Mr. Thayer was previously on the staffs of the Cleveland Press, the Columbus (Ohio) State Journal and the Erie (Pa.) Dispatch.

The College of the City of New York has inaugurated new courses in typography, proofreading and copy editing on Friday and Saturday evenings from 7.30 to 9.18 o'clock.

Conducted by Arnold Levitas, the courses are open to men and women engaged in the various branches of editorial work, advertising, printing, publishing and other allied crafts and professions.

Students in Cleveland's evening schools, and particularly foreigners learning English, are using Cleveland newspapers as texts.

"We want to link up the night school English courses with things that are happening in our own city and throughout the nation and world," said School Superintendent Spaulding.

The University Daily Kansan, written and managed by the students in the department of journalism of the University of Kansas, Lawrence, Kan., has brought out what it claims is the first house organ ever issued by a university or college paper.

The publication is called the Ad-Minister and its duty is "to preach the gospel of that business creative power known as advertising and incidentally to show the merchants of Lawrence what a good medium the University Daily Kansan is." It is edited by Fred Rigby, business manager of the University Daily Kansan.

The National Educational Committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs has issued a booklet, "Instruction in Advertising in the United States," compiled by the association of teachers of advertising, which indicates the remarkable progress which has been made in the teaching of advertising, particularly in the colleges and universities, during the last few years.

The student body of the University of South Carolina, Columbia, S. C., recently elected M. A. Wright to edit the Garnet and Black, the college annual, for 1917-18. The new editor-in-

Other vacancies filled were: Assistant editor-in-chief, J. Buchanan; business manager, J. C. Nearse; assistant business manager, A. M. Collier; senior editor, J. H. Martin; literary editor, E. P. Hodges; club manager, J. M. Hagood; law editor, P. N. Benton.

H. Sherman has been elected editor of the Daily, a paper published by the students of the University of Washington, Seattle, Wash.

As a result of war conditions, the editorship of two student publications at the University of Arkansas has passed into the hands of women. Herbert Faist, editor-in-chief of the University Weekly, has been drafted and Miss Lela Sailor of Rigelow has been named acting editor.

Miss Sailor's father is owner of the Bigelow Citizen's Press and she expects to edit the paper after completing her college work. Miss Ruth I. Howell of Foreman is editor-in-chief of the Arkansan, a monthly publication.

Both publications are under the supervision of Norman J. Radder, instructor in journalism.

W. A. Dill, telegraph editor of the Portland (Ore.) Oregonian, has been appointed instructor in the department of journalism of the University of Kansas, Lawrence, Kan., succeeding Frank Thayer, who resigned recently.

That training in the department of industrial journalism can be more readily used by the student in after life than instruction received in any other college department is the view expressed by Professor E. L. Holton of the Kansas State Agricultural College at Manhattan in an address to the department of journalism last week.

NOW A TRACTION MAGNATE.

F. W. Henkel, who recently retired from the special representative firm of Alcorn & Henkel, New York and Chicago, has become secretary-treasurer in charge of the new Frankfort & Shelbyville Traction Company, which purposes to operate between the two mentioned Kentucky cities.

Mr. Henkel is not a stranger to Louisville. Twelve years ago he was connected with the circulation department of the Louisville Post.

NEW YORK PRESSMEN ON A SHORT STRIKE.

Stating that it was solely to prevent a lack of municipal ballots on election day the forty press feeders employed by the Martin B. Brown Printing and Binding Company, New York, who on Monday struck with the remaining members of Franklin Union No. 23 for a flat wage increase of $4 a week, returned to work Tuesday pending settlement of the strike.

Had work on the ballots been delayed longer they could not have been completed on time. It was for this reason that the men resumed their jobs.

During Tuesday, however, the differences between the feeders and their employers practically were settled. Before the afternoon wore away all but 200 of the Franklin Union men out of a membership of 2,700 had returned to work, either accepting the $2 raise offered by the Association of Employing Printers plus arbitration for the other $2, or, as in some cases, being granted outright the desired $4 increase.

Part of the program was devoted to the members in France and others who have entered various branches of Uncle Sam's service. The war list of the club approximates 25 per cent of its membership.

The Denver Post is this year away ahead of its business record of 1917.

In circulation the Post's average for the six months prior to October 1, 1917 was 99,702, according to the sworn Post Office statement, which is a gain of 14,583 over the same pe-

In advertising, from January 1 to September 30, 1917, the Post carried 7,457,408 agate lines, which was more by 940,616 lines than it published in the same period last year.

The Post in the same period printed national advertising amounting to 1,502,368 lines, which was more by 191,040 lines than last year.

All of which makes the Post man-

THE POST OFFICE SURPLUS.

From the New York Times.

It is good news that the Post Office has turned into the Treasury $9,000,000, being surplus of receipts over cost of operation.

It would be better news if the Post Office had resolved to calculate its surplus hereafter in the manner imposed by law upon other public utilities.

The manner of calculating the surplus of the Post Office is particularly important at a time when the argument for Government ownership and operation of the railways is strengthened by considerations drawn from their operation with first regard for public interest under the conditions of the war.

When peace returns, considerations of the largest profit compatible with good conduct in the public interest will resume first place. That will not be because the railways will wish it, but because the railways will not then be able to command the co-operation which alone makes possible their present extraordinary efficiency.

The Post Office is assisted in the same manner and will not be so assisted any more than the railways when conditions become normal.

For example, those who pay postage will not submit to the increase of rates which was imposed under something resembling false pretenses.

If the surplus had been in sight during the war tax debate it would not have been possible to increase second class postal rates upon a statement of costs which will not bear examination.

It is not possible for the Post Office to know either its costs or profits, because its accounts are not kept for that purpose. They are not even assembled into a single account, but are kept with various departments charged with the cost of the service upon which the Post Office claims a profit without taking the costs into the statement.

What would become of the Post Office profits if it made allowance for overhead costs, or taxes, or depreciation, or interest upon capital employed, in the manner required of railways, for instance?

How can the Post Office make any statement regarding costs when its receipts go into a single purse, the services and their receipts not being segregated?

The Post Office's receipts, something different from profits, are what the Post Office chooses to make them.

For example, in calculating mail pay averages the Post Office of its own motion substituted a seven-day week for the six-day, or business-day, week.

The result was that the railways, despite their protest, lost many millions of mail pay through the reduction of the average.

At the present time one of the leading causes of the railways' embarrassment is that they are receiving less pay for more work on account of both the mail and parcel services.

That is one source of the railways' deficiency as well as of the Post Office's surplus. The people are not extreme to mark what the Post Office does amiss. It is their efficient servant, and the people are proud and fond of it. But they do not like him being in connection with it.

Before Government operation can rest upon the Post Office's surplus the Post Office must make some advance toward keeping its accounts in a commercial rather than political manner.

When the Post Office has its accounts audited by chartered accountants who will certify to a surplus of any sort on the principles which they apply in other cases there will be a better basis for such statements as that put out on October 27.

The Times comment was occasioned by the announcement sent out from Washington on October 27 that:

The largest surplus from postal revenues in the history of the government, $9,000,000, was paid into the Treasury Department by the Post Office Department.

The second largest surplus was $9,000,000 paid in last year.

NEW MANAGING EDITOR IN CINCINNATI.

T. M. Miller has become managing editor of the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune. Previously he was for eight years Sunday editor of the Cincinnati Enquirer.

Mr. Miller began his newspaper career less than twelve years ago after graduating from Washington and Lee University. His early training was with the Memphis Commercial Appeal and the Memphis News-Semitar.

Harold Coates has become telegraph editor of the Cincinnati Tribune in the place of Alex. Schaap, who has gone into the advertising field.

Joseph Sullivan has been made city editor. He has had wide experience and has been with Cincinnati papers for twenty years.

The sports desk remains in charge of Robert Newhall, a Princeton man, who has held the desk for the past six years.

A "suggestion box" is now occupying a prominent place on the desk of the city editor and reporters are urged to write their ideas for the betterment of the paper and to deposit them in the box.

organization they can handle this much more economically than publishers, whose business experience and other business requirements are along entirely different lines. The freight as well as the cost of handling such freight should, of course, be figured as part of the cost of manufacture in any judgment of an equitable price.

"Another great disadvantage of this method of selling paper under the new standard contract is that the mill retains the routing of such traffic, while the publisher must be responsible for the traffic. This may be manipulated to serve other ends of the manufacturer, while the publisher's interests would suffer.

"2. The new standard contracts provide for a specified amount of tonnage to be taken during the year in equal monthly installments. The previous contracts, however, provided for an estimated tonnage for the entire requirements of the publisher to be taken during the year as ordered by him. While this is a disadvantage to the publisher, at the same time the new form of the standard contract is much wouder economically than the other. In the interests of minimum costs of production, in view of the fact that a paper mill makes an equal tonnage every day, publishers should take a specified amount of paper during the year and should take the same in equal monthly installments. Variation in consumption in the different periods of the year should be taken care of by the publisher, and not by the manufacturer. In addition to this it will be noted that the publisher's maximum requirements are coincident with similar enlargement of demands generally, and the taking of paper by the publisher on equal monthly installments helps to stabilize car shortage and transportation generally, and in general produces a much better condition, and tends toward efficiency and economy.

"The standard contract provides that paper bought by purchaser shall be exclusively used in the publication named in the contract. This should be eliminated. The particular party who signs the contract should purchase a specified amount of paper for delivery, at a specified place, and not be under any obligation to define the uses to which he puts his paper. It is his property, and he should be permitted full control of it.
This point has recently been the cause of considerable friction and disagreement.

"3. Payment: The new contract provides for payment on the 15th of the month for all paper shipped the previous month. When paper is delivered this price should be the 15th of the month for all paper delivered the previous month, or when paper is sold f. o. b. mill, payment should not be required before the 30th of the month on account of the fact that 15 days is not sufficient time for most publishers to receive paper shipped the last day of the previous month.
Therefore, since January 1 many publishers have been obliged under their contract to pay for paper before they could see the same and check it. Further, the failure to make payment promptly should not be a cause for cancellation of a contract by the manufacturers, on account of the shortness of the terms of payment. It should be provided that failure to make payment, say thirty days after it is due, would be just cause for cancellation of contract. It might be provided, however, that failure to make payment promptly in accordance with the terms of the contract would permit the seller to delay shipment of next month's paper until satisfactory settlement has been made.

"Further, the purchaser's right, after due notice, to cancel the contract, provided shipment and quality are not in accordance with its terms, should be specifically admitted. Any right to cancel a contract, due to failure of either party to fulfill its terms, should be equitable.

"4. Cores: The new standard contract provides that cores shall be charged at a fixed price which is very much in excess of their actual cost, and that they shall be credited upon return to the mill, freight prepaid, at the same figure. This would be fair enough, provided the price charged for the cores was their actual cost. Either this figure should be changed, or the freight paid by the mill, as has been done heretofore.

"5. Specifications: No specifications of the quality of paper are provided in the standard contract. The sample attached to such contracts, or which may be attached, would not be adequate to establish accurately the quality in case of dispute. The definition of anything regarding specifications is too vague in the standard contract. For example, the weight is specified that it shall be substantially 24x36 32-500, with leeway of 5 per cent. There should be a minimum as well as a maximum provided, say 24x 36 31 32 500, which would be fair.

"The hardship of this clause, as it is now in operation in this standard contract, is that many mills are running very much overweight, with the result that the publishers get smaller output out of each ton.

"Besides, there is no specification as to strength, finish, sizing, color, moisture, etc. all of which items can by manipulation in the manufacture affect the price very seriously.

"Experience has shown that the proportion of sulphate was seriously reduced in 1916, and under the new contract there is no relief for this hardship. The result is that the strength of paper is so seriously depreciated that publishers' costs of printing have shown considerable increase, due to breaks on the press.

"The point here is that the paper bought should be specifically defined, which a sample cannot do."

Advice by the A.N.P.A. paper committee on other phases of the news print situation follows:

BERMINGHAM-SEAMAN CONTRACT.

"It is reported that Birmingham &
Seaman are notifying their customers who signed their five-year contract at 3.10, that they will collect from them an advance of $15 a ton for all paper shipped in 1917.

"This contract contains a clause whereby a manufacturer is allowed, without any consultation whatever with the customer, to charge him whatever he (the manufacturer) may decide as to either increased or decreased cost of production. In this case, they claim an increase of $15 per ton over what the cost was the first of the year, and are proposing to collect this from their customers.

"The paper committee suggests that the various customers of this company, through the committee, arrange to ask for an audit to check up this advance.

"Attention was specially called to this contract at the time same was drawn and all members urged not to sign it. The Federal Trade Commission, at the time the contract was drawn, and since, have had this particular contract under very careful consideration and it may be that they will be in a position now, or later, to be of some material assistance in relieving this very oppressive situation.

BROMPTON PULP & PAPER COMPANY.

"The Brompton Pulp & Paper Company has just announced enormous dividends, preferred stock on the basis of seven per cent on $2,000,000, and common stock on the basis of four per cent on $7,000,000, and has now announced an additional bonus of one per cent on all common stock.
It will be recalled that this company, in addition to his stock, has $2,000,000

the war at $2,000,000.

"The Royal Securities Corporation in Montreal, in co-operation with some of the officials of the company last year, increased this capitalization to the enormous and fictitious values above, and on those enormous issues they are paying the very handsome dividends just announced.

"This shows how absurd and foolish were the claims of the Brompton
Pulp & Paper Company, made before Commissioner Pringle at the recent investigation in Ottawa, and if Commissioner Pringle is not willing to bring out the facts as to their costs, this very easily proves that the company's figures were not correct.

"This actually means a paid out dividend on the actual investment in that property at the present time of more than thirty-five per cent. In addition to this, the company has put in its surplus account and other requirements a large part of their earnings, so that it may be said that the earnings of this company are easily over fifty per cent on the actual cost.

"The present owners bought this property from the old Royal Mills at a very low figure, gradually improved the property out of earnings, so that in all they have probably spent a little over $1,500,000 real money in acquiring the property, improving it and adding to it, and most of this money spent was made by the company itself.
It is now capitalized at the enormous
some dividends thereon.

save money over possible advanced prices for 1918. There have been built up very enormous supplies of paper in the hands of the publishers, chiefly due to the lesser consumption of the publishers and their contract quantities, which were substantially more than their requirements.

"The paper committee now urges all publishers to estimate very closely their requirements for 1918 and deduct from those requirements all paper in storage at the end of this year, and if contracts are made, make them for such quantities as will carry them through the year by using up this storage.

"Storage costs are very high in every part of the United States and insurance and other charges pile up very rapidly. It is seldom considered good business to carry enormous supplies of high priced materials on hand in view of a fair prospect of prices being at least not higher at the end of twelve months than they are today.

"It is further urged that publishers deduct their entire storage which they will have at the end of this year from their contract quantities for the coming year."

OBITUARY NOTES.

JOHN B. TAYLOR, for nearly twenty-five years connected with Vermont daily newspapers, died in Denver, Colo., of tuberculosis on October 24. Mr. Taylor was born in St. Albans, Vt., December 25, 1871, and after graduating from the University of Michigan returned to St. Albans and held position on the editorial staff of the St. Albans Messenger until 1901. He then went to Burlington and was on the staff of the Free Press until 1914, the last four years as night editor. Banking then claimed him for a year, but in April, 1915, he returned to the Free Press and remained with that paper another year when a lung trouble developed. After a year's stay at Saranac Lake, N. Y., he felt able to resume active work and became a director in the reorganized corporation publishing the Burlington Daily News, and was chosen treasurer and business manager last April. He is survived by his mother and his wife, the latter a daughter of the late Colonel George T. Childs, for many years editor of the St. Albans Messenger.

FRANK CRANE, one of the first art editors of a daily newspaper in this country, died on October 26 at New Rochelle, N. Y., in his sixty-first year. After graduation from the New York Academy of Design, Mr. Crane became a cartoonist on the New York World and later art editor of the World, in the days before photography played a part in the make-up of a newspaper. He then became art editor of the Philadelphia Press, having as members of his staff Everett Shinn, John Sloan, William J. Glackens, James Preston, F. R. Grugen, and others, since well known illustrators.

Returning to New York, he made cartoons for the New York Tribune, became Sunday art editor of the New York Herald, and was for a time connected with the art departments of the New York Times and the Boston Herald. He created the comic series "Willie Westinghouse Smith," "Uncle Dick's Contraptions," and "Muggsy," and was the author of stories for boys.

PAPER CONTROLLER FOR CANADA.

HAS FULL POWER OVER DISTRIBUTION AND PRICES AND TO CO-OPERATE WITH U.S. FEDERAL TRADE BOARD.

The control of the Canadian news print and other grades of paper indirectly passed to the Government for the duration of the war when Robert Abercrombie Pringle, K. C., former news print commissioner was appointed Canada's first paper controller on November 5.

The paper controller was appointed by Order-in-Council. His powers authorize him to set the price of news print from time to time. He will not interfere with the twenty-day stay of the 2.50 per pound rate, which expires November 20.

It is generally taken at Ottawa that three cents per pound will be the price fixed by Mr. Pringle for Canadian sales.

As eighty-nine per cent of the total output of the Canadian mills is exported largely to United States publishers, there is some hesitation over the question of what would be a fair and just price to the Canadian manufacturers as a continental price.

The control of pulp, sulphite and sulphate, is also governed by the paper controller. A price for news print for Canadian publishers will be set by controller before November 20.

The price Mr. Pringle decides on will more or less directly or indirectly affect every newspaper publisher in America.

Co-operation between the Canadian Paper Controller and the Federal Trade Commission is provided for and sanctioned.

During the early part of this week Canadian publishers complained to the controllers that some Canadian mills were not willing to continue supplying them at 2.50 cents per pound. Some paper mills objected strongly to the paper controller against being compelled to supply the publishers at 2.50 cents per pound. At the close of the Canadian news-print probe the averaging of thirteen mills by Mr. Pringle showed the cost of production to be $57.33, without allowance for contingencies.

THE ORDER.

The Order-in-Council is as follows:

(P. C. 3122—Certified copy of a report of the Committee of the Privy Council, approved by his Excellency the Governor-General on the 3rd of November, 1917.)

"The Committee of the Privy Council have had before them a report dated 2nd of November, 1917, submitting the following information and recommendations respecting the paper situation in Canada:

"About the beginning of the present year, conditions affecting news print paper became very acute and newspaper publishers experienced great difficulty in obtaining adequate supply.

"On the 16th of April, 1917, in order to insure to publishers of Canadian newspapers an adequate supply at reasonable prices, Robert A. Pringle, K. C., of the city of Ottawa was appointed Commissioner with all powers given under the Inquiries Act, C.H.104, Revised Statutes of Canada, and amending Act 2, Geo. V., Chapter 28, to conduct an inquiry into and concerning the manufacture, sale, price and supply of news print paper within the Dominion of Canada.

"He was also appointed an officer under provisions of Section 6 of the War Measures Act, for the due enforcement of all orders and regulations made by the Minister of Customs under Order in Council P.C., 1059 of the 16th day of April, 1917.

"Orders were made from time to time by the Honorable the Minister of Customs under authority of Orders in Council, the provisions of which have not as yet been completely fulfilled.

"Robert A. Pringle, K. C., was also appointed a Commissioner with full powers under the Inquiries Act to investigate into the cost of the production of book and half-tone papers.

"Both investigations are still in progress. Acting under different orders made by the Honorable the Minister of Customs, the commissioner has exercised control over the supply of news print paper in the Dominion of Canada, and up to the present time domestic needs have been adequately safeguarded.

"The last order by the Minister of Customs was dated the 1st of October, 1917, and under that Order he fixed the price and quantity of news print in sheets and rolls, furnished or to be furnished to the publishers in Canada by the manufacturers up to the 1st of November 1917. He did also order as follows:

"AND WHEREAS under the existing conditions the supply of news print paper to Canadian publishers is not proportionately distributed between them and by reason of the fact that the prices fixed are lower than the manufacturers are now receiving from export business, I do order that each manufacturer should bear his due proportion of the cost so entailed in complying with the above and if arrangements are not made between manufacturers for the pooling of such cost and for adjustment of their output supplied to Canadian publishers, then an accounting be made and the manufacturer or manufacturers who have supplied a greater percentage of Canadian tonnage than properly attributable to them shall be paid by the other manufacturers sufficient to place them in the same position as the manufacturer or manufacturers who have not supplied their proper percentage of paper to the Canadian publishers.

"As both investigations are still proceeding, and the Commissioner considers it is imperative to continue the exercise of public control over supply and prices as the only effective means of assuring to the newspapers of Canada their requirements, the Minister recommends that Robert A. Pringle, K. C., be appointed a Controller, continuing to have all the powers given under the Commission issued to him on the 16th of April, 1917, and that he also be given full power to carry out all the terms and conditions of the different orders made from time to time by the Honorable the Minister of Customs; that he be authorized and empowered to fix the quantity and price of news print paper and other classes of paper to be furnished to the publishers in Canada by the manufacturers during the continuance of the war, unless otherwise ordered; and also to fix the price of pulp, including sulphite and sulphate. The prices aforesaid, however, to be first approved by the Governor in Council.

"The Minister further recommends that as Controller, Mr. Pringle be further authorized and empowered to make such order or orders as he may deem necessary or advisable for the distribution or delivery of paper by the manufacturers to the publishers and for the distribution and delivery of pulp (including sulphite and sulphate) to manufacturers of news print and other paper; that all orders and regulations made by the Controller under this authority shall have the force of law and shall be enforced by such officer or officers as the Controller may appoint; that any person who contravenes or fails to observe any regulation or order made under this authority shall be liable to punishment as provided by the War Measures Act; and

WHY GO SLOW ON PAPER CONTRACTS FOR 1918.

A.N.P.A. PAPER COMMITTEESAYS MARKET IS SOFT ON OTHER GRADES AND MILLS MUST MAKE NEWS PRINT.

The American Newspaper Publishers Association's paper committee continues to ask the co-operation of all publishers in the way of "going slow" on next year's contracts, unless terms and conditions are satisfactory.

In addition to its reasons, announced in THE FOURTH ESTATE last week, the paper committee now says:

"It might be observed that this is a safe course for publishers to pursue for the further reasons that paper manufacturers cannot now turn their machines off news print as they have threatened to do.

"The markets for other grades of paper are decidedly soft, and many of these mills are running only sixty per cent capacity.

"It is true many claim they are deliberately reducing production to maintain prices firm in a soft market, but in spite of this prices have softened substantially and this grade of paper is difficult to sell.

"The International Paper Company, during the summer months, produced 200 to 300 tons a day more news print than its now normal production, which is about 1,300 tons a day. It has retained for a year past Charles F. Duncan, formerly with the Marathon Paper Mills, and the Minnesota & Ontario Paper Company, associated with Dan J. Albertson, engineer of Kalamazoo, Mich., for the particular business of examining all its mills and turning as many machines as possible off news print and on specialties and other grades.

"In spite of this systematic and scientific attempt to divert tonnage, and in spite of the fact that a year ago it was running sixty-two machines on news print and has now only fifty-two, it is making more news print paper because the machines now running are the most modern machines, having a capacity for larger production than the older ones being taken off.

"This shows in the face of such attempt to divert machines off news print, how little has been accomplished and how improbable it is that further machines can be switched in this way, under existing markets.

"For this reason, publishers need not be afraid if they have to depend for their next year's supply on the open market, or so much paper will be diverted that it will create a scarcity.

"Since the announcement of the recommendation of the paper committee urging publishers to adopt the policy of only making contracts at a satisfactory price and under satisfactory contract conditions, we have had reports from a large number of publishers, who by insisting on this position, have now been able to obtain contracts under prices and conditions endorsed by the committee and certainly on a much better basis than if they had allowed themselves to be coerced into a panicky frame of mind as was the case last year.

"To some extent at least, it is now a seller's market.

"Further, it must be borne in mind that the new postal rates and zone system now in force against newspapers, and which provided such amusement for paper manufacturers and their trade journals at the time the Government imposed these unjust taxes on newspapers, are now developing to be a substantial item in reducing next year's paper consumption.

"A number of very large newspapers will have their circulation reduced tremendously by these new postal rates and by the proposed increase in rates by express companies.

"This will all tend, of course, to reduce circulation.

"In addition to all the other economies and reductions which are now effective, the differential between production and consumption is very substantially now in favor of the publisher.

"A further reduction in consumption is indicated by the fact that advertising figures to date throughout the country show a decrease of, roughly, ten per cent over last year, which will further decrease the consumption of paper."

that in the course of and in connection with his investigations, the Controller be authorized to confer with and co-operate with the Federal Trade Commission of the United States of America and that the Controller be authorized under the Inquiries Act, C.H.104, Revised Statutes of Canada, and amending Act 2, Geo. V, Chap. 28, to engage the services of such accountants, engineers, technical advisers or other experts, clerks, reporters and assistants as he may deem necessary and advisable. The expenditure incurred hereunder, to be charged to War Appropriation. The committee concur in the foregoing and submit the same for approval.

NEW CIRCULATION MANAGER IN LOUISVILLE.

G. E. Johnson has resigned as circulation manager of the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal and Times, and J. L. Bomar, who has been connected with the papers for the past twenty-four years, succeeds him.

Mr. Johnson, who retired at his own request, will continue with the Courier-Journal and Times in an advisory capacity and in his duties—long performed—as secretary to Henry Watterson and to General W. B. Haldeman. He has been in the service of the Courier-Journal for forty-seven years, starting as printer's "devil."

What is Non-Distribution?

NON-DISTRIBUTION: The system by which each compositor is continuously supplied with new type, spacing material, high and low leads, slugs, and rules, directly from the Monotype Type-&-Rule Caster, which makes this material so economically that whole pages, after use, are melted up to make new material; it makes the compositor's work a pleasure by cutting out the drudgery of distribution, leaving him free to spend all his time building ideas into type form without having to stop and tear down old jobs to get material; it eliminates non-productive time by using all the compositors all the time on constructive work.

We created the Non-Distribution System, which is possible only with Monotype equipment, and originated the word Non-Distribution fittingly to describe it. The success of the system has induced imitating competitors to use the word in connection with less efficient methods, but there is only one Non-Distribution System.

JAIL FACES ANTI-WAR WRITERS.

COURT DECISION INCLUDES ALL WHO AID IN PAPERS' DISTRIBUTION, TOO.

That criminal proceedings can be taken by the Government against editors and publishers of publications which have tried to obstruct the policies of the nation since America entered the war is intimated by the significant statement in the decision of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals which sustained Postmaster General Burleson for barring the August number of the Masses from the mails.

The court said: "If the magazine (the Masses) is non-mailable under that section it may be that the editor has committed a crime in publishing it for which upon conviction he may be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned for not more than twenty years, or both."

As other publications have offended in a similar manner, Federal officials declare they are also amenable to the law and their publishers may find themselves in grave danger of going to prison or paying a heavy fine.

The effect of the Masses decision, United States Attorney Coffey said, was to prohibit the magazine from distribution throughout the country by express or other means of interstate commerce.

Earl B. Barnes, Assistant United States Attorney, who has successfully defended the postmaster in all court proceedings that have arisen through the suppression of radical and revolutionary magazines, will lay before the Grand Jury a mass of evidence already in his hands which may involve other publications and people handling them.

It is the opinion of local officials that the decision in the Masses case would practically compel the institution of criminal proceedings, even if such measures had not been contemplated.

There has been a warning to all express companies and dealers in the statement issued by Mr. Coffey and Mr. Barnes relative to the new law forbidding the carrying, transportation or sale of unmailable matter.

Many companies have been handling copies of unmailable magazines which have been placed in their hands for shipment, and practically every news stand has had such magazines displayed for sale, but under the law relating to trading with the enemy this is absolutely forbidden. If this practice continues, not only publishers but express companies and newsdealers will find themselves in trouble.

In the opinion rendered, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals reverses the decision of Judge Learned Hand, granting the Masses Publishing Company, New York, an injunction restraining Postmaster Thomas G. Patten from withholding from the mails the August number of the Masses, under the order of Postmaster General Burleson, who ruled it was non-mailable.

The issue was barred from the mails because it contained poems eulogizing anarchists convicted of defying the draft laws, cartoons insinuating that this Government was dealing treacherously with Russia, and editorial attacks upon the conscription law and other military policies.

Judge Learned Hand held notwithstanding these facts that the paper did not violate the Espionage Act because it did not directly advocate resistance to the draft.

This decision halted the plans entertained by the Federal officials for FIFTY Years of Service!

Atlanta Constitution

CELEBRATES ITS Golden Anniversary

For fifty years the CONSTITUTION has been able to walk and labor hand in hand with the people of Atlanta and Georgia, all bent upon the same purpose: The development of our God-given resources and the building of the premier city and commonwealth south of the Mason and Dixon line. During that time there has not been a movement launched, looking to civic or state improvement, better education facilities, improved living conditions for white or black, but the CONSTITUTION either had a direct hand in it or gave to it its undivided sanction and support.

The CONSTITUTION has become known from ocean to ocean and from the lakes to the gulf as a builder, not a destructor; as an optimist, not a fault-finder. It has always helped, never knowingly hindered.

So jealous of the well-being and the progress of the South has the CONSTITUTION been—so carefully and authentically has it recorded from day to day the march of events in the development of city and state, that out of its columns the whole history of Atlanta and Georgia during the last fifty years could be written—such a history, intimate and detailed, as could not be written with such a degree of completeness and thoroughness from any other source of information.

And having rounded its fifty years of service, of which period the present editor and general manager has been associated with it for a third of a century, the CONSTITUTION turns the semi-centennial mile post strengthened by the experience of five decades, and cheered by the confidence and esteem of as loyal a constituency as ever marshaled forces under the banner of newspaper leadership for progress and patriotism—to still greater victories in the new fields opened to Southern achievement by the cataclysm of the world war.

And as it led its discouraged and destitute people out of the ashes of the Civil War, to the achievement of probabilities and to the acquirement of riches then undreamed—so it now turns to the greater, but less irksome, task of building at the close of this war on a foundation of prosperity already established, and offering to the incalculable variety of Southern resources greater possibilities for development and profitable investment than those of any other section of all the world.

CLARK HOWELL,

Editor and General Manager.

The Standard Southern Newspaper

taking drastic measures to crush the anti-militarists.

Francis G. Coffey, United States Attorney, took an appeal mainly for the purpose of obtaining a ruling from the higher court that would give him a chance to launch the prosecutions previously contemplated, and he got it in the opinion which was rendered on November 2 by Circuit Court Judge Rogers and concurred in by Judges Ward and Mayer.

After deciding that the law under which the Masses was barred from the mails by Postmaster Patten was constitutional, Judge Rogers cited previous states prohibiting the publication of seditious matter and said:

"If the magazine is non-mailable under that section, it may be that the editor has committed a crime in publishing it, for which upon conviction he may be fined not more than $10,000, or imprisoned for not more than twenty years, or both.

"That one may wilfully obstruct the enlistment service without advising in direct language against enlistment and without stating that to refrain from enlistment is a duty or in one's interest, seems to us too plain for controversy.

"To obstruct the recruiting or enlistment service within the meaning of the statute it is not necessary that there should be any physical obstruction. Anything which impedes, hinders, retards, restrains or puts an obstacle in the way of recruiting is sufficient.

"The court does not hesitate to say that, considering the natural and reasonable effect of the publication, it was intended wilfully to obstruct recruiting."

In addition to having their August issue suppressed under the Espionage Act, the publishers of the Masses were subsequently notified that their second class mailing privilege would henceforth be unobtainable.

A separate legal proceeding involving this point is pending, but so far all the court decisions have been against the publishers.

The interpretation by Judge Rogers of the Espionage Act, together with the radical clauses in the Trading with the Enemy Act against the transportation or circulation of newspapers and publications which are considered in violation of the Espionage Law, has placed formidable weapons in the hands of the Government in dealing with treason, even where skillfully veiled.

Lawyers for publications which have taken risks with the postal authorities have advised, it is said, that these laws on their face seemed to give almost unlimited control to the Government over periodicals which followed an anti-war policy, and that the limits of the Government's authority could only be defined by test cases, which might result in heavy punishments.

Because of the Trading with the Enemy Act provision, which makes it a crime to transport or circulate publications which are of a "non-mailable" character under the Espionage Act, news companies have sent out word to several radical publications which have been in trouble with the Government that the danger of violating the Trading with the Enemy Act is so great that they could not afford to deal in magazines which had been in conflict with the Federal authorities.

The first radical publication to be hit heavily was the Masses, whose November issue had just left the press. Practically all newsdealers refused to handle this number, although the tone of the publication has greatly moderated since a promise was offered to the Government by the publishers, who have been seeking a

SLOGANS FOR THE NEWSPAPER.

CONTEST BY THE LOUISVILLE COURIER-JOURNAL AND TIMES BRINGS BIG LIST.

Four prizes will be distributed to employees by the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal and the Louisville Times when selections are made of the winning slogans submitted for the two papers, and selections also of the second best slogans.

In each case the best slogan will call for an award of $10, while the second prize in every case is $5.

The contest was open to every employee of the two papers, which are published morning and evening in the same building in Louisville, and practically everybody contributed.

The result of a winnowing of the chaff from the wheat has given about 125 slogans suggested for the Courier-Journal, and a hundred or so for the Times. They have been referred to a board of selection, which will make the decision and award the prizes. This board consists of Bruce Haldeman, president of the two companies; Henry Watterson, editor of the Courier-Journal; and General W. B. Haldeman, editor of the Times.

The list of slogans is interesting as showing the high esteem in which the employees hold their papers, and also as offering suggestions for other newspapers that may be looking for appropriate phrases.

FREIGHT TAX ON NEWSPAPERS.

BUNDLES HANDLED BY THE EXPRESS COMPANIES TO BE WEIGHED IN BULK.

Newspaper publishers were told by Internal Revenue Commissioner Roper on November 6 that the war tax of one cent on each twenty cents or fraction of that amount charged by express companies would be assessed according to charges based on bulk weight of newspaper bundles, and that it would not be necessary to weigh each package separately to determine the individual charge and tax.

This ruling, which is subject to review by Secretary McAdoo, will mean a saving of time and money to publishers using express companies for distribution.

NEW YORK COMMERCIAL IS COMING BACK TO ITS OWN.

Under the new ownership of Russell R. Whitman, the New York Commercial is beginning to make folks sit up and take notice that it is on the road to big things.

Frank W. Noxon, secretary of the Railway Business Association and author of the well known book "Are We Capable of Self-Government?" has become a permanent contributor to the Commercial. He is writing a series of articles on the activities of business associations, the first of which is entitled, "Price Control Views Sought by United States Chamber of Commerce," and a letter has been sent out by the Commercial to all the business organizations in the United States offering to make the Commercial a "clearing house" for business information. "The response to date has been remarkable," Mr. Whitman reports.

A. S. Bennett has resigned from the Conde Nast publications to become circulation manager of the New York Commercial.

Charles J. Baker, who has been representing the Cosmopolitan Magazine in Chicago, has joined the staff of the Commercial as automobile editor. He is the son of P. C. Baker, for twenty years the managing editor and general manager of the Detroit News. Mr. Baker has been connected with the publicity department of the Brush Runabout Company, the Lozier Company, the Dunlap-Ward Advertising Agency, and the Chalmers Company. The Commercial pays particular attention to automobiles, automobile trucks, tractors, tires, accessories and aeroplanes.

Julius Moritzen has just completed an interesting series of articles in the New York Commercial on Scandinavian-American relations.

Mr. Whitman says that the Commercial is the first daily newspaper in the United States to inaugurate a daily department devoted to the United States foreign trade. The title of this column is "Foreign Trade Fields and United States Opportunities."

This was an error, as H. C. Patterson holds that position, and Mr. Moore is in charge of national advertising.

BACK AS AD MANAGER.

J. W. Jones, of Eugene, Ore., who was at one time advertising manager of the Portland (Ore.) Capital Journal, is again filling that position, succeeding James M. Heady.

THE MATTER OF CHEAPER BREAD FOR OHIO.

T. T. Frankenburg of Columbus, Ohio, representing the National Association of Master Bakers, does not believe that Floyd MacGriff, the Columbus correspondent of the International News Service or any other influence is going to get cheaper bread for Ohio, as it was mentioned he did in an article in THE FOURTH ESTATE of October 6:

Mr. Frankenburg writes:

"I do not wish to seem a pessimist and I would not dampen the ardor of the International News Service, but with the advantage of all the information of what the baking industry is doing and of what the Federal administration is trying to do, I feel safe in saying that Ohio will not get cheaper bread, thanks to MacGriff or any one else, during the continuation of the war, or at least so long as Congress guarantees a minimum of $2 per bushel on wheat.

"I happen to have pinned to the clipping from THE FOURTH ESTATE a Washington dispatch sent out by a wire service akin to that which Mr. MacGriff serves, explaining definitely and succinctly why bread is cheaper abroad than it is in this country, and explaining it in practically the same terms which the baking industry has employed for the last year, namely, that the bakers of England and France are subsidized and that the people pay indirectly by taxation what in this country they pay directly for a loaf of bread.

"Furthermore, Americans get first class bread, while that being sold in most of the European countries is a very inferior product, both in point of taste and nutritive qualities.

"Possibly I can enjoy some advantages over Mr. MacGriff. I do possess inside information. I have access to all the standard data, both scientific and economic, regarding the baking industry in the United States.

"There is no wish to be selfish about the matter, however, as this information is at the disposal of every accredited correspondent in the United States and he is welcome at any time to send a collect message asking for the information he may desire about the bread industry, and he will get in return, by a prepaid wire, within the same twenty-four hours, that which is requested."

NEW ONE IN DES MOINES.

The Des Moines (Ia.) Forum will be launched shortly with W. Payne, for many years editor of the Nevada (Ia.) Representative, as editor.

The board of directors is composed of S. L. Moore of Boone; Charles A. Rawson of Des Moines; James M. Pierce, editor Iowa Homestead, of Des Moines; S. M. Leach of Adel; E. A. Fawcett of Nevada and James L. Parrish of Des Moines.

The purpose of the paper will be to present a weekly review of what is going on in the nation and particularly in Iowa from a Republican viewpoint.

FOR CANADIAN NON-JEWS.

A new Jewish weekly is about to be started in Montreal by H. Hyman Edelstein, formerly editor of the Canadian Jewish Chronicle. The new paper will aim to inform non-Jews of conditions in Jewry and of Jewish national aspirations. It will be non-political and non-partisan.

CHANGES IN HAZELTON.

Llewellyn Richards, former city editor of the Hazelton (Pa.) Sentinel, and Michael Coll, sports editor of the same newspaper, have assumed the same positions under the Sentinel-Standard, now being published in the morning field at Hazelton.

BOOK PAPER MEN PROMISE TO BE GOOD.

SIGN AGREEMENT WITH FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION TO STOP PRACTICES FOUND OBJECTIONABLE.

The book paper manufacturers on Thursday afternoon promised the Federal Trade Commission that henceforth they will "be good."

At a final hearing at Washington what amounts to a "consent agreement" was entered. The case was not dismissed—that would imply the innocence of the paper men—but a "stipulation" was approved by the Commission whereby all the offending producers formally agree to discontinue the trade practices found objectionable by the Trade Commission and to cease for good and all the so-called "Bureau of Statistics" which was the vehicle for price inflation. This presumably cleans up the book paper situation in so far as the Trade Commission is concerned.

The "stipulation" is as follows:

"It is hereby stipulated and agreed, subject to the approval of the Federal Trade Commission, by and between the trial counsel representing the Federal Trade Commission and the several respondents represented by their counsel of record signatory hereto, that the Federal Trade Commission shall enter the following order disposing of this complaint:

"It is hereby ordered by the Federal Trade Commission:

"(I) That the dissolution of the Bureau of Statistics of the Book Paper Manufacturers, as set forth in the answers and amended answers in this complaint, be and the same is hereby approved;

"(II) That each and all of the respondents signatory hereto (here insert in the order itself the names of the stipulating respondents in the formal order when made and entered of record) shall forever cease and desist from continuing their respective memberships in the said Bureau of Statistics of the Book Paper Manufacturers, or from reorganizing the said bureau, and shall not create or join or become members of any such bureau or similar organization having for its purpose the objects, or any of them, charged in the complaint of this case as having been the objects of the said Bureau of Statistics, and shall forever cease and desist from carrying on such activities as are charged in the complaint to have been carried on by the said bureau, and from engaging in any concerted movement (1) to enhance prices of book print paper, or (2) to maintain such enhanced prices, or (3) to bring about substantial uniformity of such prices, or (4) to effect or maintain such enhancement or such uniformity of prices through the medium of telephone communication, or by correspondence, or by personal meetings, or through other communications, or in any other manner whatsoever.

"(III) That the respondent Charles F. Moore be and is hereby ordered to forever cease and desist from continuing said Bureau of Statistics of the Book Paper Manufacturers, or from reorganizing such bureau, or from creating, managing, conducting, working for or becoming connected in any capacity with any other bureau or similar organization having for its purpose the objects charged in the complaint as having been the objects of said Bureau of Statistics, or similar objects, and from being connected with or assisting in any concerted movement to enhance prices of book print paper or maintain such enhanced prices or to bring about substantial uniformity of such prices or from aiding and assisting in any capacity in effecting or maintaining such enhancement or such uniformity of prices through the medium of telephone communication or by correspondence or by personal meetings or through other communications or in any other manner whatsoever."

COOK COUNTY JOINS N.E.A.

The Cook County Press Club, an organization of local newspapers published in and adjoining Cook County, Illinois, has voted unanimously to join the National Editorial Association. The advisability of joining the national body was urged by Benjamin S. Herbert, editor of the Ravenswood Citizen and the National Printer-Journalist, and his points were enforced by the enthusiastic comments of W. W. Loomis or LaGrange, Ill., and John Phillips of the Morgan Park Weekly Review.

Following the business session of the meeting, held on November 3, an elaborate vaudeville entertainment, furnished by employees of the Chicago Telephone Company, was enjoyed. Interspersed in the program were speeches by Mr. Weiden, chief of the publicity department of the Peoples Gas Light & Coke Company; Peter Reinberg, chairman of the board of commissioners of Cook County, and Congressman Niels Juul. The Chicago Telephone Company's orchestra furnished the music for the occasion.

Charles Slough has suspended the Prior Lake (Minn.) Enterprise.

CANADIAN LAW ON THE RED CROSS USE.

In Canada it is illegal to use for the purpose of trade or as an advertisement (to induce the sale of any article whatever or for any business or charitable purpose) the emblem of the Greek red cross on a white ground, or any sign or insignia made or colored in imitation thereof, or the words "Red Cross" or any combination of these words.

LARGE PAPER CONSUMPTION IN SOUTH AMERICA.

Robert S. Barrett, special agent for the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce has returned from Brazil after a study of all phases of the conditions in the newspaper business in South America.

He said the consumption of news print paper in South America was enormous, especially in Buenos Ayres, where 30,000 tons were used yearly in the printing of forty-one dailies.

The Argentine papers, as a rule, treated the United States with fairness.

PAPER FOR 1918.

"In addition to this, we have increased production, a number of new mills coming on the market, Newfoundland paper—all of this coupled with decreased exports.

"Under the panicky conditions of last year's market at this time, publishers covered themselves, even at the then existing fearfully high prices, for their maximum requirements. These savings effected a drop in business, which has had the result of building up enormous storage, so that it is now known that in the hands of the manufacturers, in transit and in publishers' warehouses, there is substantially more than 300,000 tons or, roughly, a three months' supply.

"The famous wood shortage belatedly broadcast by the big and little trumpets of the manufacturing fraternity has failed to materialize. Labor conditions, while very scarce and severe, have not been as bad as anticipated. Woods operations have been continued and all mills are getting in a satisfactory supply, although at increased prices.

"It is apparently possible at the present time that a serious wood situation may develop by a year from now, but certainly not before. There has been ample water in all the mills, particularly those United States mills in Wisconsin and Northern New York, so that the supply and production of ground wood pulp is very much above normal and there are enormous stocks on hand, the aggregate of which is probably in the vicinity of 350,000 tons, single manufacturers having as much as 40,000 tons, so that the pulp supply for the coming year promises to be exceptionally good. Price dropped from $56 a ton at the mill to now about $30."

"The paper committee believe that contracts should only be arranged for next year at a fair price and that the five per cent overweight allowance should be reduced to a maximum overweight of one-half pound, or certainly not more than three per cent, which would be equal to approximately one pound, and that the average weight of the paper supplied must be 32 pounds on the basis of 34x26—500 sheets."

BERGER SUES FOR MAILING PRIVILEGES.

The Milwaukee Social Democratic Publishing Company, publisher of the Milwaukee Leader, of which Victor L. Berger is editor, brought proceedings on November 8 in the local courts to compel Postmaster General Burleson to restore the paper to the second class mailing privileges.

The publishing company challenged the constitutionality of the Espionage Act and the Trading with the Enemy Act.

The Postmaster General will be required to answer by November 16.

It is charged that the provisions of the Espionage Act and the Trading with the Enemy Act granting power to the Postmaster General and his assistants to determine whether the laws are violated are unconstitutional. They do not, the publishers contend, afford the accused persons trial by court and thus violate the rights of free speech and a free press.

The Leader says it has been the organ of the Social Democratic Party and several labor unions, and although advocating international peace, has at no time published any articles violating any of the provisions of the Espionage Act or similar enactments. Denial of the right to use the mails, it is set forth, has caused the paper to lose 15,000 subscribers.

A. W. Mavis has sold the Silva (N. D.) Journal to L. H. Bratton.

PAPER COMPANY FINED FOR CONTEMPT.

County Judge E. B. Dillon of Columbus, Ohio, has fined the Central Market Paper Company $450 for contempt of court, in failing to make good on its bid for print paper to the receiver of a defunct newspaper.

The company bid on some print paper and declined to take it, maintaining that there had been higher bidders and that it has lost all market for the paper.

WAR LEGISLATION INDEX.

The Committee on Public Information has published a summary of the legislation enacted by the first "war session" of the Sixty-fifth Congress.

In each case there are given the dates upon which each act was reported and passed, the votes in the two houses, and a brief synopsis of the chief provisions contained in the act.

For convenience an index is appended.

PRESS LOYAL, SAYS MEGATA.

Newspapers of the United States were praised for their loyalty to the Government in an address by Baron Megata, head of the Japanese Mission in this country, at a luncheon of the Japan Society of America in San Francisco on November 2.

Some papers in both Japan and the United States have lent themselves, probably unconsciously, to unfriendly propaganda, he said. He urged a better understanding between the countries.

VALUABLE MR. SMALLFIELD.

Until a new assistant manager of the Canadian Press Association is appointed (to succeed A. R. Alloway), W. E. Smallfield of the Renfrew (Ont.) Mercury, a past president, member of the board of directors for many years and who is in very close touch with the work of the association, is assisting Manager J. M. Imrie.

The latter is very busy with Canada's Victory Loan advertising, which is being handled by the Canadian Press Association.

SALE IN WILMERDING.

M. Clare Crowley and Bert H. Stowell have sold the Wilmerding (Pa.) News-Tribune. The new officers of the company are: President, J. C. Harbour; secretary and treasurer, C. A. Rowan; general manager, Jess H. Rodgers; superintendent, James W. Dumm.

John A. Geeting is editor of the News-Tribune.

WYATT TO KENTUCKY.

The Clarksville (Tenn.) Leaf-Chronicle has purchased the subscription lists of the Clarksville Daily and Weekly News from R. H. Wyatt, who has moved his plant to Russellville, Ky., where he will issue a new daily in conjunction with R. I. Whitlege, formerly advertising manager of the Leaf-Chronicle.

NOW PRINT SHOP OWNER.

The Nevada (Mo.) Evening Post, published by R. W. Curd and H. Long, has been purchased by the Nevada Daily Mail.

EDITOR GETS POST.

I. S. Walker, until recently editor of the Custer (Okla.) Courier, has been elected secretary of the Clinton (Okla.) chamber of commerce.

ONLY FULL A.B.C. REPORTS.

FOUR TO ONE VOTE IN FAVOR OF NEW ASSOCIATION
BY-LAW.

By a ratio of four to one, newspaper members of the Audit Bureau of Circulations have expressed themselves in favor of the plan of the A. B. C. to make even more stringent the original ruling, which makes necessary the printing of the complete A. B. C. report if any part of it is to be published.

In other words the newspapers do not favor a plan to permit publishers to print a partial report.

The referendum vote does not end the matter, however. It will be referred to a committee to be acted upon officially within a short time.

The referendum vote was discussed at length at a recent meeting of the publishers of the Inland Daily Press Association, at which the sentiment seemed decidedly against the new ruling.

VALUABLE DIRECTORY FOR NEWS PRINT USERS.

The American Newspaper Publishers Association's paper committee has compiled a little directory of paper mills which will give complete information to all publishers. It is published in pamphlet form and copies will be available free to all members of the American Newspaper Publishers Association. Others may obtain copies at a price of twenty-five cents.

This directory will give publishers information whereby they can figure what mills can take their business. It will show the maximum trim of each machine in the United States and Canada, with their speed and production. It also gives a list of all paper mills using waste paper, where publishers may dispose of their waste; also a list of jobbers buying waste paper, and in addition to this, a list of all the Paper Trade Associations interested in news print.

The directory has been prepared with great care and at considerable expense and the paper committee will issue it at regular intervals, at least once a year.

In the preface to the directory, the paper committee says:

"We acknowledge the co-operation of the News Print Manufacturers Association, and particularly the courtesy of George F. Steele, formerly secretary, and Robert Houk, Jr., acting secretary, in checking this information and assisting us in making it as full and accurate as possible."

The paper committee of the A.N.P.A. consists of: Frank P. Glass, chairman; E. M. Scholz and Elbert H. Baker (executive committee); J. F. MacKay, E. Q. Knott, V. S. McClatchy, Louis Wiley, August F. Seested, J. D. Plummer and Robert Ewing.

The new directory is the first of its kind ever issued.

TAYLOR STARTS AGAIN.

L. D. Taylor is planning a new weekly in Vancouver, B. C. He was formerly mayor of Vancouver and is ex-publisher of the Vancouver World.

SYMPATHY TO YELLAND.

For the second time in eighteen months, Chester Yelland, editor of the Sheffield (La.) Press, is mourning the loss of a child.

REPORTED MISSING.

Flight Lieutenant E. W. Desbarats, son of Ed. Desbarats and former assistant manager of the Desbarats Advertising Agency, Montreal, has been officially reported missing since September 20.

First In Rotogravure

THE NEW YORK TIMES, the first American newspaper to make use of the rotogravure process, issues a twelve- to sixteen-page section with its Sunday edition presenting the world news in photographs reproduced by the perfected rotogravure process. Every detail of the picture is brought out in a beautiful clear impression and in soft, sepia tones.

Superb results are obtained by this process, through the etching of illustrations on a copper cylinder. It is the highest development of newspaper printing. The superiority extends to the advertisements, which are given such distinction that they cannot escape the reader's eye.

The Rotogravure Section of the New York Times enters the homes of more than 400,000 purchasers every Sunday. The arrival of the section is looked forward to with eager anticipation in thousands upon thousands of intelligent well-to-do families throughout the nation. Its advertising value, especially for articles of women's wear, fine furniture and objects of art, is not surpassed.

Since September 9, 1917, the Magazine Section of the Sunday edition of the New York Times has also been printed by the rotogravure process. The improvement in this attractive, high-class feature of the Times is marked.

The Mid-Week Pictorial of the New York Times, issued Thursday, is printed in rotogravure. In this weekly publication, the story of the war from day to day and of important current events is told in pictures notable for their faithful reproduction of details.

In ten months of 1917 the New York Times published 10,233,444,agate lines of advertising, 861,524 lines more than in the corresponding period in 1916, 2,350,024 lines more than in the corresponding period in 1915—a greater volume and a greater gain, Help and Situation Wanted advertisements alone excepted, than any other New York newspaper.

A "BLUE BOOK" AD MAN?

Clinton Osborne, of Newark, N. J., has been arrested in New York on a charge of forgery. The arrest was the outcome of a complaint made several months ago for the Vanderbilt Hotel that some person was using the name of T. M. Hilliard, manager of the hotel, to obtain subscriptions and advertisements for a so-called "Professional Blue Book."

THE BEST OF ALL.

EDITOR THE FOURTH ESTATE.

Sir: I receive a number of trade papers, but find THE FOURTH ESTATE more valuable in my department than any of them.

J. L. HIRSCHMAN,
The Germania Publishing Company,
Milwaukee.

NEW AD MANAGER FOR THE GRAND RAPIDS NEWS.

Thal Daniels, for the past five years with the advertising department of the Grand Rapids (Mich.) News, has been appointed advertising manager of the News, succeeding Russell W. Boyle, who has gone with the Chicago office of the Cosmopolitan Magazine.

Commenting on the appointment, A. P. Johnson, publisher of the News, said to THE FOURTH ESTATE:

"Mr. Daniels during his career on the News has shown a natural adaptability for newspaper work, having attained his present position through gradual and continued promotion. Much of the success of the Grand Rapids News has been due to the work of Messrs. Boyle and Daniels."

THIS AD MANAGER BELIEVES IN SERVICE.

The policy of Edwin A. Neutzenholzer, the new advertising manager of the Akron (Ohio) Beacon Journal, is "Give service to the advertiser, thereby making my paper valuable not only as an advertising medium, but also as a source from which he can secure such information as he may desire relative to the sale, etc., of articles similar to his sold in my paper's territory."

Mr. Neutzenholzer started as a newsboy in 1896 selling the Cincinnati Times-Star on the streets of

EDWIN A. NEUTZENHOLZER.

Dayton, and he took a regular route for the Dayton Evening Herald in 1899. In 1908, he secured a position in the advertising department of the Dayton Evening Herald and was appointed advertising manager in 1910.

In 1912, when the Dayton Evening Herald was taken over by the Dayton Journal Company, Mr. Neutzenholzer was made national advertising manager of the Herald and Journal. In September this year he went with the Beacon Journal in Akron, after having served on the Dayton Herald nine years lacking one week.

LAIRD CHANGES POSITION.

Scott Laird, formerly engaged as a newspaper publisher in Winona, Minn., has resigned as secretary of the Commercial Club of Thief River Falls, Minn., to become the city salesman there for a grocery house. Mr. Laird has been commercial secretary for a year. He is now acting in the capacity of second vice-president of the organization.

CONSOLIDATIONS.

RATON, N. M.—The Mail and the French Farmer have been consolidated with the Raton Reporter. W. H. Woodhouse of Topeka, Kan., has become associated with L. E. Busenbark in the publication of the Raton Reporter.

ALAMOSA, COLO.—Clifton H. Wilder, owner of the Alamosa Courier, has purchased the plant, business and good will of the Alamosa Leader from Ben P. Middleton and will consolidate the two papers.

A. B. Oliver has purchased the Remer (Minn.) Record.

NEWSPAPERS AND SECOND LIBERTY LOAN.

HOW THE "CHICAGO PLAN" OPERATED IN ONE THOUSAND TOWNS OF THE UNITED STATES AND ALSO CANADA.

By ROBERT E. RHINEHART.

In sending the subscription of the Second Liberty Loan above the maximum quota set for the country, newspaper advertising again demonstrated its matchless power in selling to the American public, through the assistance rendered by the National Advertising Advisory Board.

More forcibly, more definitely even than in the floating of the first Liberty Loan, the newspaper revealed its peculiar talent for gripping the man in the street and the woman in the home and making them buy an advertised product.

Newspaper advertising helped sell more than $5,000,000,000 of bonds to 8,000,000 people of the United States; newspaper advertising, which put the real selling drive into the great organization of varied salesmanship that actually conveyed the bonds to the buyers.

Of this any one who had even a slight association with the selling is convinced. One has but to review the numerous advertisements of large and small space, and consider the most excellent and capable use to which this space was put, to realize the force the newspaper was in the bond selling campaign just closed.

With but a fraction of this space lying before one on a desk—hundreds and hundreds of full page advertisements of striking illustration and compelling copy—with a thought akin to awe one contemplates the tremendous campaign of publicity, accomplished without a direct sponsorship or even official encouragement of the Government.

There has never been a national campaign of advertising to match it. There has never been a national campaign of advertising to match one-half of it.

Though the United States Government indulged in no advertising of any kind, other than posters, one cannot doubt that the Government was the beneficiary of newspaper advertising space donated to it by loyal business men either in space or actual contributions, which will run between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 in value.

It is too early, of course, to estimate the exact value of the space donated to the Government, but a survey of what was accomplished in Chicago, Detroit, Boston, Cleveland, New York, Minneapolis, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Des Moines, Akron, and other cities, gives an index of what was accomplished throughout the country.

The "Chicago Plan" of advertising, as originated for the Red Cross membership campaign, again did great service for the entire country in helping the sale of Liberty Bonds. Wherever the sale of Liberty Bonds exceeded the maximum quota, notably, New York, Boston, Cleveland, Washington, D. C., Detroit, Akron, and nearly every city on the Pacific Coast, the "Chicago Plan" of advertising, i. e., full pages in newspapers paid for by patriotic business men, was used.

Besides originating this idea and plan of advertising, Chicago also furnished the newspapers from the Atlantic to the Pacific with copy and illustrations for over 2,000 full page advertisements.

Canada is the latest recruit to use the "Chicago Plan" of advertising for its Victory Loan.

Over twenty-five pages were furnished to the newspapers of Washington, D. C.

This is the third time the "Chicago Plan" has stood the test and proved to every one the value of newspaper advertising as an economizing factor; first, in the Red Cross membership campaign, when we secured Red Cross members at a cost of two and one-half cents (or seven and one-half cents including advertising which was paid for by Chicago business men) as against the previous minimum cost per member of sixteen cents in any other city or twenty-three cents per member in New York City.

Then again, in the first Liberty Loan, and the $100,000,000 Red Cross financial campaign, conservatively speaking, the "Chicago Plan" of advertising has secured nearly $5,000,000 worth of newspaper advertising for the Red Cross and Liberty Bonds.

HANDLED LIKE A BUSINESS ACCOUNT.

The improved Chicago plan for the second Liberty Loan, too, is interesting in several other important features worth more than passing notice to the advertising world.

In the first place, the Chicago advertising campaign was handled identically as any other advertising campaign is handled. A fund was raised to buy advertising space.

Second, the Chicago advertising was handled through one agency, the same as an advertising campaign for an automobile or a food product.

Third, it secured the co-operation of out-of-town newspapers by furnishing them mats with advertising copy, at cost, which they took to advertisers and induced them to buy space for Liberty Loan advertising.

In these three features may be found plenty of food for thought for advertising in general, and the advertising of any subsequent Liberty Bond campaigns in particular.

The raising of an advertising fund in actual money rather than contributed space increased the business of the newspapers. It avoided any disarrangement of the schedules of big advertisers in newspapers. It protected regular advertisers from assuming the burden of this advertising. Under the donated space arrangement big advertisers were the target of solicitation.

As a consequence, the campaign came to a close without a legacy of disapproval.

The handling of the business through one agency, which was the most radical departure of the second Liberty Loan campaign, brought forth the most important benefits of the campaign. At the outset of the campaign, Charles H. Schweppe, director of publicity campaign of the Seventh Federal Reserve District, took the radical but business-like step of placing the Chicago advertising through one advertising agency, the William H. Rankin Company.

To Henry Schott, vice-president of Montgomery Ward and Co., was given the responsibility to finance the Chicago campaign and he made good in his usual big way.

With the exception of five pieces of copy, all advertising copy for the Liberty Loan campaign was written in the Chicago and New York offices of the Rankin agency.

Four pieces of copy were written by I. R. Parsons of Carson Pirie Scott & Co., and one page by P. W. Lennon of the Royal Tailors, and all art work was either drawn by this agency or under its supervision by the Ethridge Company, Charles Daniel Frey Company and Stolz & Williams.

This secured a harmony of appearance, and as a consistent and sustained appeal that could not have been otherwise obtained.

QUICK ACTION.

It also brought about a quicker action than characterized the more diffused handling of the first Liberty Loan campaign.

The advertising copy was always up to the minute—indeed ahead of it. It was properly vised and properly judged. A proper rotation of the ads in the newspapers was determined and carried out. There was no spasmodic hap-hazard period in the campaign.

Undoubtedly the maximum amount of advertising was obtained for the money.

Chicago expended $63,573.34 in newspaper advertising. With it, the committee placed 183,420 lines in the English newspapers and 203,742 lines in foreign language newspapers, a total of 387,171 lines in the city of Chicago.

Also pages in five farm papers of Illinois.

Through this coherence of plan and centralized direction, the results of the Chicago plan extended over the entire country.

The New York office of this agency was brought into action, and from it some of its art and copy was obtained.

Through the joint activity of the two offices, the newspapers of the entire country were kept closely in touch with the advertising of the loan, and scores and scores of pieces of copy sent to the newspapers for use in connection with patriotic advertising. Some pieces of copy as "America's War Answer," "All Together," "Make Your Money Win the War," "How Much Does Your Country Mean to You," "The World Must Be Made Safe for Democracy," "Now It's Your Turn," went to hundreds of newspapers, and were published.

In this connection, the Liberty Loan News was issued at Chicago and 3,500 copies were sent to the newspapers of the United States, by the National Advertising Advisory Board. Mr. Schweppe used 1,000 copies of Liberty Loan News to educate the Seventh Federal Reserve District chairman and salesmen. It carried specimens of Liberty Loan advertisements and a plan of securing space.

Scores of newspapers were thus made active participants in the work. They took mats of these advertisements at a cost of seventy-five cents each for full pages and forty cents each for smaller sizes, covering the making of the mat and typography.

So greatly did they appreciate this service that 500 full page mats were ordered from the New York office by English newspapers throughout the country and 500 taken by the Government and sent to foreign language newspapers. From the Chicago office more than 1,100 mats were ordered shipped throughout the country.

In New York City and Minneapolis is the "Chicago Plan" of advertising was extended to cover painted bulletins and electric signs.

CENTRALIZED METHOD.

The centralized effort of the Chicago method of handling the Liberty Loan advertising is undoubtedly responsible for a great amount of the Liberty Loan advertising that appeared in newspapers outside the very large cities, as the "Chicago Plan" was used by nearly every city or town in the United States to secure paid advertising to promote the sale of Liberty Bonds.

The success of this method of handling advertising is well worth the consideration of the officers of the United States Treasury Department. It shows that the way to sell Government bonds is by newspaper advertising handled exactly as the advertising of any large advertiser is handled, thru one centralized organization.

The efficiency of all the advertising effort throughout the United States could have been doubled or quadrupled if a campaign could have been standardized and directed in the same way the Chicago campaign was handled.

The Government could set a fine example of economizing the time spent by salesmen and the money spent by patriotic business men for advertising Liberty Bonds by taking over the responsibility of the advertising and using the newspapers thoroughly for the next Liberty Bond issue.

The lesson that is brought forcibly home at this time—is that every organized effort known should be used to economize the time of the patriotic bankers, business men and bond salesmen who give their time freely to sell Liberty Bonds.

Advertising, as in the case of the Chicago Red Cross membership campaign, and many other Red Cross campaigns has proven over and over again that it will reduce the cost of securing Red Cross memberships and if the Liberty Loan campaigns could be checked up it would be shown that advertising reduced the cost of selling.

In Chicago it was absolutely proven that a bond salesman can sell twice as many bonds in a given time with advertising as he could sell without advertising.

The Chicago campaign also proved that the banks that co-operated with the advertising sold many times the number of Liberty Bonds that those who did not co-operate sold.

Notable examples of this are shown in the record below:

The First National Bank, of which James B. Forgan is chairman of the board of directors, was the first bank to use newspaper advertising to urge the people of Chicago to come to their bank and buy Liberty Bonds. As a result, this bank and the First Trust & Savings Bank sold 32,604 individual bond buyers $27,000,000, out of a total of 239,500 buyers and $200,000,000 sales.

The next was the Morris Plan Bank with 17,519 buyers for $1,020,500.

The Continental and Commercial National Bank group had the largest total subscription—$28,598,000.

FOREIGN BIRTH SUBSCRIBERS.

Another interesting feature was that six out of every ten Chicagoans who contributed to the city's $200,000,000 subscription to the second Liberty Loan were of foreign birth or parentage—largely due to the advertising and editorial support given by the Chicago foreign language news-

515 MILLIONS

U. S. Bureau of Crop Statistics in a recent Forecast, lists Louisiana-Mississippi chief money crops for 1917 as worth 515 Millions. This is exclusive of numerous small crops and livestock. The same crops last year were a shade short of 300 Millions. And last year was an unusually good crop year in this section. The fact is that the farmers of Louisiana and Mississippi are going to have a net surplus of about two hundred and fifty millions of dollars of money to invest this year.

LESS ADVERTISING IN NEW YORK.

SLIGHT FALLING OFF FOR OCTOBER—PAPERS CUT THEIR SIZES.

Although the total advertising in sixteen English daily newspapers of New York City—10,791,395 lines—fell off 290,449 lines in October, as compared with the same month last year, the total business for the six months of January 1 to October 31 maintained its increase over the corresponding period of 1916 by 2,368,086 lines.

During the month of October 1917, the sixteen papers reduced their size by a total of 264 pages as compared with the same month of last year. The page record for each follows:

OREGONIANS INCORPORATE.

Articles of incorporation for the American Publishing Company of Medford have been filed with the corporation department of Oregon. The company will publish the Medford American. The incorporators are W. W. Watson, Howard A. Hill and A. S. Bliton. Capital stock is $5,000.

The Joliet (Ill.) Herald-News has joined the Associated Press.

The Davis City (Ia.) News, published by Grant Mollory, has suspended publication.

Jacob Snustad has sold the Hendrum Review to C. E. Good and has gone to Minneapolis.

DIGEST OF WORLD PAPER CONDITIONS.

AS THE WAR GOES ON THE SITUATION GETS WORSE—ENGLAND, FRANCE AND SCANDINAVIA ARE HARD HIT.

In his monthly digest of the world's pulp and paper conditions, Acting Secretary Houk of the News Print Manufacturers Association says:

"There is little change in the world's pulp and paper markets, prices ruling at practically the same levels that existed last month.

"Swedish chemical wood-pulp arrived in England during September, but only in small amounts, and practically all of it had been paid for and held in Sweden on the British paper makers' account.

"Swedish licenses to export were only obtainable up to October 15, and, furthermore, British licenses to import are very nearly exhausted. The industry in Norway is almost at a standstill.

"The British Paper Commission set the price of news print paper at 9½ cents per pound early in October, as against the September price of 8½ cents.

"Paper prices in England are expected to advance, but the pulp situation is very unsettled, as the buying power of the countries is limited, shipping space high and hard to obtain, and a curtailment in production in evidence everywhere abroad.

"Scandinavia has almost disappeared as a factor in this pulp market, and arrivals in October were on a still lower scale than previously."

Extracts from the report follow:

FRANCE.

There is no change to report in regard to the market situation in France.

ITALY.

L'Industria della Carta, Milan, Italy, September 1, 1917, states that the Italian Union of Publishers has unanimously decided to increase the price of its papers to two cents. This action has been put in the form of a resolution to the Minister of Industry, with the hope that the government will issue a decree to apply to all daily papers in Italy.

AUSTRALIA.

The Sydney correspondent of the World's Paper Trade Review, London, England, September 7, 1917, writes as follows in regard to the paper shortage in Australia:

"A paper famine is threatening Australia. Newspapers are reducing their size and adopting other measures for meeting the situation, such as abolishing the system of 'sale or return.' At the same time, the price of news print has gone up from $47.50 per short ton before the war to $173.80 per short ton."

The weekly bulletin of the Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa, Canada, has a report from the Canadian Trade Commission at Melbourne to the effect that, since it seems impracticable to try to build up a self-containing paper manufacturing industry in Australia by the utilization of hoop pine, blady grass and other domestic fibres, the executive committee of the Commonwealth Advisory Council of Science and Industry have become interested in a scheme to plant spruce and poplar in the high altitude of Victoria.

It is stated that wood from 900 acres so planted will supply the needs of Australia for one year, and it is recommended that 2,000 acres be planted the first year and 1,000 acres a year thereafter until the first planted trees are ready for cutting, and then to start a general cycle of reforestation scheme. While it would take a number of years for this wood to reach the size for cutting, it would place Australia in a self-supplying position so far as the pulp wood for paper making is concerned.

The World's Paper Trade Review,

London, England, September 14, 1917, states that "the returns of the foreign trade of Japan for the first half of the present year show a decline in the import of pulp for paper making."

RUSSIA.

The Petrograd correspondent of the Paper-Maker and British Paper Trade Journal, London, England, writes as follows:

"The provisional government has issued the following decree respecting the size of newspapers:

"Until the scarcity of paper has been removed newspapers may only be published as follows:

"Morning papers to contain not more than 252 columns, and evening papers not more than 156 columns in the week.

"This decree does not apply to the Provisional Government Gazette or to the Bulletin of Petrograd Council of Soldiers' and Workmen's Delegates.

"Newspapers that were published of less than the dimensions named in the present decree have not the right to increase their size beyond that which they had during the months of January and February this year."

The World's Paper Trade Review for September 14, 1917, states that pulp mill interests are concerned in the Riga retreat, as several pulp mills have been erected in that district during the last twenty years.

FINLAND.

The Helsingfors correspondent of the above mentioned authority writes as follows on the chaotic conditions in Finland's industries as relating to the pulp and paper industry:

"The political situation in Finland continues to be a very anxious one and will probably continue to be so for some time. What the outcome of the present struggle for autonomy will be is difficult to forecast, but it need scarcely be said that until the country's relations with Russia are placed upon a settled basis and until Finland's internal troubles are disposed of, its industry and commerce must suffer.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION'S FIRST REPORT ON BOOK PAPER.

The Federal Trade Commission is gradually getting its news print and book paper reports compiling machine in working order, and its second report made public (issued on November 8) concerns book paper production and stocks for the month of October. (The first covered news print for the last two weeks of September and was printed in THE FOURTH ESTATE of October 27.)

The October book paper report follows:

Weekly reports received from 47 book paper companies operating 73 mills for the month of October, 1917, show the following results:

	First Week (Tons)	Second Week (Tons)	Third Week (Tons)	Fourth Week (Tons)
1. Stocks on hand at mill at beginning of week	34,564	34,714	34,495	34,528
2. Production	15,559	15,367	15,528	15,377
3. Shipments	15,060	15,602	15,530	14,867
4. Stocks on hand at mill at end of week	34,988	34,720	34,421	35,038
5. Stocks on hand at delivery points	8,884	7,008	9,518	9,750

The total stocks reported at the beginning of the month amounted to 43,572 tons and at the end of the month to 44,788, an increase of 916 tons.

MACHINE OPERATION.

The reports for the operation of 230 machines show the following number down each week and the total number of hours lost on account of lack of orders:

Week	Number of Machines Down	Total Number of Hours Lost
First Week	20	974
Second Week	24	1,374
Third Week	30	2,449
Fourth Week	33	2,650

Besides these machines there were four additional machines not running during the month, the reason not being given.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.

The exports of book paper from the United States and the imports of chemical pulp for the first eight months of 1917, as compared with the corresponding period of 1916, were as follows:

	Eight Months 1917. (Net tons.)	Eight Months 1916. (Net tons.)
Exports of book paper	31,875	35,953
Imports of unbleached chemical pulp	258,243	295,940
Imports of bleached chemical pulp	85,708	87,290

TRIAL OF PAPER MAKERS MAY BE POSTPONED

It is understood that a postponement has been agreed on between the counsel of the manufacturers and the Government to postpone the trial of the indicted news print manufacturers from November 12 to either November 15 or 19.

The manufacturers had already requested a postponement from November 12, but have now withdrawn their objection and ask that the trial proceed immediately.

The progress and result of this trial will doubtless have some influence on full contracts and its proceedings will therefore be of vital interest to all publishers.

A N. P. A. MEMBERSHIP CHANGE.

The Oneonta (N. Y.) Daily Star has been transferred from the associate to the active class of membership in the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

MADISON'S NEW PAPER.

The new newspaper at Madison, Wis., will be called the Capital Times and will be first issued about December 1.

Articles of incorporation have been filed naming a capital stock of $50,000. The incorporators are William I. Eyjue, William C. Allman, Thomas C. Bowden and E. C. Homberger, all of the city of Madison.

Mr. Eyjue, who was the author of the prohibition referendum bill, was formerly business manager of the Madison State Journal.

Mr. Allman was the advertising manager and Mr. Bowden in the circulation department of the State Journal.

Mr. Homberger was the treasurer of the Dailie-Hedquist Company, one of Madison's largest stores.

The officers of the company will be: Editor and president, William I. Eyjue, advertising manager, William C. Allman; circulation manager, Thomas C. Bowden; business manager, E. C. Homberger.

"The paper will be independent and will not be an organ for any party, any group or any individual," said Mr. Eyjue. "The men who will have the active management of the company believe that there is a future in Madison for the kind of a paper we propose to publish."

FRENCHMEN CLEARED.

The charges brought against Leon Daudet, of L'Action Francaise, and Charles Maurras, of the same newspaper, were dismissed on November 5 by the judge who was investigating the alleged Royalist plot.

He found no evidence to substantiate the charges.

Earl C. Bandy, editor of the Madison (Ia.) Register News, has bought a half interest in that paper.

CRAFTSMEN WITH THE COLORS.

The following employees of the New York Sun are with the nation's fighting forces:

Q. S. Mills, second lieutenant, 105th infantry, Camp Mills; Conrad Crawford, second lieutenant, Army; Stuart Edgar, aviator, Lafayette escadrille; G. W. Gabriel, Plattsburg; Roger W. Riis, ensign, naval reserve; E. S. Morse, coxswain, second grade, naval reserve; F. L. Oliver, 2d field artillery; R. W. Fredsall, 2d field artillery; E. J. Farrell, Army;

W. Thompson, engineers; H. G. Telford, lieutenant, U. S. R.; Hudson Hawley, F. L. Curtis, Army; Brewster Beach, Navy; Parke F. Hanley, ensign, naval reserve; Henry C. Bate, officers training camp, Fort Ouelthorpe; B. Eppner, National army; P. Ronano, National army;

Charles Speare, 23d infantry; Joseph Thompson, National army; Milford E. Cook, adjutant, 23d infantry; Herbert Moulton, 13th coast defense; Paul Dreher, William Walters, Louis E. Batchelor, captain, 1st infantry; William Deutinger, National army;

Newspaper correspondents at Camp Sherman, Ohio, have been given temporary sleeping and office room in officers' quarters, with the privilege of sharing officers' mess, by Major General E. F. Glenn.

When the new $75,000 Red Cross rest house is completed, the correspondents will be given permanent quarters in the building at a nominal cost. Individual rooms with steam heat and private bath will do away with much inconvenience which the Ohio newspaper men have been experiencing for two months.

Correspondents assigned there include C. E. Collins, of the Columbus (Ohio) bureau of the Associated Press; B. J. O'Donnell, former San Francisco Examiner reporter, now with the Cincinnati Enquirer; George A. Lancaster, Tri State News Bureau, Pittsburgh, Pa.; H. R. Smith, of the Scripps McKee league; Frank Ward, International News Service; Ray Orman, Scioto (Ohio) Gazette; Artist Grove, of the Newspaper Enterprise Association, detailed from Cleveland.

Little Rock (Ark.) newspaper men of the last several years started scattering to the four winds a few months ago and many are "doing their bit."

Sam D. Fuson, formerly a Gazette man, later with the Associated Press at Columbus, Ohio, joined the Navy and is now press agent for the Great Lakes Naval Training Station.

C. E. Collins, former sports editor of the Arkansas Democrat, is now the correspondent for the Associated Press at the Ohio draft army cantonment, Camp Sherman, Chillicothe.

Lawrence ("Curley") Collins, his brother, a Gazette reporter later with the Galveston News, joined the coast artillery at Galveston, Tex., a few days before being summoned to the officers training camp at Leon Springs, Tex., where he is now seeking a commission.

Halbert Phillips, Democrat court reporter, later with the Memphis (Tenn.) Commercial-Appeal, is "somewhere in Georgia" with a Tennessee national guard unit.

Dick Gardner, who went from the Gazette to the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, is in Army service.

Frank C. Faude, head of the copy desk of the Minneapolis Tribune, is now with the forestry and railroad construction unit, Canadian overseas volunteer army. He was unable to get into the officers training camp and applied for the forestry branch of the United States Army. While he was waiting for the reply, however, he grew impatient, struck out to Winnipeg and hammered his way into the Canadian service. His unit sails for France soon.

Theodore L. Palm, formerly with the Omaha (Neb.) Bee, is in the aviation service and expects to be on the seas en route for France any moment.

William R. White, quartermaster's corps; George A. Carlin, 47th infantry, Camp Wadsworth; Harry H. Bernstein, seaman, naval reserve; H. G. Glen, 8th coast defense, Edmond Wilson, medical corps, Walter R. Suppes, National army; Frank Tansan, naval militia, George Wood, base hospital H (not yet called for service).

James McCarthy, Army; J. P. Annin, Joseph T. Clynes, W. T. Black, ambulance corps in France; Immo Brown Plattsburg; Eugene O'Connell, Plattsburg; J. Roselle, Army; William Murphy, engineers; C. H. Birm, naval reserve; Clarence H. Winkle, Army; John McGuire, National army; Harry Abraham, Walter Francis, Herman Crowe, Charles Krider, Peter Juppe, Jr., R. Colgrove, naval reserve.

Lieutenant Roger Mery van Mierden, son of one of the directors of the Societe Europeenne de Publicite, Paris, and previous to the war in the advertising agency business in New York, is with the American expeditionary force as an artillery instructor. He was second lieutenant in the French army.

Dudley H. Green, for the past seven years a member of the circulating department of the Victoria (B. C.) Colonist, has left for Toronto to begin training for the royal flying corps. He will enter the military wing of the service to qualify as a pilot for overseas duty.

W. W. Ferguson, reporter on the Omaha Daily News, has joined the aviation school at Berkeley, Cal.

Aviation beats advertising, according to Lieutenant George W. Anderson, formerly Minneapolis advertising representative for a Chicago firm. Lieutenant Anderson has been assigned to Fort Worth, Tex., as an aviation instructor and expects to go to France soon.

About sixty employees of the Winnipeg (Man.) Telegram are now doing "their bit." The latest two to enlist are Norman Nelson and John Omand, who have joined the royal flying corps.

Lieutenant E. S. Hobbs, former publisher of the Hastings (Ont.) Star, has started a small magazine in Murren, Switzerland, where he is interned as a prisoner of war.

Messrs. Berg, Peterson and Thompson, reporters on the Sioux City (Ia.) Journal, are at the Great Lakes training station in Chicago, preliminary to being sent to the radio school of Harvard University.

A fourth reporter on the Journal, Taylor by name, will join his friends if he is successful in passing the required examination.

M. H. Barton, editor of the Rhinelander (Mich.) News, is at the training school for officers at Fort Sheridan.

Reed L. Parker, formerly automobile editor of the Chicago Tribune and later in the plan department of Lord & Thomas, is now in training as an aviator in the government training camp at Dayton, Ohio.

The "roll of honor" of the Cleveland Advertising Club lists twenty-seven men. They are:

EX-PRESIDENTS AS EDITORS.

WILL ROOSEVELT AND TAFT SHOW PRESS HOW TO BE FAIR AND ACCURATE?

The New York Evening Post makes the recent decisions of ex-Presidents Roosevelt and Taft to become newspaper editors, the subject of some interesting discussions. The Post says:

"What shall we do with our ex-Presidents?"

This old and vexed American query would seem now to have received its satisfactory answer: "Make 'em editors."

At least, our two living ex-Presidents, between whom certain differences have been rumored, are today at one in having an editorial connection.

Mr. Taft is advertised as a "contributing editor" of the Philadelphia Ledger. This announcement came out a short time after Mr. Roosevelt's taking service with the Kansas City Star.

Journalism, we suppose, ought to feel much set up by this drift of high public talents into its ranks. It is a direct reversal of Barrie's cynical saying about newspapers. They confer great honor, he remarked—probably with a slanting reference to his own early career—upon a man after he has let off working for them.

But here we see men who have held the highest honor in the gift of their countrymen, seeking a further outlet for their energies in the journalistic field. The press should rise and bow acknowledgements of the compliment.

The cases of Messrs. Roosevelt and Taft differ from those of other statesmen who have dabbled in journalism.

Mr. Bryan, for example, when he founded the Commoner, had an eye, unquestionably, to his political future.

Senator L. A. Follette certainly had when he established his weekly.

France is probably the country where newspaper editing has most often been a stepping-stone to political advancement. This nation has never had a close parallel to Gambetta's experience in alternating as editor and Prime Minister.

Horace Greeley set out to pass from the editorial to the Presidential chair, but his experience was not such as to encourage imitators.

If Mr. Taft ever comes back to public life it will not be, one can safely predict, on account of his setting the Schuylkill on fire by his editorials in the Ledger.

Doubtless he and Mr. Roosevelt are simply thinking of the opportunity presented to them to get the ear of their fellow citizens through a daily newspaper.

And if they do not despise the honorarium—we hope it is a thumping

LUDLOW TYPOGRAPH

*The Profitable Medium
Between Two Extremes*

ONE EXTREME is the system by which you cast and store fully a hundred times more display type than you actually need.

THE OTHER EXTREME is the system of buying foundry display type at a cost which keeps quantities down to the minimum—you never have enough in an emergency.

THE LUDLOW TYPOGRAPH is the happy medium because it is midway between the two extremes of too much and not enough.

The Ludlow Typograph

The Ludlow Typograph provides an unlimited quantity of type; requires only the metal that actually goes into the forms; and needs practically no storage space.

one—offered them, have they not the precedent of Scott and of Hawthorne?

The latter said that but for the money he got by it he would never have set pen to paper.

All these external aspects of the editorial engagements of our ex-Presidents are very pleasing; but the effect on the "Fourth Estate" has not been much considered.

We doubt if any aspirant in a school of journalism has yet been set to write a thesis on the advantages or disadvantages of having an ex-President on the staff of a newspaper.

Obviously, the position is largely ornamental. It is a kind of journalistic luxury—some will be kind enough to say, superfluous.

It is plain that no far-away contributing editor at the end of a telegraph wire can enter vitally into the organization of a newspaper office, or keep immediately in touch with the news of the day.

It is long-distance editing at best. And the question is what will be the influence of it all upon those in the daily grind?

When they see the Colonel tearing off a section of one of his speeches and sending it along as a glowing editorial, will they feel that freshness and intense "actuality," as the French say, are of as much account in newspaper writing as the professors of journalism allege?

And if Mr. Taft imports his legal style into his editorial work, as he did into his Presidential messages, will his getting well paid disprove all that young men are told—or tell each other—about the absolute need of swift movement, of "unch" and "pep" and "kick" in daily journalism?

Such speculations perhaps ought to be put aside as ungracious.

Editors cannot but feel that a new dignity is added to their profession—if it is a profession—by the access of our two ex-Presidents.

And when it is recalled that both of them, in office, made violent attacks upon mendacious and unscrupulous press, the honor which they are now doing newspaper men is all the greater.

It need not be cried out that they are sons of the morning who have fallen to become as one of those whom they denounced and despised.

Rather should the ground be taken that an ex-President will show the common editor how to be always fair and sane and accurate, and how to make his page invariably drip with sweet reasonableness.

FIFTY-YEAR CELEBRATION IN SCRANTON.

The fiftieth anniversary of the Scranton (Pa.) Republican was celebrated on November 3 when the employees, numbering 110 in all, were the guests of the management at a banquet held in Hotel Casey.

Colonel L. A. Watres, president of the Lackawanna Publishing Company, which controls the Republican, was toastmaster. Speeches were given by W. J. Patterson, general manager; John E. Barrett, editor; John Kern, associate editor; T. J. Duffy, advertising manager; James Mitchell, managing editor; Fred Cook, circulation manager; Mrs. Hattie Penman, society editor; Chauncey Derby, city editor; Daniel Reese, foreman job department; Joseph Hostie, foreman composing room; William Steinke, cartoonist, and John Farr, Congressman from Lackawanna County.

Among the invited guests was Charles Sanderson, a former Scrantonian, now with the Paul Block Agency.

On November 1 a special fiftieth anniversary edition of the Republican was issued consisting of thirty-six pages.

N. Y. EVENING POST BELIEVES IN GETTING TOGETHER.

Nearly fifty members of the advertising staff of the New York Evening Post were entertained at dinner on November 2. The affair partook of the nature of a greeting to seven new members of the staff. Past achievements were reviewed and forecasts were made of the immediate future. H. A. Ahern, advertising manager, was toastmaster.

In a forceful address, replete with practical pointers on how to create business, Emil M. Scholz, publisher of the Evening Post, held the close attention of the staff. The new members were then presented and each spoke briefly, giving his impressions of his new environment and outlining what he plans to accomplish.

The Evening Post management believes strongly in the value of such gatherings for the promotion of mutual understanding, social pleasure and for the interchange of ideas. The result of each such dinner has been greater efficiency and more enthusiastic co-operation.

PAPER PRINTED FIFTY MILES AWAY FROM HOME.

A fire on the night of October 24, which hit the plant of the West Virginia Water & Electricity Company, out of commission for 24 hours did not keep the Charleston Evening Mail from going to press the next day. The edition was printed on the press of the Huntington Herald-Dispatch, fifty miles away and brought back to the city in time for distribution.

The Mail office went to Huntington on a noon train, worked a little over two hours between trains, and produced a regular edition, abbreviated to eight pages. The men who performed the stunt were B. H. Anderson, business manager; C. V. Ralbot, news editor; P. I. Canova, Jr., composing room foreman; B. L. Gwaltney, press foreman; and T. Guy Williams, machinist operator.

On the occasion the Charleston Gazette (morning) missed its first edition since 1887, when it was founded.

LIQUOR AD LAW IN CANADA.

The Canadian Senate has refused to pass a bill prohibiting the publication of liquor advertising in Canadian newspapers on the ground that any province has the power to pass legislation making it illegal, not only for papers in the province to publish such advertising, but for papers printed outside the province and containing liquor ads to circulate within the province.

CIRCULATORS IN HARTFORD.

NEW ENGLANDERS DISCUSS TIMELY TOPICS TO AID THEIR DEPARTMENTS.

Nineteen members of the New England Association of Circulation Managers attended the quarterly business session on November 8 and 9 at Hartford, Ct.

J. A. McNeil, president of the association, called the business session to order at the Chamber of Commerce Assembly Hall and read a letter from J. M. Annenberg, president of the New York State Circulation Manager's Association, regretting his inability to attend the meeting at Hartford and inviting members of the New England Association to attend the New York State meeting in Syracuse, N. Y., November 15.

It was voted to admit John M. Kerns of the Worcester Post and F. L. Nutting of the Brockton Times to membership in the New England Association.

The discussion program was:

"Distribution and promoting circulation through districts controlled by circulation departments," by J. P. Barry of the Providence (R. I.) Journal.

"Small city circulation—its value to the general advertiser and to what extent should newspapers co-operate," by Sidney Sibley of the Fitchburg (Mass.) Sentinel.

"The circulation problem met at the Ayer (Mass.) army cantonment," by George H. Reynolds of the New Bedford (Mass.) Standard.

"Abolishing the wholesale dealers and controlling the business from the office," Charles M. Schofield of the Worcester (Mass.) Gazette.

"College and preparatory school circulation," by Seth J. Moore of the Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

"How to hold up morning street sales in the winter," by H. R. Frickenhaus of the New Haven (Ct.) Journal-Courier.

"How to obtain the co-operation of newsboys in the running of a club organized for their benefit."

"Daily circulation—best methods of securing and retaining it in a small city."

Following each paper there was a general and animated discussion, the readers being bombarded with questions.

The complete papers of Messrs.

Sibley, Barry and Moore are presented following.

Mr. Reynolds said what has happened at the Ayer cantonment in the effort to supply the soldiers with their home town papers has been a long, sad story. Inadequate distribution facilities were encountered in handling the editions of forty or more newspapers going to the camp, the number excluding Boston papers.

But the problem has been partially and fairly satisfactorily solved, Mr. Reynolds said, by arrangements with the post exchange.

Charles M. Schofield declared the wholesale dealer has no control over his newsboys, he doesn't know just where all his subscribers live and if, by some oversight, the subscriber doesn't get his paper he consequently has to go without it. "The whole business should be controlled from the office," Mr. Schofield said, but to abolish the wholesale dealer is no easy task.

Following luncheon at the Hotel Heublein on Thursday, where special accommodations had been arranged in the rathskeller, the party inspected the plant of the Hartford Times.

Thursday night there was a banquet at the Hartford Club, the party being guests of the Hartford Times.

From 8 until 10 o'clock there was a continuation of discussion occasioned by the papers read at the business session.

The circulation managers remained in Hartford overnight, making their headquarters at the Hotel Bond, the meeting being scheduled to conclude yesterday afternoon.

The Courant's plant was also inspected Thursday.

Mr. Gleason of the Times addressed the circulators at the banquet meeting. The cover of the banquet menu contained a reproduction of the Hartford Times' front page in 1817 and today.

The next meeting will be the third week in January, at Boston. There will be one-day sessions in both June and October. The June meeting will be in Washington. The October meeting will be a pleasure trip only.

After the final session yesterday, the circulation men were entertained by the local newspaper men with an auto trip and luncheon.

GET NEARER TO THE READERS.

DISTRIBUTE AND PROMOTE THROUGH DISTRICTS IN CONTROL OF PAPER.

By JOSEPH P. BARRY.

Circulation Manager the Providence (R. I.) Journal and Evening Bulletin.

(Address delivered at New England Circulation Managers Association convention, Hartford, Ct., November 8-9.)

"Get as near to your readers as possible" is a good slogan for every circulation manager to follow, and the best way to accomplish this is by making the most direct delivery possible.

In the old days when circulation was looked upon as something that took care of itself publishers generally chose the course of easiest resistance and handed most of their circulation over to the middle-men, who generally bought the paper at a ridiculously low figure. These men sold to dealers, who in turn employed boys who did the real honest-to-God work by delivering the papers to the readers.

By this method of distribution the circulation department was relieved of all worry, because no matter how much the public kicked either at the policy of the paper or the unsatisfactory delivery, the shock was absorbed by the middle-men, who lost no sleep on that account.

Every circulation manager should know who his readers are and where they live, otherwise he cannot carry out any promotion work efficiently.

Suppose, for example, that an agent draws 1,000 papers daily, with which he supplies twenty sub-dealers who put out boys in various parts of the city; in this case the circulation department is really out of touch with the boys who make the deliveries and has to canvass at random for new circulation instead of being in a position to concentrate on the weak spots.

My experience has been that wholesalers' commissions generally far exceed the value of the services received, and if publishers who are still handling their circulation through commission agents were to figure it out, they would find that they could save money and give far better service by making their distribution through their own salaried employees.

The wholesaler is naturally out to make all he can, and consequently will avoid the places where the circulation is weak, while it is just such places that are in need of the best delivery.

We have cut out several exclusive agents in the past year, and in every case we have gained from 10 to 500 per cent in circulation; furthermore, we have got in close touch with the smaller dealers, many of whom turned out to be very competent and were more than willing to co-operate with us in going after new circulation.

We are gradually dividing our territory into districts, each of which will be controlled by an employee of the circulation department. Each district superintendent will have the names and addresses of the readers in his territory; he will also have the names of those (if any) who do not take one or all of our publications, and he will keep after them until they become readers.

At present there is a great deal of wasted energy occasioned by boys who own their own routes overlapping, and also on account of readers taking our morning paper from one boy, our evening paper from some one else, and our Sunday issue from a third.

In order to overcome this condition we have turned our circulation department into a kind of clearing house for routes, all of which must be sold through us.

In this way we divert the routes in the right direction, and by arranging for the exchange of customers between carriers, we are gradually getting entire control of the situation.

We are always on the look-out for competent men who are willing to devote all their time to selling papers, and when we find the right man we hope to build up a profitable business for him. It is such men as these that are most useful to us, as they are able to make a very good income from their routes and are in the business to stay.

NEW ENGLAND CIRCULATION MANAGERS IN HARTFORD, NOVEMBER 8-9.

CO-OPERATION IN SMALL CITIES

IN MATTER OF CIRCULATION AND THE NATIONAL ADVERTISERS.

By SIDNEY SIMLEY,
Circulation Manager the Fitchburg
(Mass.) Sentinel.

(Address before the New England Association of Circulation Managers, Hartford, Ct., November 8-9.)

The small city circulation, its value to the general advertiser and to what extent the newspapers should co-operate.

This is a far reaching proposition, not only to the publisher, but the general advertiser and the readers as well. It is, perhaps, more intimately connected with the advertising end of the publishing business than it is with the circulating, but in order to get full benefit of your circulation efforts you must take care of the connecting links.

No one can deny the value of magazine circulation, but to secure full value for an advertising campaign you must supplement it with the local daily in the small city; the magazine cannot localize its message, as it is built for the whole country, while the local daily brings the message home to the readers.

It reaches thousands that the magazine does not reach and, besides, it finds the place where the goods are on sale.

A good illustration of this occurred in Fitchburg a short time ago.

A gentleman saw the advertisement of a stove polish in a street car. It appeared to fill a want that the brands he had been using did not fill, so he determined to give it a trial; but upon inquiry no dealer was found that carried that particular brand and some of the dealers had never heard of the brand.

Had this advertiser taken the precaution to place an advertisement in one of the local dailies and placed the article on sale in one or more of the local stores, he would have made, at least, one sale, but as it was the advertising was wasted, as far as Fitchburg was concerned.

The total circulation of the local daily has no comparison to the magazine, but in the home field it has a much larger circulation and besides localizes the message, telling the names of the dealers who are carrying the article in stock.

How far should the local newspaper co-operate with the advertiser and in what manner?

It is a recognized fact that there should be co-operation between the newspaper and the national advertiser, but how shall it be done in order that it may be equitable?

First, let us take a look at the kinds that are being asked by many manufacturers.

We have been asked to go out and solicit orders for goods, holding out as a bait that an advertising contract will be made if we dispose of a certain amount of the goods to one or more parties.

The bait is held out to the dealer that his name will appear at the bottom of the advertising.

Other parties have sent blanks calling for a great variety of information among which was questions about what competing products were sold by the different dealers and which brand had the largest sale, some even going so far as to ask for the amount of their sales.

Once, in order to get the impression that this would make upon the dealer, I took one of these blanks to a dealer and asked him to fill it out. After a few minutes spent in looking it over he passed it back to me and said: "It is none of his business how much I have sold of other products, and I do not propose to give him any information about my private business."

I have no doubt but what every one of you receive requests almost every day for free readers, or your papers receive them if you do not see them. Long articles are mailed extolling the virtues of this or that article with a request that we publish same and send a copy of the paper. Some of these come from advertisers and some from non-advertisers.

It sometimes seems that these manufacturers and their agents are using every possible lever to get free publicity, but when you turn the thing around and ask them to contribute some of their product free, they never come across.

Now why should the publisher furnish space, time and labor free to these parties? They do not consider it good business for them to do it, then why should we?

There are ways that a publisher can and is warranted in co-operating with the advertiser in order to give him the greatest benefit to be derived from his advertising.

First give him a truthful statement and a full one about your circulation, about the city and its population, its industries, its merchants, introduce his salesmen to the best dealers and after the contract is signed, don't consider your work done, but look after his interests and see that he gets the service that is his due.

There is another way that you can benefit him, see to it that all advertising in your paper is of a class that will stand investigation. This will operate favorably upon your circulation also. Readers demand truthful statements in both reading and advertising.

The small city daily is altogether a different proposition from the metropolitan paper. In the large city you scarcely know your next door neighbor, but in the small city, in each neighborhood all know each other and the paper that pleases even one family is often brought to the attention of the neighbors and the circulation increases automatically if the paper is clean, new and interesting.

COLLEGE AND PREP CIRCULATION.

HOW NEWSPAPERS CAN CASH IN ON SPACE GIVEN FOR PUBLICITY.

By SETH J. MOORE,
Circulation Manager Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

(Address before the New England Association of Circulation Managers, Hartford, Ct., November 8-9.)

It was only recently that we began to give college and "prep" school circulation any special attention.

The matter was brought to our notice by a class in salesmanship which was organized at Kent's Hill Seminary by one of the professors, and he chose the Lewiston Journal as the newspaper which he would like to have his class represent, we co-operating and instituting a plan whereby out of a student body of less than 200 we received about fifty new subscriptions.

That we considered a good showing, bearing in mind the fact that most of the students live in dormitories and the papers are passed around.

I believe that circulation of this nature is usually a small item to most newspapers, the larger ones especially, but it has, nevertheless, many interesting and unique features.

There are three "prep" schools (Hebron Academy, Leavitt Institute and Kent's Hill Seminary) and three colleges (Bowdoin, Bates and Colby) located in our territory, and the University of Maine, at Orono, while not exactly in our territory, has a large number of students from central Maine. These schools and colleges are, of course, not large and do not begin to compare with the great universities and well known preparatory schools located in other New England cities.

Our method in going after this circulation is to take the matter up with the head of the school and ask him to recommend some young man who is working his way through, and who would like a chance to make a little extra money.

We then get in touch with the student recommended and go over the proposition with him.

We allow twenty-five per cent commission of all new business and ten per cent on all renewals.

In most cases subscriptions are for a period of four months, as this seems to be the length of time that appeals to the students the most. Several days before the subscriptions expire we send the agent a list of same and have him watch for renewals.

In the several schools already mentioned we have nearly always had a correspondent, and the selection of a good live correspondent is one of the important items of this work, as it is impossible to hold your subscriptions through the school year unless some real news matter concerning the various institutions is used from time to time, especially regarding sports.

It has been our experience that the larger number of subscriptions are secured from male students, due partly, no doubt, to the fact that nearly all young men follow the sporting news.

What was accomplished at Kent's Hill has already been stated. Several weeks ago I got in touch with a young man at Hebron Academy and in less than a week we received thirty-six new subscriptions and the total number from this school during the present year will doubtless be about seventy-five. This academy has an attendance of slightly over 200.

We are now working along the same lines at Leavitt Institute, but as the agent there has only been working a few days, the result is not known as yet.

Bates College is located in our own city of Lewiston and the Journal is delivered there at the dormitories by our regular carriers and for the most part paid for weekly. We have a student there who looks after the college news and who also takes orders for carrier delivery. Up to the present time we have not done a great deal of work with Bowdoin and Colby, although we do have some mail circulation in each place.

Probably our total school circulation is something over 200 daily at the present time, and will doubtless increase before winter is over. This is not a large amount, but it must be borne in mind that this circulation is not expensive and requires very little attention. Furthermore we find that in many instances on leaving schools students still continue to subscribe to the paper.

There is something else to be said regarding colleges and their connection with newspapers. There is an increasing tendency on the part of all colleges for more publicity, and it is probable that something could be done by taking the matter up with the committee of publicity within the college, and possibly better arrangements could be made through it than any other way, as there is no doubt but what the newspapers should have some remuneration if they publish even in part the vast amount of material submitted to them.

And in regard to this publicity which our colleges and universities are seeking, it may be said that they are going at the matter entirely wrong. They are simply sending out numbers of circulars, etc., which come to the desk of the editor and which invariably are thrown into the waste basket excepting when they come from institutions within our immediate neighborhood.

For instance, we endeavor to take care of our four Maine colleges, and, of course, each newspaper would be interested in taking care of the schools in their territory.

If some arrangement could be reached with the various committees on publicity whereby they could be induced to get away from the expensive habit of sending out circulars, etc., and get them to co-operate with the newspapers in establishing a distribution within the school, the result would be greater circulation for the news paper, and not only more publicity for the colleges, but publicity where it would do the most good, as the editors would then feel more like publishing material submitted to them.

"Keeping Everlastingly

The AUTHOR of ROB ROY

YOU may not care particularly for the length of Kenilworth, Ivanhoe or Rob Roy. Mention of The Lady of the Lake may bring back the long-gone days when you used to parse it laboriously at school. But SIR WALTER SCOTT, the man, was greater far than all his writings.

Sir Walter Scott was a prodigious worker. Once he started a task, he knew no rest until it was completed. Guy Mannering was written in six weeks.

When disaster overtook Scott in his printing venture, he simply redoubled his efforts and gave freely of his very life that every debt might be paid.

There is no more glorious work in all the world than the redemption of a failure—the charging back to the heights once won.

Advertising is not alone for new businesses or for businesses that have progressed far along the road to success. Not infrequently it is the revivifying force that transforms a temporary failure into a permanent success.

It is not an easy task nor one that can be finished in a month or a year. But granting that the business is worthy of development, advertising well done will make that development surer and quicker—"Keeping Everlastingly At It" will bring success ten times out of ten.

"Keeping Everlastingly At It Brings Success" has been the motto of Advertising Headquarters for nearly half a century.

The MIRACLE of the WIRELESS

IT was Heinrich Hertz who discovered that electrical waves do not pass through the air proper, but through the ether—"a strange, little-understood substance that pervades all space."

But it remained for a quiet Italian youth to harness these Hertzian waves and put them to work for the common good.

Of all inventors, none so young as Marconi—so persistent—so dependable—so willing to give other men a share in the credit. It is said of Marconi that he never made a statement that he was not able to prove.

More mature minds than his had been working for years on the same problem. But they lacked imagination and vision. Wireless telegraph in their hands remained simply a toy—a scientific plaything. Marconi alone saw its commercial possibilities.

Search the whole world over—in every line of human endeavor—and you come face to face with the same problem that confronted Marconi—the difficulty of linking theory and practice.

But it can be done. It is being done every day. Sooner or later some determined worker always finds a way.

The ability to dream—to look ahead—to visualize tomorrow in the sunlight and shadows of today—to "keep everlastingly at it" with willing hands and cheerful heart—such are the fundamentals of success in advertising and in every other business under the sun.

"Keeping Everlastingly At It Brings Success" will be the motto of Advertising Headquarters for the next half century.

The PIONEER in the WILDERNESS

DAVID LIVINGSTONE, as a little chap, had a passion for maps. He gloried in taking mental journeys to out-of-the-way places of the world. He resolved to become an explorer.

As a missionary and pioneer Livingstone did go to Africa. He opened up a country where an army of workers was to follow. No single African explorer has ever done so much for his country as Livingstone did during his 30 years' work.

But in paying the price he knew the torment of lingering starvation, the affliction of diseases which infested the poisoned air of matted jungles, and the attacks of wild beasts. He suffered from the treachery of savages, yet at the same time was thrilled at the thought of their human kinship. In the end he was worshipped for his goodness and his name became a legend among the native tribes—he was "The Very Great Doctor."

We, too, are pioneers and know from experience that "Keeping Everlastingly At It Brings Success." We have opened up trade ways for more business houses than we can count. And our clients get the benefit of our experience over 48 years of exploring.

"Keeping Everlastingly At It Brings Success"—particularly when the efforts are put forth in the right direction.

The SOUTH POLE

NO musk oxen, no reindeer, no polar bears, no arctic hares—no ermines—no permanent human life within 2300 miles! And there—two miles above sea level on a great elevated plateau—the South Pole.

Captain James Cook made the first attempt to reach it in 1772—Bellinghausen, Weddell, Sir James Ross, Bull, de Gerlache, Borchgrevink, Drygalski, Bruce, Charcot, Shackleton—all had sought it but in vain.

But on December 14, 1911—one hundred and thirty-nine years after the first attempt—Amundsen attained the cherished goal.

Only those who study the records of these polar expeditions can appreciate the hardships overcome—the uncertainty of return. Nowhere in history is there a greater tribute to determination and perseverance—qualities of the human race that are as the very foundation-stones of progress.

There are few physical dangers in business. Men risk their fortunes rather than their lives. But there, too, the richest prizes are won not alone by ability, but by the determination that transforms that ability into achievement.

Advertising will help you to establish supply depots along the way and put you within reach of sales-increases hitherto but dreamed of.

Day by day—sale by sale—"Keeping Everlastingly At It Brings Success."

FOR THE WEEK ENDING NOVEMBER 10, 1917

THE NEWS PRINT CONSUMER'S DAY IS COMING

The news print situation finally seems to be coming to a head.

Within a very short time two events have happened to greatly affect conditions, and two others are due within the next few days.

To start with the Senate committee on printing adopted a recent resolution to endeavor to have Congress take over all news print and pulp mills in the United States for the period of the war, when it convenes in December.

Following right on top of that, this week, has been the commissioning of a paper controller for Canada with full power to regulate distribution and prices of news print and to co-operate with the Federal Trade Commission of the United States in its proposition of joint governmental control by Canada and the United States.

Within a few days the indicted members of the News Print Manufacturers Association are to be brought to trial on charges of violating the anti-trust laws in conspiring to regulate the supply and prices of paper.

And on November 20 in Canada, the Government will set the price of news print for consumers in the Dominion—and the manufacturers must meet it.

With all these forces working toward one end, there is bound to be something big happening in the news print field soon.

And it appears certain that the break is going to be in favor of the long-suffering newspaper publisher.

WAR BUSINESS FEARS ARE NOT WELL FOUNDED

American advertisers who fear bad business conditions because of the war have no ground for this belief, according to William H. Rankin, noted advertising and business expert of Chicago, who says:

"There is no question in my mind that business conditions during the next two or three years, whether we continue to have war or not, will be very prosperous. Money will be spent for desirable necessity things. It will be spent more carefully, more wisely, more wisely than ever. Every dollar we have will be spent where the dollar counts most."

And backing him up, Mr Rankin has the following facts:

Our per capita of wealth is now

We have eighteen billions of liquid money in our bank deposits subject to checks.

Our trade balance in 1916 was over two billion in our favor. It's a bigger balance now.

We may all take a lesson from London in this respect, where business all has increased during the war.

At the annual meeting of Selfridge's, Ltd., department store, held in London last February, the earnings for the last five years were given as follows:

Year ending January 31, 1913, $320,000.

Year ending January 31, 1914, $650,000.

Year ending January 31, 1915, after six months of war, $670,000.

Year ending January 31, 1916, $750,000.

And in the year just ended, $1,125,000.

Harris, Ltd., another London department store, increased its earnings during 1916 to $200,000 over the previous year.

Hoar Brothers, Ltd., John Barker & Co., Dickens Jones and other stores selling general merchandise all report similar increase.

Sir George Paish, Great Britain's trade representative to the United States says:

"American merchants will enjoy greater sales than they ever expected to deal with. War means trade activity not depression. In America, war has been expected for some time and no dislocation of business whatever is likely to occur."

The Federal Reserve Board's monthly bulletin for November shows an upward trend of general business in all the Reserve Bank districts.

Kansas City says business averages twenty-five per cent over last year.

Boston alone gives a sign of less than the general advance by saying business is "hesitant, except for war orders."

Industries everywhere are busy, with factories running full time in most districts. In all districts but that of Boston, railroads are enjoying an increase of traffic. Money conditions are firm, with ample funds for legitimate requirements.

A TIP TO REAL ESTATE MEN.

Recently Henry Brody conducted the sale of 2,000 lots and thirty-one houses at auction for the banking department, State of New York, and every one of them was sold in such a manner as to cause Mr. Brody to make the following statement to the public:

"The sale was advertised only in the newspapers, without the addition of posters, illustrated booklets and circular letters, which may run into large sums of money, so that the officials of the Banking Department and myself are convinced that the newspaper is the most effective medium to announce such a sale."

"By continuing the advertising to newspapers I am sure sales of this character can be conducted at less expense than heretofore."

"In the advertisements there were no promises of future profits or transit facilities, but only the facts were mentioned, such as location, number of lots, date and place of sale, leaving the public to judge for themselves as to the future profits and adaptability of the land."

"I believe such methods of advertising to be the fairest, as the public have only themselves to blame if their investments do not materialize profitably, and avoid criticism of those conducting the sale, in such event."

NOTE AND COMMENT.

A number of those interested in baseball are advocating a shorter baseball season next year and many advocate discontinuing the baseball season during the war, which causes the A.N.P.A. paper committee to suggest:

"Certainly a shorter season, or dropping the game entirely during the war, would affect a wonderful saving in newsprint paper by reducing necessary extras and baseball editions."

"Undoubtedly, this will meet with very substantial opposition, but on forming a judgment on the situation, publishers should always bear in mind that it would mean a substantial saving in paper if it becomes effective, and where it can be arranged, should certainly be supported."

American cartoonists now have an opportunity to make a bid for fame in far away New Zealand, Wanganui, one of the principal New Zealand cities, has just completed a $100,000 art gallery, one wing of which will be devoted to a cartoon history of the war in Europe as depicted by American and allied cartoonists. C. G. Young, a New Zealand importer, is now in America gathering the drawings for the exhibit.

Drawings have been contributed by John T. McCutcheon, Valasek, Brown and other Chicago cartoonists, and New York artists will also be given an opportunity to be represented in the exhibit. Mr. Young may be reached in care of Carr, Irons & Co., exporters, First National Bank Building, New York.

HOW NATIONAL ADVERTISING SIMPLIFIES PHONE ORDERS.

Copyright—Mallory, Mitchell & Faust.

It is a matter of economy for the dealer to handle extensively advertised brands. Especially is this so in food products.

Economy of time results from what we have called consumer acceptance or the willingness of the consumer to accept advertised products without question. In as busy a place as the ordinary grocery store this is a factor of decided importance.

A very definite way in which this principle of consumer acceptance results in economy for the grocer is by increasing the amount of business done by telephone. In many groceries which feature advertised brands, as much as 75 per cent or 80 per cent of their total business is done by telephone.

This huge percentage is possible only because these stores handle the product which people have come to know through the advertising. People can ask for the product by the brand name—the advertised name and know just what they will receive.

It is not necessary to go to the store to see the article and receive the salesman's assurance that it is a quality product.

The consumer already knows the product through the advertising and has only to specify the brand name when ordering, which can be done as well by telephone as by a personal visit to the store.

Consider the advantage to the grocer.

It means that the work of putting up orders may be distributed more evenly throughout the day. It means that it is not necessary to have idle clerks during a large part of the day in order to have help enough for the rush hours which are always a feature of the ordinary grocery store. It means that these rush hours are abolished to a large extent. It means fewer clerks are necessary.

In short, the handling of advertised brands of food products means simplified selling—filling orders with well known and acceptable merchandise instead of high-pressure selling.

In September 1885, Woodward joined the Grand Rapids (Mich.) Telegram-Herald staff, rising in two years to the position of advertising manager. In 1890, he filled a brief engagement with the New York Tribune's year book. After an attempt at fiction writing, he drifted to South America, returning in the spring of 1892, to take up his old position in Grand Rapids.

Leaving the Herald (the name Telegram had been dropped) in 1901, Woodward dabbled in different propositions until 1907, when he went back to Grand Rapids with the Evening News, later going to the Muskegon (Mich.) Chronicle. For eight years he has been publishing the souvenir book for the state conventions of the Order of the United Commercial Travelers of America, and it was while at the convention of the U. C. T., last year, in Traverse City, Mich., that he became advertising manager of the Record-Eagle of that city and remained there until last February.

In August of this year, Mr. Woodward took charge of the advertising for the News-Advocate, succeeding Lester C. Baidorff, who joined Uncle Sam's forces at Camp Custer.

CONFERENCE WILL DISCUSS FINANCIAL ADS.

The Investment Bankers' Association, which will meet in Baltimore November 12 to 14 is preparing, as a principal object of its meeting, to take active steps looking to prevention, if possible, of the so-called "wild-cat investment" advertising.

The association will seek the co-operation of bankers, advertising agencies and newspapers in the campaign.

STAFF CHANGES.

G. B. Heath has resigned as editor of the Tower (Minn.) Weekly News. Frank Burgess is now sole owner and editor of the News.

Charles Ling, who recently left the Hannibal (Mo.) Courier-Post to become a reporter on the Quincy (Ill.) Whig, has been made city editor of that paper.

Charles Sawday is a recent acquisition to the reporting staff of the Olean (N. Y.) Times.

Miss Mildred Fitzpatrick is assisting on the social page of the Olean (N. Y.) Times.

W. G. Mattox, Ellis Jones and Ben H. Serkowitz have joined the Omaha (Neb.) Daily News as reporters.

"Jack" Wilson, formerly of the Cleveland (Ohio) Leader, is now sports editor of the Omaha (Neb.) News.

J. W. Heskett, for the duration of the war, will look after the duties of Frank Trew, advertising manager of the Hannibal (Mo.) Journal, who is now at Camp Zachary Taylor, Louisville, Ky., in the hospital corps.

Wyatt Brandon, for seven years a reporter on the Springfield (Mo.) Leader, is on the Little Rock (Ark.) Democrat.

Omar Hite, of the Little Rock (Ark.) Gazette and later with the St. Louis Republic, is making his bow in New York newspaper row.

C. A. Vane, of the Memphis (Tenn.) Commercial-Appeal and previously managing editor of the Little Rock (Ark.) Democrat, is now with the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Miss Jessie De Renobe is a new reporter for the Kansas City (Kan.) Republic.

Floyd J. Miller of the copy desk of the Indianapolis News goes with the Detroit News on November 12. Mr. Miller for a time handled all the war copy on the News, but more recently has been at Camp Zachary Taylor, where the Indiana men drafted for the National Army are in training, as special correspondent for the Indianapolis News.

Harry E. Hammond, editor and manager of the Vermontville (Mich.) Echo, has resigned to enter another line of business. His successor has not been appointed.

George H. Clark, formerly manager of the hotel department of the Christian Science Monitor, Boston, has gone into the coffee business as president of the new firm of Clark & MacKusick.

Hugh A. O'Donnell, at one time manager of the Philadelphia Press and later publisher of the New Orleans American, is now on the advertising department staff of the New York Times.

SAYS ZIMMERMANN WAS LE JOURNAL PUBLISHER.

To the mass of material brought out in connection with the investigation into the circumstances surrounding the purchase of Le Journal, of Paris, originating with the Bolo Pacha case, the correspondent of the Matin at Schaffhausen, Switzerland, made a contribution this week. The $2,000,000 which Arthur Schoeller, of a Zurich textile firm, is alleged to have advanced to Pierre Lenoir, formerly employe of the censorship bureau and now under arrest charged with trading with the enemy for the purpose of buying Le Journal, came neither from the personal fortune nor the business of Schoeller, the correspondent says he is able to certify. Neither Schoeller's personal nor business accounts show a trace of such a disbursement, the correspondent declares.

It is the belief in Zurich, the dispatch adds, that Schoeller was an intermediary for Dr. Alfred Zimmermann, then German Under Secretary of Foreign Affairs, as Dr. Zimmermann is a personal friend of the Schoeller family.

Previous newspaper dispatches from Zurich had represented Schoeller as admitting that the money he advanced to Lenoir was of German origin and intended to forward German economic interests for the after war campaign.

PERSONAL REPRESENTATIVE OF KANSAS CITY POST.

George W. Preston, until recently for five years advertising manager of the Omaha Bee, is now associated with the Kansas City (Mo.) Post as the publisher's personal representative.

At present Mr. Preston is on a business tour through the East making the personal acquaintance of advertising space buyers and bringing them into closer touch with the Post.

Mr. Preston was in New York this week renewing acquaintances and explaining to advertisers that "Kansas City is no longer a one-newspaper city—that the Post has to be a very influential factor there and that they cannot afford to not use it in covering the territory."

Mr. Preston says the Post now has 145,000 circulation and goes into 80,000 homes every day, which is a growth from 18,000 circulation that the Post had when Messrs. Tammam & Bonfils bought it (as the World) a few years ago.

Mr. Preston has his headquarters in Detroit and is covering the Eastern territory only in an educational campaign. He is not interfering in any way with the national advertising representatives of the Post—Cone, Lorenzen & Woodman—who solicit all advertising.

Besides his connection with the Omaha Bee, Mr. Preston was formerly advertising manager of the Detroit Journal and business manager of the Duluth News-Tribune.

A THIRTEEN-CENT STAMP.

The Post Office Department is planning to issue a thirteen-cent postage stamp for registered and special delivery letters. Heretofore a twelve-cent stamp had been in use, but the increase in postage makes necessary the printing of a new denomination.

The stamp will bear the head of Franklin and be of the size and border design of the current issues above seven cents. The color has not been selected.

Service Banners

Size 15x19 inches. Printed in four colors on heavy enameled stock. Shows large picture of the American flag in colors, with "Our National Anthem" and with special printing in bold type at the bottom.

"A Man From This House Is Fighting For His Country."

Can be given free or offered on coupon plan for five cents. Price $35 per thousand. Many thousands are being used. This banner should be in every home. A custom in other countries; now being adopted here.

NEW YORKERS TO HOLD MEETING.

CIRCULATION MEN WILL BE IN SYRACUSE NEXT WEEK.

There will be no lack of timely topics and interesting discussions at the quarterly meeting of the New York Circulation Managers Association, to be held at the Onondaga Hotel in Syracuse, on November 15.

Papers and discussions announced include:

"What the circulation members gained by journeying to Atlanta," by James McKernan of the New York Evening World.

"The best plan for encouraging independent carriers and country agents to secure new business," by Charles E. Blower of the Binghamton Press.

"Inefficient distribution of mail. How can we improve it?" by G. N. Therrien of the Buffalo News.

"The best plan to stimulate circulation on rural routes and in small towns that receive papers by mail, by an evening newspaper with strong competition in the morning field," by M. A. Miner of the Utica Observer.

"Will the drawing of newsboys into other lines through the shortage of help caused by the draft become a serious menace to newspapers?" by R. D. M. Decker of the Albany Knickerbocker Press.

"Branch offices in towns of 5,000 to 50,000 population and value of localized editions," by W. C. Hixson of the Syracuse Post-Standard.

Topics for general discussion will be:

"Is the bulletin service of value to circulation? If so, what is the best way to give it?"

"How much credit should a newspaper extend to out-of-town dealers? a—Should they pay in advance or make a deposit large enough to cover a certain amount of business? b—How can a circulation manager on a small daily best enforce payments?"

"The circulation problem met at Army camps."

"Best system of handling military mail."

"Experiences of circulation managers with newsboys' clubs or local newsboys' associations."

The discussions will be followed by an open meeting for questions and answers.

At the close of the morning session a luncheon will be tendered the members by the Syracuse publishers at the Onondaga Hotel.

A tour of three of Syracuse's largest newspaper offices has been arranged for the circulators.

The officers of the association extend the following welcome through the columns of THE FOURTH ESTATE to all circulation managers to attend their meeting:

"You will be welcome and an assurance is given you of a very interesting meeting and a day well spent. The Syracuse members are planning on showing you three handsome newspaper plants, and a good time after the business hours."

"Every circulation manager should attend this meeting, and if you are not now enrolled in this fine organization, come to Syracuse, where the members will all greet you. Join us in making this association one of the liveliest of its kind in the country. Topics of vital interest to every circulation manager will be discussed and if you have any circulation ills and need good remedies, these state meetings will be a doctor for you."

"You cannot afford to stay away from this meeting, so arrange your plans and be on hand Thursday morning, November 15."

"Every circulation manager is welcome."

The object of the New York State Circulation Managers Association, as stated in the by-laws, is "the mutual enlightenment of its members and the furtherance of the best interests of the circulation departments of the newspapers with which they are connected."

J. M. Annenberg of the Schenectady Union-Star is president of the organization; James McKernan of the New York World is vice-president; J. O. Taft of the Binghamton Republican-Herald, secretary-treasurer; William Henry of the New York American and A. J. Gerber of the Syracuse Journal, directors for two years; R. D. M. Decker of the Albany Knickerbocker-Press and M. D. Treble of the Buffalo Times, directors for one year.

NEWS NOTES OF CIRCULATORS.

W. E. McTaggart has resigned the position of circulation manager of the Grain Growers' Guide, Winnipeg, Man., to enter Y. M. C. A. military work. Despite the fact that he has been rejected by the army medical board for service, he expects to "get across" any way.

Before going with the Grain Growers' Guide, Mr. McTaggart was fruit markets commissioner with the British Columbia government and had offices in Calgary, from which he conducted the advertising campaigns of the British Columbia fruit growers during 1915 and 1916.

Mr. McTaggart had his early training on the Vancouver (B. C.) Province, having been connected with the newspaper since his school days. He

The Columbus (Ohio) State Journal has raised the price of its Sunday edition to six cents.

The Phoenix (Ariz.) Gazette is offering prizes for the carrier, newsboy or agent who secures the most new subscribers between November 1 and December 15, with a 20-cent bonus for each new order obtained. First prize is a $45 bicycle.

A commission of 25 cents will be paid to every entrant who fails to win one of the prizes.

Although a business manager and not a circulation manager, J. R. Waters of the Birmingham (Ala.) Ledger, who attended the convention of the I.C.M.A. at Atlanta, declares that he was well paid for his time and expense.

"I have felt," he said to THE FOURTH ESTATE, "and doubtless many others have felt, that these annual meetings were largely annual outings, but the Atlanta meeting completely corrected this false idea. I have never attended a gathering which devoted more hours a day to serious business. The papers and discussions were illuminating and helpful and no publisher is justified in not arranging for his circulation manager to attend."

Two distinct departments are now handling the circulation of the Philadelphia Public and Evening Ledgers.

Frank A. Clark, whose energy and ability have been largely responsible for the record of the Evening Ledger, will be able under the new arrangement to devote his entire attention to its further development.

The circulation management of the Public Ledger, daily and Sunday, has been placed in the hands of E. S. Dobson, who was for ten years circulation manager of the Detroit News, one of the largest and most successful papers of the Middle West. Mr. Dobson is a director of the International Association of Circulation Managers and is widely known for his sound, progressive circulation-building methods.

The Westfield (N. J.) Leader is another weekly that has raised its rate to $2.

The San Angelo (Tex.) Standard has established a semi-monthly "Junior" for its carriers, office employees and the entire circulation organization. H. Nogel is the editor and circulation manager. A "Spoudulix" contest has been started in which the carriers turning in the most new subscriptions can win some Christmas money. The prizes are in cash and range from $5 to $1.

Collecting delinquent subscriptions was the first experience in circulation work of C. O. Ferguson, the new circulation manager of the Class Journal Company publications. This was about fifteen years ago, on the Wood-Worker, Indianapolis. Mr. Ferguson later became circulation manager of the Wood-Worker and was afterwards made advertising manager of another paper bought out by the same publishers.

The Motor Age, Chicago, called him in October 1912 as its circulation manager. He was there only two years when he broke into the automobile trade and for another two years sold tires, break-lining and other automobile accessories. In August of this year he came to New York to become associated with the Class Journal Company.

R. H. Copeland is in charge of the Augusta (Mont.) News, a new publication.

papers. This was announced by Nels M. Hekanson, manager of the savings department of the State Bank of Chicago, in charge of the foreign language department of the Liberty Loan executive committee.

"Of the forty nationalities contributing, the Germanic participation was among the largest," said Mr. Hekanson. Others included Bohemians, Greeks, Lithuanians, Russians, Bulgars, Egyptians, Roumanians, Japanese, Turks, Serbians, Finns, French, Portuguese, Hungarians, Austrians, Chinese, Spaniards, Italians, English, Welsh, Irish, Moldavians, Scotchmen, Swiss, Belgians, Norse, Swedes, Danish, East Indians, Kurds, Armenians, African negroes, Arabians, Australians, Hollanders, South and Central Americans."

Incomplete returns through the public schools show a total in excess of $1,500,000. The total on the first issue was $768,000.

Loop banks took more than $146,000,500 of the city's total.

The total subscriptions taken by and through loop banks were 148,221, out of a total of 239,500 in Chicago proper.

As in nearly every advertising effort there was some doubt expressed at first as to the value of newspaper advertising to help sell Chicago's quota of Liberty Bonds.

However, bankers, business men, the bond salesmen and the members of the Liberty Loan committee are unanimous in their opinion that advertising helped very materially to make it possible for Chicago to exceed its maximum quota—as is shown by the following letter addressed to William H. Rankin by Charles H. Schweppe, director of publicity, Seventh Federal Reserve District.

"I want you to know that it was a pleasure to be associated with you in the recent Liberty Loan campaign. Your advice and counsel in more ways than one were especially helpful to me. Your energy and enthusiasm helped to make the advertising campaign a success. H. L. Stuart, sales director of the Liberty Loan for our district, was a 'doubting Thomas' about the good an extensive advertising campaign would do in Chicago and I am glad to write he has now changed his mind and feels the advertisements were of material help."

Letters telling of the great success of the advertising campaigns have been received from all parts of the country.

WHAT THE NEWSPAPERS DID IN WASHINGTON.

Fleming Newbold, business manager of the Washington Evening Star, came forward with another exhibit of the power of newspaper advertising—taken from the Liberty Loan success in the District of Columbia.

Mr. Newbold says that only 65/1000 of one per cent was the percentage of the cost of advertising in the Liberty Loan campaign in which $23,050,550 worth of bonds was sold. Washington's maximum allotment was $20,000,000, and this was exceeded by $3,050,550.

The number of Washington subscribers to the second Liberty Loan was 84,388.

The total amount spent for advertising was $15,000.

Mr. Newbold says:

"Newspaper advertising is the dynamic force that helped the bankers and business men of Washington make the second Liberty Loan a tremendous success. This was only made possible by the wonderful work done by the Liberty Loan committee of Washington and the hundred or more volunteer speakers and workers drawn from Washington's splendid citizens."

"The Bankers' Association of the District of Columbia appropriated $5,000 to cover the expenses of the campaign—almost this entire amount was spent in newspaper advertising in co-operation with local business men in placing full-page advertisements in the Washington newspapers. The total amount spent in this way in newspaper advertising from October 10 to 25 was about $15,000."

"Gardner Johnson of the Gardner Johnson Advertisers' Service Bureau in the Star Building had charge of the newspaper campaign for the local committee. Large credit is also due the William H. Rankin Advertising Agency of Chicago and New York for splendid suggestions and co-operation in furnishing designs and material."

Mr. Newbold has reproduced the newspaper advertisements used for the Liberty Loan in Washington as evidence of newspaper advertising "pulling power" and will send them to anybody interested.

NEWARK FREIE ZEITUNG PUBLISHER ARRESTED.

Hans von Hundelshausen, president of the Washington Publishing Company, publisher of the New Jersey Freie Zeitung in Newark, was arrested on November 1, charged with making and conveying false reports to promote the success of the enemies of the United States.

The alleged offense was committed before Mr. Hundelshausen and the Washington Company took over the Freie Zeitung. He was a member of the old editorial staff. Although not arrested with the publishers and other editors of the newspaper at the time of the raid by Federal officers some weeks ago, he was jointly indicted with them by the United States Grand Jury in Trenton on October 31.

FINK WITH N. Y. HERALD.

Harold ("Hal") Fink, well known in the newspaper field, has been appointed advertising manager of the New York Herald. Until a few months ago, Mr. Fink was advertising manager of the New York Evening Mail and at other times previously he occupied executive positions with the Omaha News, the Sioux City News and the Indianapolis Sun.

IMPORTANT LONG ISLAND WEEKLY IS SOLD.

James E. Stiles of Freeport, N. Y., owner and editor of the Nassau Post, the official county newspaper, which is published from that village, has purchased the South Side Observer of Rockville Centre. He will take over the active management of the newspaper on December 20.

The South Side Observer is one of the oldest newspapers on Long Island and second oldest in the county. It was established by John H. Reed, in June, 1865, as the Picket. The name was changed to the South Side Observer in 1870, when it was purchased by George Wallace.

In the purchase of the Observer job plant and business, Mr. Stiles says he has secured control of one of the most profitable and widely patronized printing organizations in the county.

Mr. Stiles is making definite plans relative to future publication of both the newspapers on a much more substantial basis, than in the past.

George Wallace, the retiring owner, will continue as contributing editor to the South Side Observer.

George I. Buergi has leased the Plover (Mont.) Herald to Frank C. Bunn.

employers practically no newspapers have been published in Finland since July 1. The printers are demanding an advance in wages of no less than 140 per cent, but the employers decline to grant more than 80 per cent.

"Conditions in the pulp and paper industries are, of course, affected by the general situation, but hopes are entertained that the country's difficulties will be surmounted without ruin to Finland's industrial and commercial life."

ENGLAND.

During September small quantities of Swedish chemical wood pulp arrived in England, but the quantity is insignificant in comparison with the expectation. The World's Paper Trade Review circularized the paper makers in an effort to collect data on the actual arrivals of Swedish pulp, and while many of the replies were to the effect that arrivals were daily expected, few had received consignments of over fifty or seventy-five tons.

Most of this wood pulp had been purchased in Sweden before the embargo had been put into effect, and the market prices were not affected during the first of the month.

British paper makers who were free to purchase in the open caused a livening of the chemical wood pulp market, but this was of short duration, as a shadow was thrown on the renewal of operations between England and Sweden because of the Argentine affair, and prices again reacted to normal.

Aside from the reaction, the World's Paper Trade Review, London, England, states that available shipping space is still hard to find and that it is difficult to arrange insurances. Licenses, furthermore, are pretty well used up.

The World's Paper Trade Review explains the situation excellently in the following article:

"Licenses to import have been freely drawn upon by British paper makers, with the result that operations must necessarily be on a restricted scale until the renewal of licenses at the commencement of March, 1918. Present regulations provide for the importation during the twelve months commencing March 1, 1917, of one-half of the weight of paper-making materials imported in the previous year.

The arrivals of chemical wood-pulp show a decrease of only 6.3 per cent, which means a drastic curtailment in supplies during the next half-year.

The imports of chemical wood pulp more closely approximate to the official regulations, the decrease during the last half-year being forty-six per cent. Probably the scarcity of licenses to cover future imports of chemical wood pulp is largely responsible for the present chaotic state of the market.

Prices, for instance, show considerable variation, and the tendency is extremely weak. The arrivals of Swedish chemical pulp may also have an important bearing on the situation, as licenses must be used that would otherwise cover Norwegian, American and Canadian shipments.

Paper makers who entered into contracts for Swedish chemicals are anxious to get deliveries, and have agreed to pay extra costs. It is evident that plenty of pulp is on offer, but difficult to place. Consequently quotations are unstable.

Paper prices show signs of hardening, states the World's Paper Trade Review, and higher levels are expected. News print is particularly in demand, and on this question and that of quality the Review states:

"The scarcity of paper making material is hardly so evident at the present time as is the general deterioration in quality. The news print, in many cases, is uncommonly bad, so poor that much dexterity is required in order to open out the four-page sheet without splitting it in the fold. Many of our weekly magazines, which in happier days were issued on imitation art paper, are now appearing on news print, while those which were on coated art are now, with few exceptions, published on ordinary smooth printing, for the saving of cost."

The state railways are prohibited from transporting paper and cardboard, so after the manufacture of paper has finally been accomplished, the difficulty of moving it has to be faced. The situation is serious but the Swedish manufacturers seem to feel that their markets are safe because other countries are experiencing similar difficulties.

NEWS OF THE AD AGENCIES.

Clarence N. Cook, an authority on the value and possibilities of newspaper advertising, has become a member of the promotion department of the Chappelow Advertising Company, St. Louis. He recently resigned as advertising manager of the Philadelphia Evening Telegraph.

Mr. Cook enters advertising agency work with a keen sense of advertising values and a clear understanding of merchandising problems. His advertising career covers a period of about eighteen years and he was associated with many notable advertising successes in the newspapers of New York, Boston and other large cities.

Mr. Cook first went to work on the Augusta (Ga.) Evening Herald. Later he filled the position of advertising manager on the old Boston Traveler, the New Orleans Picayune and other dailies. On the two occasions he was a member of the advertising staff of the New York Times, and at one time he owned and edited a weekly publication in Walden, N. Y.

Thornton Purkis, of J. J. Gibbons, Ltd., Toronto, has executive charge of the advertising of the Canadian Government's national committee on food resources.

The Swisher Advertising Service, Mears Building, Scranton, Pa., has been recognized by the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

Robert B. Houston, whose new association with the Charles H. Touzalin Agency, Chicago, was announced in THE FOURTH ESTATE last week, has been elected to the office of vice-president and will have charge of sales and promotion.

F. Pratt Kuhn, whose appointment as Winnipeg manager of A. McKim, Ltd., of Montreal, has been noted in THE FOURTH ESTATE, in 1912 went to the McKim Agency to take over the Eastern end of the business from Kingston to the Atlantic Coast.

Having an aptitude for seeing markets which apparently were non-existent, Mr. Kuhn has been creating new advertising campaigns in Canada, the latest being Catelli's Milk Macaroni, which is now a standard brand from coast to coast, after a year's hard work.

After five years in the Montreal office, Mr. Kuhn has been transferred to the Western branch at Winnipeg as manager controlling the territory from Fort William, Ont., to Victoria, B. C. Mr. Kuhn is personally known to Canadian publishers from coast to coast through trips made for clients.

Gornay, Inc., is a new advertising agency in New York, specializing in merchandising council, art, layout, design and appraisal of media.

W. M. Sebring, who for the past three years has been New York State representative for Vogue and is well known in magazine circles, is president of the new corporation. Mr. Sebring, in his association with Vogue, has enjoyed an unusually broad experience in many lines of advertising of widely divergent character and also has a considerable understanding and experience in merchandising and general business tactics.

Miss L. Z. Guck, vice-president, for the past ten years has been in charge of the advertising for J. M. Gidding & Co., both in New York and the Middle West. She has done some very creditable work. Her intensive training, together with merchandise knowledge, equips her to handle advertising appealing to women.

The Gornay Agency enjoys an unusually choice location, at 605 Fifth avenue, between 48th and 49th streets.

F. W. Ayer, the well known advertising agent, was a speaker at a recent luncheon in Hotel Emerson, Baltimore, for the Y. M. C. A. war work.

Ben Weiner, for many years associated with the Chicago Apparel Gazette and other Fairchild publications has resigned to assume a position with the L. S. Goldsmith Advertising Agency of New York. Mr. Weiner will conduct a sales research department for the agency.

J. K. Martin, for four years connected with the Ottawa (Kan.) Herald, has leased the Kidder (Kan.) Free Press.

The Hicksville (N. Y.) Courier, published weekly by the Weiner Press, made its first appearance on October 27.

R. T. Wood is now publishing the Northome (Minn.) Record, with J. E. Cowan as manager.

M. E. Shafter has sold the Harrisburg (Neb.) Banner County News to R. D. Wilson.

The farmers of Mountrail County, N. D., are organizing a stock company for the purpose of establishing a newspaper in Stanley.

AD FOLKS' NEWS.

Facts, a booklet containing a complete analysis of the automobile, tire and accessory situation in Western Canada, has been issued again by Motor in Canada, of Winnipeg, Man., through T. L. Middleton, its advertising manager.

H. B. Martin, whose appointment as advertising manager of the Duffy-Powers Company, a Rochester (N. Y.) department store, was announced in THE FOURTH ESTATE last week, has spent his entire business life in department store work and has been with the Duffy-Powers Company as display manager for the past four years.

S. E. Snyder has resigned his position as director of publicity of the Balboa Amusement Producing Company, Long Beach, Cal.

After hearing F. M. Sackett, the Federal Food Administrator for Kentucky, outline the plans and purposes of the Administration conservation movement, members of the Advertising Club of Louisville unanimously pledged their households for co-operation in the campaign and placed their own services at the disposal of Mr. Sackett, who probably will detail many of the ad men for local speaking engagements in the interest of the waste-elimination movement.

Although W. E. Meyers, of the promotion department of the Toledo (Ohio) Blade, was scheduled to speak about Liberty Bonds before the members of the Toledo Ad Club at one of their regular noon-time luncheons, he soon made it apparent that his real purpose was to sell Liberty Bonds. And he did. Although each member of the club had already subscribed, Mr. Meyers succeeded in convincing them to give additional support to the loan.

Lewis Knitting Company, Janesville, Wis., is said to have completed plans for an ambitious newspaper advertising campaign. Copy will be placed in newspapers in Chicago, Minneapolis, Omaha, Kansas City, Cleveland, Indianapolis, San Francisco, Portland, Rochester, Buffalo, Los Angeles and Pittsburg.

Theodore E. Ash, advertising expert of Philadelphia, is a firm believer in newspaper advertising to boost his own business as well as those of others. He is running an unusual series of advertisements called the "Romances of Advertising" in the Chicago Tribune, the New York Evening Mail, Washington Times, Philadelphia Record and other big newspapers throughout the country.

The Minnesota advertising clubs will hold a two-day meeting in St. Paul the latter part of January.

The San Francisco Advertising Club, in conjunction with other San Francisco organizations, gave a luncheon in honor of Representatives Allan Treadway of Massachusetts and Senator William H. King of Utah, on October 31. Samuel P. Johnson, president of the ad club presided.

"I don't see any necessity for an advertising club in California," said Senator King in the course of his address, "for you are a great people and you know it."

A jolly time there was at the Cleveland Advertising Club on election night. The affair was open house, the only one of its kind during the year at the club.

Arrangements were made to have the Western Union Telegraph Company furnish returns. In addition there were motion pictures, refreshments, dancing and other entertainment.

Harry C. Spillman, manager of the school department of the Remington Typewriter Company, spoke on "The ad-man as a standard bearer" at the meeting of the advertising club on November 7.

Plans are being furthered for a luncheon to General Glenn, the commander of the troops at Chillicothe, Ohio, on November 24. The members of the camp football team will also attend, prior to the contest with the Western Reserve University and the Case School of Applied Science. The ad club is handling the publicity for the game.

"If your club will see to it that the 'dirty linen' in advertising is cleaned up in Columbus, the national organization will see to it that no 'dirty linen' in an advertising way is sent into your city." This was the promise made the members of the Columbus (Ohio) Advertising Club by Richard H. Lee of the New York Tribune on November 5.

Mr. Lee, in a graphic manner, told of the way in which they "got the goods on" the fake advertisers. He said it was the duty of every member of the club to support the vigilance committee in cleaning up untruthful advertising. He said there were ample laws to cover the case, if they were enforced energetically.

Arthur Hawxhurst, for many years advertising manager of Marshall Field & Co., Chicago, has resigned. He has been connected with Marshall Field & Co. for forty-seven years.

The San Francisco Advertising Club is just concluding a very successful "old shoe" campaign. Shoes from all over the state were collected by the club to be shipped to Europe for distribution among the poor of France and Belgium.

James H. Pickens of Northwestern University addressed the members of the Chicago Advertising Association last week on "The Psychology of Advertising."

The Advertisers Club of Cincinnati reports that its average meeting attendance has increased 30 to 150 per cent over last year, and its splendid season program explains why.

W. C. Reinhold of the Chicago Evening American addressed the Cincinnati ad men on October 3.

The club held a war-time luncheon on October 10, at which the October 17 was "Dedication Day" for the club. The members dedicated their service flag containing twelve stars and the official stars and stripes. The parents of members with the colors were guests, as were those members who had a son or daughter in their country's service. Professor Edward K. Armstrong, an advertising man now in service, spoke on "Practical psychology in advertising."

At the "Liberty Day" meeting, on October 24, Marguerite Clark, the famous Cincinnati movie "star," was the guest of the advertising men. Miss Clark personally took bond subscriptions from every member of the club, raising nearly a quarter of a million. The speaker of the day was C. A. Brownell of the Ford Motor Car Company, Detroit.

Frank B. White of the Agricultural Publishers Association spoke before the men on October 31, at their Halloween meeting. At this meeting a twenty-minute show was given by the members.

The eighth anniversary celebration of the Advertising Club of Baltimore was held on the roof garden of Hotel Emerson. On the program were Miss May Thompson and Carl McCullough from the You're in Love Company.

The monthly dinner of the Sphinx Club, of New York, will be held at the Waldorf-Astoria on November 13.

The house committee of the New York Ad Club has made Ladies Day (Saturday) more attractive by instituting an afternoon tea, which will consist of tea, sandwiches and cakes served from 3 to 6 p.m.

Kenneth C. Beaton, writer of "Ye Towne Gossip," a unique feature appearing daily in the New York American, talked before the club on Thursday about "Just folks."

The New York club is delighted with the success of its "Halloween Jamboree." The house accommodations were taxed to their utmost.

Wilbur D. Nesbit, of the William H. Rankin Advertising Company, Chicago, is now on an extended business visit to Portland, Seattle and other Northwestern cities.

The William H. Rankin Advertising Company, Chicago, has ten men in various branches of national service—some of them being already in France.

The W. D. McJunkin Agency, Chicago, has four men in military service.

The business of the O'Shaughnessy Advertising Agency, Chicago, has been absorbed by the Dooley-Brennan Company of the same city. The transfer of the accounts came as a result of the election of James O'Shaughnessy, president of the agency, as executive secretary of the Association of American Advertising Agents with offices in New York.

The agency formerly known as Vanderhoof, Condict and Comrie, with offices in the Marquette Building, Chicago, is now known as Vanderhoof & Co. Frank Comrie, formerly of the firm is now associated with the Thielecke Advertising Company, Chicago.

Wallace R. Condict, formerly treasurer, is now engaged in the real estate business with offices adjoining the Vanderhoof offices.

Critchfield & Co., Chicago, is displaying a service flag with fifteen stars.

The William H. Rankin Company, Chicago, having met with encouraging success in the promotion of a "Buy Your Car Now" week of co-operative automobile advertising, is now carrying a similar campaign in behalf of the motor truck industry. Copy prepared in the Rankin agency has been appearing in various newspapers throughout the country. The work has been handled by C. E. Walberg, manager of the promotion department of the Rankin company.

Roy Quinlan has been made vice-president of the W. D. McJunkin Advertising Agency, Chicago.

What advertising has done to help win the war and what it can further do and how, will be a chief topic for discussion by leading advertising men of the United States and Canada at a conference to be held in Indianapolis, the headquarters of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, November 12 and 13.

In addition to members of the executive committee of the association, presidents and other officers of local advertising clubs, as well as other advertising associations, affiliated with the Associated Advertising Clubs, will attend the meeting. Representatives of almost 200 organizations of this kind have been invited to the conference, which, in addition to discussing war matters, will take up numerous association affairs.

INTRODUCING AD FOLKS.

Alvin A. Silberman, who is now in charge of the new promotion department of the L. S. Goldsmith Agency, has been in the advertising field since his graduation from college in 1911, when he assumed charge of publicity and sales for the Loxton Manufacturing Company of Baltimore, maker of "Lox-it-on" Athletic Underwear.

He came to New York in February, 1916, to enter the agency field. As general manager of the Midas

ALVIN A. SILBERMAN.

System, he handled the publicity affairs of some of the leading manufacturers in the apparel-textile industries.

On November 1 of this year, he became identified with the L. S. Goldsmith Agency, an organization handling textile and apparel advertising exclusively.

Here is A. J. Massie, who has just established the A. J. Massie, Ltd., general advertising agency in Winnipeg, Man.

Mr. Massie has offices in the Merchants Bank Building and reports he is placing quite a number of well known Western accounts.

Before going to Winnipeg, Mr. Massie was for five years with the Toronto Globe, but the West called him in 1907 and until 1913 he was with the Winnipeg Telegram. In that year he went with the Free Press and acted as advertising manager prior to 1915, when he joined the McKim Winnipeg office.

PRAISE FOR LIBERTY LOAN ADVERTISING MEN.

The New York Herald says:

"No feature of the Liberty Loan campaign in New York has been more generally commended than the work done by the advertising committee, which has prepared and distributed the advertisements for the newspapers of this district and the greater part of the country.

"The quality of the work being such that it received nationwide attention and approval the New York committee was asked to send its advertisements to section after section, until the committee actually supplied the country with its newspaper propaganda for the loan.

"Collin Armstrong, chairman of the National Advisory Board, arranged the details of the advertisement preparation and distribution, with the assistance of J. I. Clark of the Liberty Loan committee, and when the work was ready for operation the entire working out of the sub-committee's arrangements was put in the hands of W. T. Mullally, vice-chairman of the National Advertising Advisory Board and one of the best known advertising executives in the country.

"From the beginning of the campaign Mr. Mullally found complete cooperation on the part of the leaders in advertising copy writing, advertising distribution and advertising printing, and, with the assistance of men whose aggregate salaries amount to many millions annually, the great advertising campaign was put under way. In the opinion of the loan executives it was the most successful feat of its kind in the history of American advertising."

Fred J. Heffries is publishing the Dogden (N. D.) Journal.

MAGAZINE NOTES

Francis V. Barr, formerly New England manager for McCall's Magazine and more recently Western manager for the Housewife, is now with Modern Priscilla. He has been assigned to the Eastern field and will have his headquarters in New York.

W. Hartley Robinson has been transferred to the Royal naval air service from the Royal Canadian horse artillery of the Canadian expeditionary force. He was formerly managing editor of the Canadian Motorist, Toronto.

The Home Life Magazine Company has been incorporated in Chicago with a capital of $100,000.

Cyrus LeRoy Baldrige, United States cavalry, retired, who is now with the ambulance field service in France, has joined the staff of Leslie's as war artist. Mr. Baldrige was a magazine illustrator before he went to France and did drawing for Chicago newspapers at the beginning of the war. Leslie's calls Baldrige "the Frederic Remington of this war."

MOVIE MEN RESCIND ANTI-HEARST AD STAND.

The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at a meeting in New York have rescinded the resolution passed by the organization on October 25 which urged motion picture companies to refrain from advertising in the publications of William Randolph Hearst.

John C. Flynn, director of publicity for the Paramount Pictures Corporation, was spokesman for the group that succeeded in getting the association to back down on its stand against Mr. Hearst.

SOME NEW BOOKS.

"LOVE SONNETS OF AN OFFICE BOY," by S. E. Kiser; Forbes & Co., publisher.

This is the book that first gave literary fame to a newspaper writer—Sam Kiser.

If you have never read that rare gem of American humor, the "Love Sonnets of an Office Boy," by Mr. Kiser, you should take the opportunity to do so with the publication of a new edition which appears with some additional sonnets. It is a remarkable understanding of the boy nature John T. McCutcheon furnishes a dozen illustrations that really illustrate and add not a little to the humor of the book.

"MILITARISM," by Dr. Karl Liebknecht; B. W. Huebsch, publisher. Liebknecht, as long ago as 1907, served an eighteen months' sentence for his determined stand against Prussian militarism. Even while he was in prison, he was elected to the Prussian Landtag. He represented the working people of Berlin in the Common Council and in 1912 was selected to represent Potsdam and Spandau in the Reichstag. His continued opposition to the war credits, the war method and the war itself brought his second prison sentence of thirty months in June, 1916.

This book, confiscated shortly after publication, is translated from one of the few copies smuggled out of Germany. It is a powerful indictment of war, but a far more powerful indictment of Germany's methods in her struggle against her own democratization.

"A PERFECT MEMORY. HOW TO HAVE AND KEEP IT," by Marvin Dana, M. A., LL. B., Ph. D.; Edward J. Clode, publisher.

Following a very ingenious plan, although a sound and sane one, Dr. Dana's instructions will improve one's memory control.

are interestingly set forth in this book. Many of the plans developed by the German organization have made their financial and export methods a genuine world power. Even in the midst of their struggle against the world, they pursue their plans for future trade extension. It will profit business men to learn of their methods.

"COMPANY ADMINISTRATION," by Major William H. Waldron, 29th United States Infantry; George V. Harvey, publisher.

Military organization and military administration routine is naturally complex. This little handbook will prove of great assistance to those actively engaged in this special branch of the service, and also to those who are interested in the details of what is known in the service as "paper work."

"HOW TO MAKE YOUR WILL," by William Hamilton Osborne; Small, Maynard & Co., publishers.

Many obvious duties are neglected, and perhaps one which most often is, because of ignorance of the steps necessary to fulfill it is the duty of making one's will. Mr. Osborne, of the New York and New Jersey bars, has performed a distinct service in giving us this simple exposition of the little understood problem.

"AROUND THE YEAR IN THE GARDEN," by Frederick Frye Rockwell; the Macmillan Company, publisher.

This book is designed for the busy man or woman whose spare time available for gardening is limited, and who, consequently, is interested in utilizing every hour to the best purpose. Seasonable and definite directions are given for the various tasks encountered in caring for the garden and grounds on the moderate sized place, where the services of a professional gardener are lacking. This is the most complete and useful single volume we have seen on the subject.

"ELEMENTARY PRINCIPLES OF ECONOMICS," by Richard T. Ely and George R. Wicker; the Macmillan Company, publisher.

Although primarily intended as a text, this book has been written with a distinct view as to its usefulness in directing the further study of economics for the student in his after days of professional or business life.

NEWSPAPER MAN CONDUCTS N. Y. MUNICIPAL MUSEUM

What is claimed to be the first Municipal Museum in the United States has just been established through the efforts of the College of the City of New York, co-operating with the various city departments.

The idea, which has been originated by Francis J. Oppenheimer, the newly appointed director, is that of a sort of academic clearing house between the citizens of the city and those who govern it.

The museum will also act as a statistical clearing house for social and civic workers, co-operating with local boards of trades, bureaus of municipal research, welfare leagues, merchants associations, always aiming for "more light" in Goethe's phrase, on municipal matters, advocating and prosecuting a pitiless publicity campaign for the information and guidance of all citizens.

The committee in charge of the Municipal Museum is made up of Deputy Controller Edmund D. Fisher; the secretary of the board of water supply, George Featherstone; the director of vocational subjects of the college, Dr. Frederick B. Robinson; and the president of the college, Dr. Sidney E. Mezes.

Francis J. Oppenheimer, the director of the museum, is a newspaper man. He has already prepared the budget exhibits for the city.

The ramifications of the various city departments, a lifetime study, to Mr. Oppenheimer's finger tips and his acquaintance with city officials is extensive. Mr. Oppenheimer was also associate director of the National Efficiency Exposition and has kept a close record of the various departmental economies introduced by the city commissioners.

NOTES OF SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

The establishment of a central school of printing by New York City, under the control of the board of education, is advocated in the preliminary report of the industrial survey committee, appointed by Mayor Mitchell.

The importance of the recommendation is indicated by figures in the report which reveal that the combined product of the printing and publishing trade in New York City last year was $215,000,000, about one-twelfth of the total printing output of the world, and surpassing the record held by London until recently. New York, according to the report, is now the greatest printing centre in the world.

The committee's report shows that last year, 2,650 establishments, employing 68,540 persons, were engaged in the printing industry in this city. The capital invested in the industry here is approximately $150,000,000 and the amount paid out in salaries last year was about $76,000,000. The cosmopolitan character of the industry is indicated by the fact that 131 papers, in twenty-five foreign languages, are printed here.

The chief object of the school would be to overcome the existing deficiencies and handicaps in the training of skilled printers. At least four departments are contemplated, dealing with typography, press work, applied art and related studies.

Practically all of the large organizations of printers and their employees have endorsed the report of the committee, which is the outcome of ten months' intensive study of the conditions of the printing trade in this city.

The committee's survey was made under the direct supervision of Lewis A. Wilson of the state education department.

The Kansas Collegiate Press Association will meet at the Kansas Wesleyan University, at Salina, November 9 and 10.

The October-November issue of the Intercollegiate Socialist, a magazine published in New York by the Intercollegiate Socialist Society "to promote intelligent interest in Socialism among college men and women," which was delivered to the Post Office on October 23, has been held, pending a decision from the solicitor of the Post Office Department as to whether it is mailable under the Espionage Law. Persons connected with the magazine said they knew no reason for such action on the part of the Post Office Department, unless it was the discussion of peace terms in the magazine.

Some weeks ago the Intercollegiate Socialist Society sent out a questionnaire on peace proposals to its members, and in the current issue of the Intercollegiate Socialist there appears a symposium on "What should be the terms 'when peace breaks out'?"

There are several advertising classes in the Chicago public night school course and their members are paying visits to engraving establishments to learn that end of the business.

Advertising classes in the Chicago public night schools are required to take the practice as well as the theory of advertising in the course. Students are now visiting engraving, printing and even bindery establishments in order to learn the fundamentals of the printing business.

THE UNIVERSAL TRADE MARK.

By EDWIN T. JONES.

"Made in the United States" is the trade mark that should become recognized and accepted as a guarantee that every article of manufacture, every product, bearing its stamp, is in every way dependable.

The enormous resources of the United States, both from the viewpoint of manufacturing and finance, places the United States upon a non-dependable foundation and it is up to the manufacturing and financial interests of the country to keep the foundation solid.

The inevitable result of wars and disasters is to open the way to better and more advanced conditions. It is unfortunate, that to sorrow and suffering is very largely due the developing of greater achievements, bigger ideas, a better and fuller realization of possibilities.

The successful solving, by our chemists, of the important problem of manufacturing dyes, has eliminated one great obstacle to the satisfactory making of hosiery and other wearing articles requiring dyes of a high grade and dependable character.

We can now manufacture all the dyes necessary for the demands of the great buying power of the United States, and in addition be in a position to export large quantities.

What has been accomplished with dyes can be successfully done along other lines upon which our manufacturing interests have been so dependent.

War has increased manufacturing energy, inspired greater chemistry achievements, and will ultimately end in the accepted recognition throughout the entire world of all products of the United States. The opportunity to meet the enormous demand of one hundred millions of people from our own manufacturing resources, and in addition to supply large quantities possibly for export, requires but a campaign of wide publicity to establish permanently throughout the wide world that products of every description bearing the trade mark "Made in the United States" represent the best offerings of modern and up-to-date scientific manufacturing and agriculture.

Inject the true spirit of patriotism into a campaign for "Made in the United States" products and the outcome will be their universal recognition.

HOW THE TOLEDO BLADE 'IS HELPING ALONG.

The Toledo (Ohio) Blade is active in looking after the comforts of the boys in Uncle Sam's vast national army.

The initial effort in this direction consisted of the "Bounty Baskets," and it succeeded beyond anticipation. The Blade already has forwarded one shipment to Camp Sheridan and another is being made ready for Camp Sherman. These shipments consist of tobacco, cigars, cigarettes, chewing gum, candy, soap and many other things that will serve the soldiers as necessities or luxuries.

Effective work for the bond issue was accomplished by Grove Patterson, managing editor of the Blade, who gave addresses on the subject in all the large department stores of the city.

BROADWAY ANTHOLOGY.

One of the forthcoming fall books will be the "Broadway Anthology," a collection of "poems" based on New York's "Main Street."

The contributors are Edward J. Bernays, Samuel Hoffenstein, Walter J. Kingsley and Murdock Pemberton, all press agents.

At present Mr. Bernays represents the Metropolitan Musical Bureau artists and kindred interests; Mr. Hoffenstein the A. H. Wood enterprises; Mr. Kingsley the United Booking Office vaudeville interests; and Mr. Pemberton, the New York Hippodrome. The gentlemen have all had a wide newspaper experience and it is anticipated (that treating the stage and music as they do from this angle) the collection will have surprises in store for many.

THIS FREE AD BROUGHT GOOD RESULTS.

J. J. Rosenthal, who represents Cohan and Harris as manager of their Bronx Opera House, New York, is a Western product and was a newspaper man in the days when the late Macon McCormick was city editor of the Cincinnati Times Star.

"Jake," as he is familiarly known, embarked in the theatrical business after spending two years as a police reporter on the Cincinnati Enquirer.

He was the press agent for John H. Havlin and R. E. J. Miles and remained with these managers at the Havlin Theatre and Grand Opera House for several years until the late John R. McLean, owner of the Enquirer, requested his discharge for stamping a large advertisement in red ink on the first page of the paper announcing the coming of Effie Ellaler in "Hazel Kirke." Mr. McLean had boasted of the fact that nobody had money enough to buy an ad on the front page of the paper. When Rosenthal conceived the idea of securing the ad free and in red ink, McLean's anger was aroused and he gave Rosenthal much publicity by telling his readers how he was bested.

This was the making of Rosenthal as an advance and press agent as he left Cincinnati for good and came to New York. He was associated with FREDERICK WALTON HARTING, a member of the editorial staff of the Minneapolis Tribune, died on October 30 at the Eitel Hospital, Minneapolis, after a few hours' illness. Mr. Harting was born in New York in 1872. He had a notable career in newspaper work, which began with reporting work for the New York Tribune while he was a student at the College of the City of New York. He was graduated from that institution with the class of 1891. He became identified with papers in Dallas, Tex., and from there went to the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. He later was news editor of the New York Press, managing editor of the Cincinnati Commercial-Telegraph, and editor of the Tacoma (Wash.) Daily News. From there he went to Vancouver and other cities in the then booming Canadian West. Mr. Harting went to Minneapolis from Saskatchewan.

T. PERKINS, part owner of the Sioux City (Ia.) Journal, was killed on October 26 in a motor accident.

CHARLES F. STEELE, automobile advertising solicitor for the Pittsburgh (Pa.) Dispatch, died on November 1 from injuries received in an automobile accident near Hulton.

MONTGOMERY F. ESSIG, a retired newspaper correspondent, was found drowned in the East River, New York, on Sunday. He was forty-two years old.

MOSES SCUDDER, formerly editor of the Waterbury (Conn.) American, died on October 29, at Halesite, N. Y., from a complication of diseases.

WILLIAM S. LAWYER, founder of the Binghamton (N. Y.) Democrat, died in Binghamton, November 3.

renewal of the mailing privilege, that the policy of the magazine would be revised.

This was due, according to Merrill Rogers, manager of the Masses, largely to an erroneous impression that if the Government once determines an issue of a publication to be non-mailable all its future issues are non-mailable.

Assistant United States District Attorney Earl B. Barnes said that the provisions of the Trading with the Enemy Act made it unlawful to handle or distribute the particular number of a magazine which had been declared in violation of the Espionage Act, but did not make it unlawful to handle copies of the magazine as such.

The position of the newsdealer is, nevertheless, not simple. According to the Trading with the Enemy Act, as it is interpreted, a newsdealer may today sell a magazine on the supposition that it is inoffensive, but that newsdealer is liable to prosecution if the postal authorities the next day come to the decision that the magazine violates the Espionage Act. The result of this is that the newsdealer handles all newspapers and publications at his own risk and is not excused for handling non-mailable or seditious matter because he handled it before it was declared non-mailable or seditious.

Merrill Rogers, the manager of the Masses, says it is expected to place the November issue on sale in a few days, pointing out that "Congress has not attempted to prevent the transportation of this publication as merchandise by the railroads or by the express companies, and it has not authorized the confiscation of it, neither has it in any way prohibited publication."

to the difficulties attending manufacture which is thereby made in weight and price. Thus the modern magazine and journal has sacrificed much of its hard-won efficiency to the needs of war.

In regard to the price fixing of news print paper by the paper commission, a very favorable turn of affairs is reported by the World's Paper Trade Review. The commission set the price for April, May,
June and July at 8½ cents per pound and not only did this represent the price at which all news print should be sold, but this price should be retroactive. A committee of paper makers decided to call upon the commission to make an appeal on this decision. This was done and the paper commission advised the paper makers that this price was applicable only to certain paper price disputes which had been placed before the commission for arbitration.

A cable from London is to the effect that the British Paper Commission has set a price on news print paper of 4½ pence per pound, or 9½ cents in American equivalent. It is not known whether this applies to all news print sales, or whether or not it is retroactive.

As regards British imports and exports of paper, we give herewith the Government figures as recorded in the World's Paper Trade Review,
September 21, 1917:

"With the exception of April, the month of August ranks the lowest this year in regard to the imports of paper, etc., into the United Kingdom. The total quantity amounts to with August of last year, a decrease is shown of 44,730 short tons. The arrivals of reel paper were on a very small scale, the reduction last month, as compared with August, 1916, being 20,940 short tons. It is very evident that paper consumers find very little relief from imports, as the total quantity last month fell off 78.6 per cent compared with August a year ago. The total value of last month's imports was $1,703,- 884.66, a decrease of $2,590,360, or 60.3 per cent compared with August of last year.

SWEDEN.

The Swedish paper trade journals are greatly limited by the Government as to the information which they may publish, and in addition to this these papers have been taking from six weeks to two months to therefore, to obtain Swedish current quotations and information from British paper trade journals, which check up very closely with the information contained in the Swedish papers when they finally come to hand.

tions, while made six or seven weeks ago, do not warrant a change at the present time:

Farmund, Christiania, Norway, September 1, 1917, states:

"At the present the Norwegian paper mills produce hardly one-third of their normal quantity; and nevertheless the market for paper is without business. Seldom has it been as quiet in the cellulose market as now, and the mills are earnestly considering if they should not stop production, in the hope that conditions might improve. The wood grinders have after agreement limited their production to fifty per cent, but in spite of it they find it difficult to dispose of what they have to sell."

The Inland Paper Mill Company of Sweden has decided to close the mill for one or two months. The laborers will be kept busy in forests felling wood.

It does not seem possible that the labor situation will cause further manufacturing difficulties as the Norwegian pulp and paper makers have been pressed to such a point by the markets that they are quite ready to shut down. It is felt that the laborers are being led blindly into a situation that may take away their livelihood, by labor union heads who are not properly posted on the seriousness of the whole situation.

In regard to the price fixing of paper for the Norwegian newspapers, the Anglo-Norwegian Trade Journal,
London, England, for August states:

"Since the war started the Norwegian paper mills, assisted by the pulp manufacturers, have been supplying the Norwegian press with paper at prices below the cost of production.

"The German declaration of a ruthless U-boat campaign as from February 1 has had such an effect on paper mills that only one-third of the machines have been kept going; the high prices of coal and other raw materials, accompanied as they have been by almost impossible conditions for export, rendered it necessary for them to demand a readjustment of the prices for home consumption.

"The result was that the Norwegian Government and Parliament took the matter in hand and passed a law according to which the paper manufacturers are obliged to supply each newspaper at prices fixed by the Government with up to fifty-five short tons per annum.

"The larger and presumably more prosperous newspapers must buy whatever more they need at market prices. The mills also have to pro-

U.S. AND CANADA JOIN HANDS ON NEWS PRINT.

IMPORTANT MEETING IN WASHINGTON THIS WEEK--CONTROLLER PRINGLE GETS TRADE BOARD FIGURES.

A development of far-reaching significance in the news print situation was found in a conference held in Washington at the beginning of the week between officials of the Federal Trade Commission and representatives of the Canadian Government, headed by Robert A. Pringle, controller of paper and pulp.

Following the perfecting of a system of paper control in Canada in connection with which, as reported in last week's issue of THE FOURTH ESTATE, co-operation was authorized between the Canadian Government and the United States Federal Trade Commission, Controller Pringle and his chief accountant hurried to Washington and quickly perfected plans for a degree of co-operation scarcely anticipated by the most sanguine advocates of team play between the United States and Canadian Governments on the whole broad proposition of paper distribution and paper prices.

It may as well be explained that the direct and immediate object of Controller Pringle in availing himself of the chance to co-operate is to secure information that will assist him in determining the price of news print in Canada.

In the very near future (November 21), as readers of THE FOURTH ESTATE realize, he must pass upon the fateful question of whether Canadian paper manufacturers shall continue to sell in the Dominion at a price of 2.50 or whether they will be sanctioned in going to 3 cents on the theory of supposed increase in the cost of production.

To help decide this question Controller Pringle has asked and obtained access to the statistics covering cost of production in Canadian mills, which the Federal Trade Commission obtained incident to its news print investigation.

G. C. Clarkson, Controller Pringle's chief accountant—an expert who is reputed to draw down $100 per day—has spent the present week in Washington going over the confidential records and conferring with Dr. E. O. Merchant, the Federal Trade Commission's news print expert, and with Commissioner Colver, who, of the trade commission personnel, specializes on news print matters.

It is predicted by dependable authority that one result of the throwing open to the Canadian investigators of the Trade Commission records will be that henceforth Governmental investigations and cost accounting research on both sides of the border will be virtually of joint character.

At present the two governments have somewhat different methods of figuring cost of production, but it is the expectation that a compromise will be effected in the form of standardized practice which will incorporate some features of Canadian practice and some features of the plan evolved by the United States Federal Trade Commission.

For American publishers, probably the greatest significance of the new turn of affairs will be found in its influence upon the price of news print purchased in Canada for American account. It is felt that at present it is a pretty wide gap between the 2.50 price, which Canadian paper makers are authorized to charge Canadian publishers, and the 3.25 price which can be exacted from American victims.

Already there is grumbling on the part of producers held to the 2.50 price, while their brethren draw down 3.25.

In consequence of all of which there is a strong conviction in the best informed circles in Washington that the Pringle visit and the better understanding between the two governments must inevitably operate to equalize Canadian and United States prices for news print produced in Canada and that, however it may be brought about, the near future may see a narrowing of the understanding between the two basic prices.

CANADIAN PRICE NOT YET FIXED.

RUMORS UNTRUE--THE BOOK PAPER INVESTIGATION BEGINS.

Although rumors have been current for the past day or so that Controller R. A. Pringle, K.C., had decided to fix the prices which producers may charge Canadian consumers for news print at three cents, the Ottawa correspondent of THE FOURTH ESTATE is in a position to state that no definite step has yet been taken in this regard.

Mr. Pringle had not returned to Ottawa yesterday from the United States, where he has been conferring with members of the Federal Trade Commission at Washington and New York, but he is expected home by the end of the week. His office in Ottawa states that he will not likely make public his decision until about November 30, on which date the Order in Council at present in effect expires.

THE FOURTH ESTATE's Ottawa correspondent says:

"While the controller has not in any way intimated what the nature of his finding will be, it is practically certain, in face of the evidence taken at the inquiry, that he will rule in favor of a higher price than at present exists. Three cents is expected to be the figure."

Controller Pringle opened the book paper inquiry in Toronto on Friday last, when the routine preliminaries were conducted.

DINNER FOR "MARSE" HENRY.

In honor of Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville (Ky.) Courier Journal, a dinner was given at the Ritz-Carlton, New York, on November 15 by Alexander Konta.

A. A. A. A. NEW OFFICES ARE A BUSY PLACE.

The headquarters of the Association of American Advertising Agents are now open for business at Room 163, Metropolitan Tower, New York. Executive Secretary James O'Shaughnessy came from Chicago this week to take up his work here and already the offices have become the ground of much activity for the good of the advertising business.

The A. A. A. A. has made war aid to America the matter of its first concern, and Secretary O'Shaughnessy told THE FOURTH ESTATE that: "The advertising agents are ready to give everything they have and any kind of service in their power to insure America's quick success in the war, which it has been compelled to enter for humanity's sake."

ADVERTISING AGENTS AND WAR ADVERTISING.

The Advertising Agents Association of New York City held a dinner-meeting on the evening of November 15. The principal topic of discussion was the relation of advertising to war work for the nation and how it can be made to render greater service.

Lessons were drawn from the second Liberty Loan campaign that will aid in the promotion of the next one.

The meeting was held in the Aldine Club and was presided over by President Joseph A. Richards.

THE CIRCULATORS OF FOUR STATES ORGANIZING.

Circulation managers of newspapers in Pennsylvania, Delaware, New Jersey and Maryland will meet in Philadelphia on November 20 to form an association.

The meeting has been called by A. E. MacKinnon, circulation director of the Philadelphia North American, who is a former president of the International Circulation Managers Association.

NEWFOUNDLAND PAPER IS COMING.

The Publishers Paper Company, Inc., shipped from Newfoundland the day before yesterday a steamer load of news print paper for New York.

It expects to ship another steamer load about the middle of next week for New Orleans.

JOHN R. McLEAN ESTATE.

In an appraisal filed on November 15 in the District of Columbia Supreme Court it became known that John R. McLean, newspaper publisher of Washington and Cincinnati, who died a year ago, left personal property valued at $3,896,631.57. Stocks and bonds made up most of the sum, but there was valuable jewelry and other property.

HIGHER LONDON PRICE.

The price of the London Chronicle will be a penny commencing November 19. This increase, the Chronicle states, is due to the continued advance during the last seven months of the cost of every commodity used in newspaper production. It points out that the price of paper itself has gone up 500 per cent.

BURGESS INJURED.

Gelett Burgess, the well known writer, is suffering from a fractured leg and other injuries as the result of being struck by an automobile in New York on the evening of November 15. He was taken to the Knickerbocker Hospital.

George W. Speyer, formerly connected with the Herbert M. Morris Advertising Agency, Philadelphia, has joined the J. Walter Thompson Company's Chicago office.

JURY FOR PAPER TRIAL CHOSEN.

ALL PARTIES CONSENT TO AN ADJOURNMENT UNTIL NOVEMBER 26.

A jury to try the seven indicted news print heads was selected in New York on November 15 before Federal Judge Julius M. Mayer without any difficulty.

The case of the men, who are accused of having violated the Sherman anti-trust law by conspiring to boost prices and restrain trade, was then adjourned by consent of all parties to November 26.

No reason was given for the adjournment, but there are rumors (which THE FOURTH ESTATE can and no one to stand sponsor for) that the indictments may be dismissed.

The defendants, through the News Print Manufacturers Association, of which five are members, are alleged to control more than 90 per cent of the entire news print paper output of the country. They are:

George H. Mead, chairman of the executive committee of the association and president of the Spanish River Pulp and Paper Mills, the Lake Superior Paper Company, and of the G. H. Mead Company of Dayton, Ohio;

Philip T. Dodge, president of the International Paper Company;

Edward W. Backus, president of the Minnesota and Ontario Power Company and of the Fort Frances Pulp and Paper Company.

George Cahoon, Jr., president of the Laurentide Company and manager of the Canada Export Paper Company;

G. H. P. Gould, president of the Gould Paper Company and the Donnanconna Paper Company;

Alexander Smith, a banker of Chicago;

Frank J. Sensenbrenner, vice-president of the Kimberly Clark Company, paper manufacturers.

BARTHELME GOING HOME.

Dr. George Barthelme, who was arrested in Wichita, Kan., several weeks ago, charged with being in a military zone barred to aliens, and who since his release about six weeks ago has been compelled to report to Federal officials, left on November 15 for an Atlantic port, whence he will sail next week for Germany.

Dr. Barthelme was the American correspondent for the Cologne (Germany) Gazette. He was sent to Wichita from Washington last summer, and was there several weeks before he was placed under arrest.

INEFFICIENCY IN THE POST OFFICE.

EXPERIENCES OF HARRISBURG TELEGRAPH ANOTHER EXAMPLE.

EDITOR THE FOURTH ESTATE.

Sir: Your editorial in the November 3 issue of THE FOURTH ESTATE regarding the inefficient mail service pleased us so much that we have taken the liberty to reproduce it in the Telegraph, with editorial comment.

The Telegraph has recently adopted the custom of mailing out with all renewal notices a circular pointing out that the inefficient mail service is responsible for the delay in the subscribers' receipt of newspapers and urging all subscribers, who have any complaints to make, to write to the Post Office Department as well as to the publisher.

We believe that if other newspapers adopted the same policy, service would be improved.

A. R. MICHENER,
Circulation Manager, the Harrisburg (Pa.) Telegraph.

The editorial in the Telegraph referred to by Mr. Michener, follows:

"INEFFICIENT AND STUPID."

"When such a prominent newspaper publication as THE FOURTH ESTATE finds it necessary to carry at the head of its editorial columns a notice like the following, it is time for all publishers and the reading public to ask what is the matter with the postal department:

"Subscribers who do not receive their paper through the mails in the proper time are hereby advised that it is no fault of the publishers.

"You are requested, therefore, to write a personal letter to the Postmaster General at Washington each and every time there is delay—so that the head of the department may realize what the conditions are—in the hope that they may be improved.

"By pursuing this course you will not only help yourself but will help the publishers.

"It is expected that the Post Office Department will welcome definite knowledge of present unsatisfactory service."

"This advice applies quite as much to readers of the Telegraph as to subscribers to THE FOURTH ESTATE.

"Conditions in the mail service out of Harrisburg are well-nigh intolerable. Delays are so frequent that they are the rule rather than the exception.

"There is on the desk of the writer the envelope of a letter addressed to a subscriber in Sunbury in reply to a question as to why his newspaper did not arrive on time. This letter required something like four days to make the trip. The fault does not lie with the postal clerks, but with the crass stupidity and rank inefficiency of the department heads at Washington.

"What happened to the Sunbury letter, so far as the Telegraph has been able to find from an outside investigation—inside investigations being mostly conducted for the purpose of covering up delinquencies—was this:

"The letter went into a pouch on a full car: the clerks employed are so few that they could not reach this letter until after the Sunbury bag was closed. Then the letter was tossed into a pouch that went to Williamsport. There the letter was put into a local train and started back toward Harrisburg.

"The same thing happened, evidently, again and the letter came back to Harrisburg. Bye and bye it apparently worked to the top and eventually reached its destination.

THE SOLID SUNNY SOUTH

Tremendous Wave of Prosperity is Sweeping Over the Fair Land of Dixie.

PROSPERITY is rampant in the South! There's plenty of work—plenty of money! Banks are overflowing and complain of a lack of borrowers.

The value of the South's agricultural output in 1917 will be more than SIX BILLION DOLLARS—or a gain of ONE AND A HALF BILLION DOLLARS over 1916!

Of the 75 new United States army camps, the thirty-three established in the South are adding untold millions to Dixieland's prosperity. These camps benefit everybody—the men who build the cantonments; farmers, truckers and provision dealers who supply army commissaries; storekeepers, hotels, boarding house keepers, amusement place proprietors, etc., who cater to the soldiers and their families.

A better time for Southern advertising campaigns can hardly be imagined and the Southern daily newspapers are the Southerners' favorite periodicals.

NEWARK VOTERS REPUDIATE PRO-GERMAN EDITOR.

From the moment returns of the election for Newark (N. J.) city commissioners held November 13 began to be tabulated it became evident that Newark would repudiate Benedict Prieth, publisher and editor of the Freie Zeitung, and his platform of pro-Germanism that caused the Government to suspend the publication of his paper some weeks ago.

Early returns indicated that Prieth, who was indicted recently by a Federal grand jury on a charge of treason, and is now out on bail, would not receive more than 4,000 votes out of registration of between 38,000 and 40,000. These he received in that portion of the 12th, 14th and 16th wards in which the pro-German spirit has been prominent, and in the 3d Ward, which is in the socialistic section of the city.

MORE NEWS PRINT MADE.

THREE MONTHS' SUPPLY ON HAND—OCTOBER PRICES
2.90 TO 3.25 F.O.B. MILL.

Production of print paper in the United States by thirty-six companies during the first ten months of 1917 is shown by statistics Federal Trade Commission to have been 1,084,391 tons, as compared with 1,067,947 tons in the corresponding period last year.

The report shows the stocks of news print paper on hand in the United States to be in excess of the estimates made by the American Newspaper Publishers Association paper committee last week and are as follows:

United States mills.....	47,181 tons
Jobbers	5,314 tons
Publishers	101,816 tons
In transit reporting.....	27,567 tons
	181,882 tons

This tonnage does not include the stocks of Canadian mills, publishers, or jobbers, nor of the balance of the 16,000 newspapers of the United States outside of the 460 companies reporting. These, the A.N.P.A. paper committee believes, may bring this reported figure substantially over 250,000 tons or practically three months' supply.

An exact estimate of the latter, however, is impossible at the present time because the commission's report neglects to say what papers have reported—whether they are the large paper users or the smaller ones, or what proportion of each.

The report shows that in addition to the stocks on hand at mills there were some small stocks held at delivery points which together with the stocks of companies not included would bring the total stocks in the hands of manufacturers at the end of the month up to about 45,500 tons.

Almost all of the news print mills reporting ran full time during October.

On the Pacific Coast nine machines were down for a part of the fourth week on account of strikes.

During the last week of the month also three companies did not run full time on account of lack of materials and shortage of labor, and one company did not run at all during the month on account of fire.

NEWS PRINT SALES.

During the month of October fourteen new contracts for news print were made by the domestic manufacturers reporting, which aggregated about 42,000 tons. Of this tonnage nearly 41,000 tons were sold at $3.25 per ton, or $2.90 to $3.25 f.o.b. mill.

Most of the open market sales of roll newsprint in car lots to domestic purchasers were made at prices ranging from $2.90 to $3.25 f.o.b. mill.

The current prices of some mills were below their old contract prices made in 1916. Sheet news in car lots sold as low as $3.25 f.o.b. mill less three per cent for cash, the bulk of the sales by manufacturers being at prices ranging from $3.25 to $3.50 mill.

JOBBERS' PRICES.

Prices quoted by jobbers for deliveries from their warehouses were as follows:

Roll news	$3.25 to $3.35 per 100 lbs
Sheet news	3.75 to 3.50 per 100 lbs

The highest prices reported were on the Pacific Coast, where ten lots of No. 1 sheet news were quoted at $6.25 per 100 pounds and ream lots at $8.50.

ONE NEWSPAPER AD SOLD 338,771 AUTOS.

SPACE OF 360 LINES, ONE TIME, IN 142
NEWSPAPERS, IN 51 CITIES, DID
IT FOR THE FORD COMPANY.

Just about the biggest endorsement the value of newspaper advertising space has ever received from a national advertiser comes from C. A. Brownell, advertising manager of the Ford Motor Company, Detroit.

Through a 360-line advertisement, run one time, in 142 newspapers in 51 different cities of the United States, the Ford Company sold 338,771 cars.

Mr. Brownell tells of his experiences with newspaper advertising to THE FOURTH ESTATE as follows:

"We analyze our advertising when we buy space.

"We seek the lines of least resistance and the best media to approach the most people.

"We aim to carry our message to the maximum number of people at the minimum of expense.

"To attain this end we found that 360 lines in 142 newspapers in 51 different cities of the United States, (taking N. W. Ayer's Directory as a basis) would reach an aggregate of 15,477,422 individual subscribers, not three readers to each paper, but individual subscribers.

"Our advertising agents investigated at the same time and found that the individual subscribers of the Saturday Evening Post and Collier's in the same fifty-one cities aggregated only 878,538.

"Now 360 lines in 142 newspapers cost us less than $8,000.

"One page space in the Saturday Evening Post and Collier's would have cost us $7,500, and the difference in the number of people who would receive our message.

"We spoke to 15,477,422 people through the newspapers and through those two weekly magazines could have reached but 878,538 individual subscribers.

"I want to say right here that I am not saying anything against the advertising in the magazines referred to. They are both excellent mediums. But every man who reads the Saturday Evening Post and Collier's Weekly gives undeniable evidence that he surely is a reader of the daily newspapers. We reached the multitudes and we sold 338,770 cars. Why speak to the few when you can talk to the multitudes for less money?

"Be practical in advertising.

"We found that course to be profitable in the Ford Motor Car Company. In this case we reached 15,477,422 people in one advertisement of the Ford Motor Cars.

"We did not use page space because we could say all we had to say in 360 lines. We had reached in our production, 248,307 cars a year. We had the facilities by which we could make 300,000 and more cars just as well, and I said: 'Make them. There will be a sale for them.'

"We advertising men always figure we can sell anything.

"We could have reduced the price of the car because our facilities were such that we could make it cheaper. Not cheaper in quality, but cheaper by methods of production, but we didn't reduce the price of the cars.

"Instead of that we said we will make 300,000 and sell them within the year if we can, and if we do, we will rebate or give back to every buyer of the Ford car within the twelve months from $40 to $60 on each car, provided we make and sell our production of 300,000 within the twelve months of our fiscal year.

"We sold 338,771 and we rebated to every one a $50 check.

"We had run one advertisement of 360 lines and what did it do? Why it sold 15,477,422 individuals scattered all over the United States, (speaking in 142 newspapers in 51 great cities) the prices of our cars and our proposed cash rebate if we could sell 300,000 cars in twelve months. We put our advertisement where the people expected us to advertise. We went to the people and the people did the rest.

"It further established the stability of our company and the stability of its advertising. No one questioned that advertising at all. The word of the Ford Motor Company goes. We promise and we deliver our promises.

"Then we set out to make 500,000 the next year and made 501,275. The pace grows. Last year our production was 785,426 cars, and our estimate for this year is 900,000. Present production averages 2,700 cars daily. We expect to reach 3,000 daily in November—or a million a year.

Ford advertising is still confined to the daily and weekly newspapers. When we once got started, we couldn't stop. We employ 33,000 men. We are now turning out 1,000,000 a year, over 2,700 a day."

MACKAY HEADS THE A.C.A.

ADVERTISERS TAKE ACTION ON "CIRCULATION EX-TRAVAGANCE."

The meeting held in Hamilton, Ont., on November 8 and 9 was the fourth annual convention of the Association of Canadian Advertisers, and was the best attended and most important.

Officers elected for the ensuing year are:

President, W. M. Mackay, of Lever Brother, Ltd., Toronto; vice-president, W. C. Betts of S. Davis & Sons, Ltd., Montreal; treasurer, J. R. Kirkpatrick of the E. W. Gillett Company Ltd., Toronto; Directors, B. H. Bramble of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Ltd., Toronto; George H. Campbell of the T. H. Estabrooks Company, Ltd., Toronto; E. Doremus of the Dominion Cartridge Company, Montreal; J. F. Rhodes of the Canada Cement Company, Montreal; R. P. Smith of William Neilson, Ltd., Toronto; L. R. Greene of Tuckett, Ltd., Hamilton.

W. A. Lydiatt is secretary of the association, with headquarters at 53 Yonge street, Toronto.

The treasurer's report showed the finances in splendid shape, while he secretary reported an increase of twenty-five per cent since the last annual meeting, seventy-five of the leading national advertisers of Canada now being represented in the membership.

The secretary's report also dealt with important work which the association has done during the past year in investigating miscellaneous charitable, labor and other than regularly issued publications, the information thus secured resulting in saving members many thousands of dollars during the year.

Plans were discussed for extending this work so as to provide a closer check on propositions of this character, and members were recommended to adopt a policy of "No advertising except solely for the benefit of the advertiser—no charity except the entire amount of the contribution is to be used for the purposes of charity."

The circulation and rates committee pointed out the large percentage of circulation in Canada is now subject to regular audit and there was evidence of a growing tendency on the part of advertisers to confine their advertising to publications whose circulations are audited.

This committee's report further dealt with circulation methods and increased rates, again emphasizing the necessity for publishers seeking a more adequate proportion of their revenues from readers through increased subscription prices.

Although advertising rates during the past few years have shown an increase this was largely balanced by the increase in the total volume of circulation. Yet the committee pointed out that to run a 10,000-line campaign in a given list of papers requires a larger appropriation than a few years ago—although the population and purchasing power of the country have not increased proportionately.

The explanation offered was that the advertiser is now obliged to pay for more circulation than he needs. It was contended that the combined circulation of English daily newspapers in Canada is over 1,750,000 daily, and yet the total number of English-speaking homes, including rural, is only about 1,000,000. One member said:

"On the assumption that many rural homes and some city homes do not get any daily paper and that many others get only one paper each day, then it seems that an astonishing number of homes must get three or more daily papers each day."

"In the face of this situation," the committee asked, "what are we to think of publishers who by maintaining inadequate subscription prices, or by the use of extravagant prize contests, premiums, etc., seek to still further inflate their circulation?"

Has not the volume of newspaper circulation in Canada reached, and in some cases, overstepped, the saturation point?

Are advertisers not obliged to pay for too much circulation already?

References were made to several instances in which the most extravagant voting contests had been employed by papers whose circulation already appeared to be quite large enough within the limits of their legitimate field, and the meeting passed a resolution unfavorable to circulation-getting methods of this nature, where the revenue derived from the subscriptions was exceeded by the amount spent to get subscriptions, leaving the advertiser to meet the deficit.

MEDICAL AD STANDARDS.

In connection with the report of the standards of advertising committee, Dr. A. J. Cramp of the Journal of the American Medical Association, Chicago, was present and gave the meeting a great deal of interesting information regarding the extent of fraud and misrepresentation in medical advertising.

Particular emphasis was laid on the different claims made for certain remedies on the Canadian side of the line, where similar restrictions as to truth admit of great latitude as to the claims made.

Many examples were quoted and comparisons shown of the labels used in the United States and Canada for various proprietary remedies.

Dr. Cramp also delivered an address at the annual dinner on Thursday evening, at which a number of publishers and advertising agents were present.

"This is the kind of information we want," remarked several publishers after hearing Dr. Cramp.

"I wish more publishers could hear him and that some steps could be taken to disseminate among publishers the facts about medical advertising such as we have heard tonight," remarked one publisher.

The Friday morning session was given over to a display of industrial and advertising motion pictures, and Friday afternoon to the election of officers and round table discussion of sales and advertising topics.

THRIFT

of the Hour*

Webster tells us THRIFT is economical management in regard to property—frugality, gain, prosperity.

Today, it has a much broader meaning—it must reach into the heart of the home.

Millions of sensible housewives by trading where merchandise of quality is sold at lowest prices and obtaining the valuable Green Stamps as their earned reward for paying cash are practicing thrift in the most practical way. No sacrifice is necessary to enjoy the economy offered by these discount tokens.

In showing the sign: "We Give Green Stamps," thousands of merchants are aiding their customers to more easily co-operate with the law of the land.

LABOR RULINGS BY ARBITRATION.

CASES DECIDED AFFECT SAN FRANCISCO, CHICAGO AND MILWAUKEE.

The International Arbitration Board, representing the American Newspaper Publishers Association, and the International Typographical Union, has rendered several important decisions affecting the relations of union printers and newspaper employers. The cities in the case are Chicago, San Francisco and Milwaukee.

Negotiations for a new newspaper scale were instituted by the Chicago Typographical Union on November 30, 1914, when the officers of the union officially notified the Chicago publishers of proposed changes as required by the local contract. Under the provisions of the local contract, and after a delay of nearly three years, the local parties finally agreed to submit the controversy to the International Board of Arbitration for decision. At a meeting of the board held in Indianapolis the representatives of Typographical Union No. 16 and the Chicago newspaper publishers presented their evidence and arguments, and the board has reached a decision by a vote of four to two, providing for an eight-hour day for weekly employees at these rates, effective from October 11, 1917:

	Day.	Night
Proofreaders	$31	$38
Copycutters	31	38
Copyholders	32	38
Make-ups	31	33
Machine tenders	31	33

The Chicago scale for 1912-1915 provided the following rates for weekly employees working eight hours per day:

	Day.	Night
Proofreaders	$29	$31
Copycutters	30	31
Copyholders	31	32
Make-ups	29	31
Machine tenders	29	31

The proposition originally submitted by the union sought to abolish the bonus system and provided for a working day of seven and one-half hours for all journeymen at these weekly rates:

	Day.	Night
Proofreaders	$30	$33
Copycutters	30	33
Copyholders	32	34
Make-ups	30	33
Machine tenders	30	33
Operators and handmen ..	30	33

The old scale included rates of 62 and 67 cents per hour for day and night work, respectively, for men employed on an hourly basis, for not less than seven hours' work.

The award increases these rates from 66 and 71 cents and provides for a minimum day of seven and one-half hours.

The old scale included provisions that bonus operators should be paid 50 and 55 cents (day and night) per hour on an average of 3,500 ems, and 55 and 60 cents per hour on an average of 4,500 ems, with 1 cent per 100 ems after an average of 4,500 ems.

The award increases these hourly basic rates for bonus operators to 53 and 58 cents, and to 58 and 63 cents, and provides that operators may be employed on a time basis at the hourly rate for other journeymen.

SAN FRANCISCO SCALE AWARD.

After a delay of several weeks consumed in an effort to agree on the fifth man to act as chairman of the board, the San Francisco newspaper scale was submitted to arbitration. The board was composed of H. N. Kellogg and B. F. Lawrence, representing the publishers, and President Scott and L. Michelson, representing the union, with George C. Hitt of Indianapolis as chairman.

The union's proposition included an increase of $4 per week for all journeymen. The publishers offered the existing wage for an eight-hour day.

The award, which follows, increases the weekly wage scale for all journeymen $2 per week, and increases the working day from seven to seven and one-half hours:

"The parties at interest in this case agreed upon all of terms of a new contract excepting the number of hours to constitute a day's and night's work, the wages to be paid the various classes of men and the date on which the conditions shall become effective.

The decision is:

"1. On both morning and evening newspapers seven and one-half (7½) hours, exclusive of lunch time, shall constitute a day's work, and forty-five (45) hours shall constitute a week's work.

"2. Operators and other journeymen (except foremen and proofreaders) working on morning newspapers, shall receive not less than $5.66 2-3 per day.

"3. Operators and other journeymen (except foremen and proofreaders) working on evening newspapers, shall receive not less than $6.16 2-3 per day.

"4. Foremen of morning newspapers shall receive not less than $7.66 2-3 per day. Assistant foremen shall receive not less than $6.66 2-3 per day.

"5. Foremen of evening newspapers shall receive not less than $6.66 2-3 per day. Assistant foremen shall receive not less than $6.16 2-3 per day.

"6. Heads of adrooms on morning newspapers shall receive not less than $6.16 2-3 per day.

"7. Heads of adrooms on evening newspapers shall receive not less than $6.66 2-3 per day.

"8. Proofreaders on morning newspapers shall receive not less than 6.16 2-3 per day.

"9. Proofreaders on evening newspapers shall receive not less than $5.66 2-3 per day.

"10. In machine offices where four or less machines are in use, where no regular machinist is employed, there must be at least one machinist-operator, who shall receive not less than $5.66 2-3 per day for day work, and $6.16 2-3 for night work. A machinist-operator shall be construed to mean an operator who shall be capable of keeping a machine in running order and shall be responsible for the working of such machine.

"11. Head Linotype machinists shall receive not less than $6.16 2-3 per day for night work, and $5.66 2-3 per day for day work.

"12. Journeymen assistant machinists shall receive not less than $4.66 2-3 per day or night.

"13. Journeymen members of San Francisco Typographical Union No. 23 may serve as apprentices on morning and evening newspapers under instructions of machine tenders, and during the same hours, said apprenticeship to be completed in one year. The ratio of such apprentices shall be one to every one, two or three machine tenders. Said apprentices shall receive $19 per week for the first six months and $14 per week for the second six months.

"14. * * * For starting work earlier than 6 p. m. on morning newspapers $3 1-3 cents a day in addition to the regular scale shall be paid; provided such extra compensation shall not apply on Friday and Saturday, nor to any shift, on any day, starting not earlier than 7 a. m. and ending not later than 6 p. m. Working hours on evening newspapers shall be between 7 a. m. and 6 p. m.; for starting work before the hour specified, $3 1-3 cents a day in addition to the regular scale shall be paid.

"15. The time of the taking effect of this scale shall be the date of the making of this award, namely, October 26, 1917."

MILWAUKEE SCALE AWARD.

Because of irregularities in the local arbitration proceedings, the Milwaukee newspaper publishers appealed from the local decision to the International Board of Arbitration. Upon the evidence submitted it was evident that the chairman of the local board had disregarded the explicit provisions of the code of procedure required by the international agreement. The irregularities were of such a character that the local award could not be confirmed, and after considering the controversy at two meetings the international board requested the representatives of the union and the publishers to appear before the board, when the following award was made:

"This case concerns propositions for a new wage scale agreement.

"The board decides that under section 15 of the code of procedure of the arbitration contract it cannot make a decision for more than three years; therefore, this decision shall date from August 9, 1916, until August 8, 1919.

"The hours for a regular day's or night's work shall be eight, exclusive of at least thirty minutes for lunch. Help employed on the lobster shift commencing at 12 o'clock midnight shall work seven hours per night and shall be paid at the rate of the regular morning scale.

"Journeymen on evening papers are to receive $37 per week to date from the beginning of the next fiscal week. Journeymen on morning papers are to receive $30 per week from the beginning of the next fiscal week.

"Superannuated members are to receive $18 per week beginning with the next fiscal week.

"Morning and evening journeymen and superannuated members are to be given $3 per week back pay from April 1, 1917, to the beginning of the next fiscal week.

"The representatives of the publishers and the typographical union having stated that an agreement on the remaining sections of the contract can be reached through conciliation, the board refers these sections to the local joint committee, the provisions of the existing agreement, except as changed by this decision, to remain in effect pending an adjustment as above provided."

ANOTHER EDITOR ACCUSED.

Because of an editorial entitled "Galley Brutality," appearing in the November issue of the Le Mars (Ia.) Globe-Post, information for violation of the Espionage Act has been filed against John Starzl, publisher of the paper, who is of German birth.

The editorial treats of alleged brutality to American soldiers on board transports.

Starzl was arrested on November 2, but was later released on a $10,000 bond. The case was set for November 21.

The editor asserted that the article was written by his son and published without his knowledge. He published a retraction in his paper, which stated that he could prove to the Government that the publication of the editorial took place without his knowledge.

AIDED GERMAN TO ESCAPE.

Albert Orth, publisher of the Charleston (S. C.) Deutsche Zeitung was convicted in the Federal Court in Columbia on November 13 of aiding a German prisoner to escape from the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta.

TO ADVERTISE MICHIGAN.

An East Michigan Resort and Tourist Association was organized at Bay City, November 13. The association plans to advertise the attractions of east Michigan through a general publicity and advertising campaign.

NEWSPAPER MAN HEADS THE RUSSIAN REVOLT.

Leon Trotsky, leader of the new Russian revolution has been a journalist for twenty years, starting work in Russia, where he was born and where he established a newspaper in Petrograd fifteen years ago. His paper was suppressed from time to time, and Trotsky came to know the inside of many Russian prisons because of the violence of his attacks against the Czar's government.

He is well known in the East Side of New York. He left this city for Petrograd last April, announcing his determination to overthrow Kerenisky. Trotsky arrived here from Russia on January 15, 1917, and almost immediately became editor of the Novi Mir, a Russian revolutionist paper published on the East Side.

A WYOMING PURCHASE.

The interests of H. J. Petersch in the Casper (Wyo.) Daily Press and Weekly Record, of which he was editor and publisher, have been purchased by Percy Cropper and associates.

WOMEN'S PRESS OFFERS ITS OFFICES FOR MEETINGS.

The home of the Women's Press, Stevens Building, Chicago, is now available without cost for the use of women's organizations. The only requirement is that the ladies must belong to the "Press family." The offices have already been retained by the Women's Association of Commerce for its meetings. Other organizations have asked for reservations.

The Press is edited and published for women in war work by Ferd P. Fisher, former city editor of the Chicago Evening Post and his wife, Mary De Lany Fisher, for fifteen years in the business office of the Chicago Examiner.

THESE PAPERS $1 EACH.

Judge Ruth in the criminal division of the Columbus (Ohio) municipal court, fixed a price of $1 each on newspapers, when he fined Albert Rogers $25 and costs for stealing twenty-five newspapers from a street corner. It also cost the young man thirty days of his liberty, which he will spend in the workhouse.

NEW PRESS ASSOCIATION IN IOWA.

The Wayne County (Ia.) Press Association was organized at a meeting of the seven publishers of the county held in Lineville on November 2. It was the first time that all the newspaper editors of Wayne County had been together.

A. D. McGuire of the Humeston New Era was elected president and Bryon Hoehner of the Seymour Democrat secretary.

A meeting will be held at Corydon on December 7.

NEW INTERTYPE USERS.

The following publishers and printers have recently installed two and three-magazine Intertypes:

Commercial Printing Company, New York; Point Pleasant (N. J.) Printing and Publishing Company; Globe Printing Company, St. Louis; Lohmann & McPartland, Davenport, Ia.; Utica (N. Y.) Saturday Globe; St. Marys (Pa.) Gazette Printing Company; Seattle (Wash.) Star; Eureka Press, Boston; Bridgeton (N. J.) Evening News; Louisville (Ky.)

Herald; Syracuse (N. Y.) Post-Standard; Springfield (Mass.) Union Publishing Company.

SPARROW NAVAL CENSOR.

Commander Herbert G. Sparrow, Secretary Daniels' aide, has taken over some of the duties of naval censorship heretofore exercised by Lieutenant Commander Charles J. Belknap of the office of the chief of operations.

Commander Sparrow, for the time being at least, will deal with questions of newspaper publications.

M'AVOY IN CHARGE.

During the absence of Johnstone Vance, managing editor and one of the proprietors of the New Britain (Ct.) Herald, who is now a yeoman in Uncle Sam's service, Arthur E. McAvoy, city and news editor of the Herald, is in charge of the paper's news policy.

E. Fullerton of the Chicago Tribune has won the Critchfield-Taylor cup by taking the championship of the Chicago Press Golf Club, defeating O. G. Lundberg, also of the Tribune.

STANDARDWEIGHT IN MEAD MILLS.

INSTRUCTIONS OF SPANISH RIVER PRESIDENT TO HIS EMPLOYEES.

EDITOR THE FOURTH ESTATE.

SIR: I have read in the issue of THE FOURTH ESTATE of November 3 the interview with A. G. McIntyre regarding "Standard weight of news print paper," also referring to the "5 per cent leeway" clause usually included in contracts for standard news print as applying to variation in weight.

I cannot but feel that Mr. McIntyre is a little severe in his criticism of the mills in this interview, and I might also state that the interpretation of the "standard contract" by Mr. McIntyre is not the interpretation of our company, nor do I believe it to be the interpretation of most of the news print manufacturers of the continent.

As evidence of the attitude of our company on the subject of weight of paper, I take the liberty of enclosing a copy of the Spanish River News, a paper published twice a month by and for the employes of our company, which contains a letter which I have thought might be of interest to you.

G. H. MEAD,

President Spanish River Pulp & Paper Mills, Ltd., Dayton, Ohio.

The letter referred to by Mr. Mead follows:

Dayton, Ohio, September 8, 1917.

TO OUR EMPLOYEES:

Subject: "Uniform Weight of Paper."

While the subject of this letter is more particularly of interest to the paper mill departments, and especially to the men operating our paper machines, as set forth in the first issue of the Spanish River News, one of the purposes of this paper is the opportunity for presenting from time to time to all departments the policy for operation of any one department.

Furthermore, it is impossible for the sales department to accomplish satisfactory results from our company, as well as for our customers, without the co-operation of every other department of our organization from the "woods" to the "finishing room."

It is the policy of the company, in the delivery of standard news print, to furnish its customers at all times with thirty-two-pound paper; and while our formal contracts do not guarantee such weight, we must consider the obligation to deliver this weight of paper, which is the weight agreed upon in the sale as absolutely binding.

We all realize that it is impossible in our regular operations to maintain absolute uniformity of weight, and our contract therefore states that the paper shall be of substantially the same average quality as sample attached thereto and of approximately the following basis of weight: 24x36, 32-500, without reference to production basis.

However, the sales department is instructed to assure customers that throughout each month, as well as the year, the average weight of paper will be thirty-two pounds.

I wish to ask our entire organization to co-operate toward the maintenance of this uniform weight of paper, since it is the first principle of the company to be fair in all things, and having undertaken the sale of paper of a standard weight it is evidently unfair to deliver paper of greater weight no matter what the demands for maximum production of paper or how prosperous the times may be.

Thinking it may be of interest to all, the News is publishing in this issue the form of contract which is now being used by our company that the various obligations of such contract may be reviewed by yourselves.

GEORGE H. MEAD, President.

WITH OHIO DEFENSE BOARD.

Earl Baird, Columbus (Ohio) newspaper man, has become attached to the Ohio Board of Defense.

ROBERT A. PRINGLE, K. C.
PAPER CONTROLLER FOR CANADA.

SUBDIVIDES DISTRICT.

The New York-Boston district of the Lanston Monotype Company has been divided into the New England and the New York Districts.

The New England district will be in charge of Russell L. Davis, who has been assistant manager at the Boston office.

The New York district will be in charge of Richard Beresford, who has been manager of the combined districts since November 1, 1916.

This arrangement will permit each of the men to give his undivided attention to his own territory.

OTTAWA MILLS BUSY.

Pulp and paper mills in the Ottawa (Can.) district continue steadily employed and all branches of the publishing group are active.

Difficulty is being experienced by all of the producers in obtaining shantymen for the season's operations, despite the high wages offered—from $50 to $55 a month, with board—and scarcity of pilers is also interfering with operations.

ROLL-WIDTH DIRECTORY.

The American Newspaper Publishers Association's paper committee will issue a revised width-of-roll directory of newspapers within the next week or so.

This, added to the news print mills directory, issued by the committee last week, provides publishers with two very useful sources of information.

LA FOLLETTE SUES AGAIN.

Action for $100,000 damages has been filed by Senator La Follette against the Madison (Wis.) Democrat Printing Company and O. D. Brandenburg, president and editor. The action is based on alleged libels printed in the Democrat intending to show that the Senator was giving aid and comfort to the enemy.

OREGON WEEKLY SUSPENDS.

The Marshfield (Ore.) Coos Bay News has suspended publication after having been issued by G. A. Bennett for thirty-six years.

The News was started in 1873 by T. G. Owen, Mr. Bennett becoming sole owner in 1881. Mr. Bennett will conduct a job printing office in the plant.

A TIME-SAVING DEVICE.

Nelson Woolley, chief machinist for the Wilmington (Del.) Every Evening, has invented and constructed a belt carrying device for handling copy and proofs between the news composing room, which is on the fourth floor, and the proof room, which is on the third floor of the building.

NEW SLAV PUBLISHER.

The Southern Slav News Company, New York, has incorporated to do a printing and publishing business, with a capital of $60,000. A. Tanaskove, D. Grskovic, 461 Eighth avenue, and G. S. Mark, 34 Nassau street, are the incorporators.

CANADA'S PAPER CONTROLLER.

A LAWYER WHO HAS SERVED HIS PARTY AND COUNTRY WITH DISTINCTION.

Since April of this year, R. A. Pringle, K. C., the newly appointed Canadian paper controller, has been more closely identified with the Canadian paper industry than perhaps any other person not actually engaged in the business and during that time he has displayed a grasp of that situation such as is sometimes, unfortunately, not shown by those named to make investigations similar in many respects to that which he has been conducting.

The news print inquiry was not the first opportunity Robert Abercrombie Pringle—for that is his full name—has had of displaying his ability for capably discharging the duties of offices which require not only the judicial mind, but also a liberal quantity of "horse sense." He served with distinction at the time of the investigation into the affairs of the Southampton Railway Company, into the Parliament Buildings' Fire, and into other matters of less importance.

Mr. Pringle is the senior member of the law firm of Pringle, Thompson, Burgess & Cote, Ottawa. The son of J. F. and Isabelle Pringle, he was born in Cornwall, Ont., on December 15, 1855, and he received his early education in that place, later rounding out his training at Queen's College and Osgoode Hall. In 1881, he was called to the bar, and in 1906 he was made a King's Counsellor. He practiced in his "home town" until 1911, when he moved to Ottawa, and established his present practice.

Mr. Pringle occupied a Conservative seat in the House of Parliament for two terms—1900-04 and 1904-08; was defeated for office in 1908; and declined the nomination proffered him in 1911. He has served not only party, but country, with distinction.

TOWN WAS TOO WARM.

Rev. Chester A. Miller, editor for a year of the Grays Lake (Ill.) Tribune, has disposed of his paper to William H. Ellis and will go back to his old home in the East. The reason for his change of plan is said to be a public uprising in the vicinity of Grays Lake as a protest against an editorial printed in the Tribune comparing "pickets," who prevented delivery of milk to a Grays Lake condenser, to I. W. W. members. The picketing of the condenser was due to a dispute as to the rate to be paid the farmers, and the farmers who carried out the picketing plan were preparing to demand retraction through force, when Miller postponed matters by placing himself under the protection of officers. His sale of the paper followed the incident.

PAPER FOR DU PONT MEN.

Employees of the Carney's Point (N. J.) plant of the du Pont Powder Company are contemplating starting a community daily for the 20,000 workers of the plant and their families, most of whom live in the neighborhood of the factory. The promoters have been conferring with Wilmington publishers relative to handling the enterprise.

MADDOX HANDLES DEFENSE COUNCIL PUBLICITY.

Aubrey E. Maddox is on leave of absence from his position as assistant city editor of the Hartford (Conn.) Courant, taking charge of the publicity for the Connecticut Council of Defense. He has made a number of addresses throughout the state.

REPORTERS WR I
WAR SLEUTHS.THEIR WORK FOR PROVIDENCE
JOURNAL OUTSHONE
"SHERLOCK HOLMES."

A tribute to the unflinching honesty and the persistent keenness of the American reporters who had fought a long battle against tremendous odds in the form of an organized and elaborately financed German secret service in this country was given by John R. Rathom, editor of the Providence (R. I.) Journal, before the Canadian Club in New York on November 12.

Mr. Rathom said time and time again the Teutons had been outplayed at their own game and how again and again official denials of spy revelations had been replaced sooner or later by official confirmation of the disclosures.

Mr. Rathom was introduced to speak as "the man who put the United States on the map in the war and who put Bryan out of the Cabinet." He told the 700 or more assembled there how he obtained evidence against Von Papen, Boy-Ed and other German residents here who violated our hospitality.

After reciting how this had been done by newspaper reporters, the New England editor dwelt upon what needed to be done in the future against enemy aliens and German sympathizers in order to anticipate such disasters as the Baltimore fire. Internal conditions, he declared, are growing worse instead of better, and unless checked "will mean the maintenance in the very heart of our civil and commercial life of a danger that will destroy half of our war value to ourselves and the Allies."

He asserted that German spies are today employed in Army and Navy work, munition plants and ship-building yards.

The part of Mr. Rathom's recital that won the greatest applause was the tale of how the Providence Journal got a man into the offices of the Hamburg-American steamship offices in New York City when those offices were teeming with unneutral activities and were guarded with the utmost cunning the Prussian sleuths could devise. The newspaper sent one of its young men to Lima, Ohio, and there the reporter wrote to the steamship company, saying he was the son of German parents, true to the Fatherland, and therefore wished to send warning that he had learned the Providence Journal was plotting to put a man into the Hamburg-American offices as janitor.

The reporter said he learned of the plot through a "loyal" telegraph operator in Providence, who heard it from a Providence Journal operator. Within a few days the Hamburg-American offices actually were visited by a man who asked for the job of janitor. He was taken into a private office and there grilled by the head of the company's secret service and other officials. He broke down and confessed he came from the newspaper office, and was thrown out without ceremony.

The youth out in Ohio wrote again a few days later, saying that, having heard nothing, he wanted to apologize for having alarmed the steamship officials needlessly. With "boyish candor," he added that he wanted to come to New York to make his fortune, and wondered if the line appreciated his attempt to help the Fatherland sufficiently to give him a temporary job.

The Hamburg-American wired back for him to come at once, and gave him the very job of janitor which he had warned would be sought by a Providence Journal man.

He stayed there six months, and the newspaper got evidence which Mr. Rathom said "would have closed these offices long ago instead of only recently, had we had the power the Government has."

"One of our employees," said Mr. Rathom, "a young woman who had worked for our paper for six years, marked one of the packing cases sent by Boy-Ed to his home government before the outbreak of the war with this country, with two hearts, and Boy-Ed, in amorous mood, drew two darts through the drawings. These packing cases were filled with important documents and receipts showing the payment of money by the German propaganda in America. Many of these operations may appear inconceivable, but our proof was indisputable."

"On another occasion Boy-Ed and two men who were responsible for the blowing up of a plant in Wilmington, Del., drank wine with our representative and gloated over the work they had carried on in a country not at war with Germany."

"Going back a little bit," continued Mr. Rathom, "our man in the German consul general's office in San Francisco found that the man was plotting against this Government. That official is now serving two years' imprisonment in San Francisco."

"We had positive proof of the breaking up of the machinery of the German liners docked at Hoboken, N. J., and when this proof was printed Dudley Field Malone, then collector of the port, denied the story," Mr. Rathom said, and when he, Rathom, interviewed the collector the latter explained he hadn't examined below decks, as he didn't think he had authority to do so.

"I asked him if he thought the engines were in the smokestack," Mr. Rathom added, "and I suppose he found out they weren't when the Government ten days later confirmed our entire story."

Other speakers who united in supporting Mr. Rathom's views on the enemy alien situation and in asserting that the war must continue until Kaiserism is crushed were Sir George Reid, former Premier of Australia; Major Ian Hay Beith, Professor Ermano Roselli, Melville E. Stone, Frank A. Munsey, C. V. Van Ande, George T. Wilson, Dr. Alexander C. Humphries, James E. Cattell and Professor Robert M. McElroy.

Mr. Stone declared that "there is a Bolshevik in America even as in Russia." "Here in New York," he continued, "we have one Bolshevik, who, through the medium of his newspaper press, has helped spread the propaganda of the German enemy."

ADVERTISER FAVORS FEWER EDITIONS OF PAPERS.

Higher priced newspapers and fewer editions of the evening publications were urged by Jesse I. Straus of R. H. Macy & Co., in an address on November 13 before 125 members of the Sphinx Club of New York at its monthly dinner. Mr. Straus also said that some newspapers, whose names he did not mention, should censor their news columns as well as their advertising columns.

The other speakers were Jason Rogers, publisher of the Globe, and Rev. Warren W. Giles.

Preston Lynn, general manager of Wanamaker's, was toastmaster.

Forty-three newspaper men and their wives were present at the first annual session of the Lincoln (Neb.) state house Fryng Pan Club. Frank E. Helvey of Lincoln impersonated Governor Neville of Nebraska in an entertaining skit.

NEWSPAPER ADS IN OCTOBER.

REPORTS FROM TWENTY-ONE CITIES SHOW VERY SLIGHT DIFFERENCE.

The annual Autumn increase in advertising business in the United States, as represented by reports to the paper committee of the American Newspaper Publishers Association from ninety-three newspapers located in twenty-one American cities, continued during October on a par with last year's returns.

Compared with the same month last year, October returns showed a very slight decrease.

For the ten months ending October last returns show an increase of 4.18 per cent over the same period last year.

Comparison of these returns for the past four years is presented in the accompanying chart. It will be seen that while this year's figures are about equal to last year's for the month of October, they are considerably above the two preceding years.

Advertising returns for October from Eastern cities as represented by New York, Philadelphia and Buffalo, show an increase of .93 per cent as compared with the same month last year.

The returns from the Middle West as represented by Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Milwaukee and Indianapolis show a decrease of 4.5 per cent.

Pacific Coast cities, represented by Los Angeles, San Francisco and Portland, show a decrease of 8.83 per cent.

Northwestern cities, as represented by Minneapolis, St. Paul and Kansas City, show an increase of 1.7 per cent.

Southern cities, as represented by Baltimore, New Orleans, Atlanta, Houston and Washington, show an increase of 3.9 per cent.

The monthly advertising returns from these cities are presented in full on another page from January, 1914, to date. Classified and display advertising, local and foreign, week-day and Sunday editions, are included.

NORTHWESTERN DAILIES TO CO-OPERATE.

Six dailies of the state of Washington have organized to form the Pacific Northwest Daily Newspaper Association, in order to standardize their foreign advertising business and run it on a co-operative plan. Colonel W. W. Robertson, publisher of the Herald and the Republican of Yakima, has been chosen president of the organization. As yet no other officers have been selected.

Dailies of Washington, Oregon and Idaho with more than 4,000 circulation and possibly strong dailies with over 3,000 may become members.

BOARD OF ADVICE ON WAR TAX.

AID FOR THOSE IN DOUBT—TWO EDITORS APPOINTED—PLAN FOR PUBLICITY.

Newspaper publishers and advertisers who may be in doubt as to their war tax status will be interested to learn that the appointment of an advisory board of nine members to be known as the "excess profits advisers" has been announced by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo. It will act as a board of appeals for the Internal Revenue Bureau on all questions connected with the interpretation and execution of the excess profits section of the new war tax law.

The members of the board are: Representative Cordell Hull, a member of the House committee on ways and means; T. S. Adams, economist of Yale University; Wallace D. Simmons, president Simmons Hardware Company, St. Louis and Philadelphia; J. E. Sterrett of Price, Waterhouse & Co., accountants, New York City; S. R. Bertron of Bertron, Griscom & Co., bankers, New York City.

E. T. Meredith, editor Successful Farming, Des Moines, Ia.; T. W. McCullough, editor Omaha Bee, Omaha, Neb.; Stewart W. Cramer of the National Council of Cotton Manufacturers, Charlotte, N. C., and Henry Walters, chairman of the board, Atlantic Coast Line, and Louisville & Nashville Railways.

The membership of this board, it is explained, has been selected with a view to the broadest consideration of the business interests of the country.

In addition to the action of the department in availing itself of the services of these advisers, plans are being formulated for a program of information for the taxpaying public," said Mr. McAdoo.

"It is essential that every taxpayer shall know how to compute the amount of the taxes he must pay, and the time, place and method provided for its payment."

"The department recognizes that information of this kind will be indispensable because the law puts upon the taxpayer the responsibility for making the returns by which his tax is measured."

WAR WRITER NOT EXEMPT.

Writers on the war will not get exemption from the draft from the district board of division for Northern California on the score of the importance of their work to the Government. This stand was made known in the case of James W. Paramount, who wanted to stay in Russia to do a special series of articles on the war for the New Republic, New York. He was denied exemption by the board and has now appealed the case to President Wilson.

"The enterprise was not necessary to the maintenance of the military establishment," the board ruled, "and the individual was not necessary to the enterprise. The New Republic could send a man more than thirty years old, or a woman to do the articles on Russia."

FOSTER DEFEATED.

Charles C. Foster, formerly city editor of the Louisville (Ky.) Times and for eight years in charge of the Jefferson County Jail in Louisville, was defeated at the polls last week. Foster established the first jail school in the United States and has taught thousands of men and women who have been his prisoners.

The Montrose (Ia.) Journal and Gossip have been consolidated.

N.Y. NEWSBOY LAW CHANGE

ADVOCATED BY STATE BODY OF CIRCULATORS—PROTEST ON MAIL SERVICE.

Appointment of a committee to urge modification of the present newsboy law to permit boys of ten years to sell newspapers and adoption of resolutions protesting against inadequate and unreliable mail service marked the convention of the New York State Circulation Managers Association, held in Syracuse, N. Y., on November 15.

Twenty-five circulation managers, representing all leading newspapers between New York and Buffalo, participated in the conference. There were two business sessions and between them the circulation managers were guests of Syracuse newspaper publishers at a luncheon. Edward Schoeneck, lieutenant-governor, and Stewart F. Hancock, corporation counsel, spoke.

In the minds of the circulation men, the opening of a campaign to change the newsboy law is the most important step they have taken since their association was formed. The necessity for a change, they say, is directly due to the new industrial situation arising from the war.

Under the existing statute, boys under twelve are forbidden to sell newspapers at all, boys between twelve and fourteen are permitted to sell them only on consent of the educational authorities and boys under sixteen years are forbidden to sell them late at night or before 8 a. m.

It developed, during a discussion led by R. D. M. Decker of the Albany Knickerbocker-Press at the afternoon session, that every newspaper in the state is laboring under unusual difficulties imposed by the Newsboy Law. It is practically impossible to get boys over sixteen, since they now find more remunerative employment in factories and shops. Sporadic enforcement of the law has worked havoc with regular circulation in many instances, frightening the regular newsboys out of business for days at a time and making it impossible for the circulation manager to distribute his normal output of papers.

It was pointed out by several of the speakers that most of the agitation against youthful newsboys is due to the activity of the undisciplined, irresponsible little urchins who appear in the streets after seven o'clock at night with three or four papers they have picked up somewhere and make a nuisance of themselves by trying to wheedle a few pennies from sympathetic buyers. Few regular newsboys work later than seven p. m. and there are hundreds of them in Syracuse alone between ten and fourteen years, who contribute an essential portion of the support of their families.

At the coming session of the legislature the association will endeavor to have the law amended so as to make ten years the minimum age limit, whatever qualifying clauses in the way of controlling the boys may be added. The fact that Lieutenant-Governor Schoeneck told them he started his career by selling papers at the age of seven years, leads the association to expect some helpful support at Albany, and by excluding New York City from the matter, the circulation men hope for success.

Edwin F. McIntyre, Syracuse Herald; G. M. Therrien, Buffalo News; and R. D. M. Decker, Albany Knickerbocker Press, were appointed a committee to direct the campaign.

A strong protest against the present inadequate mail service badly crippled by "war economy" on the part of both railroads and the Government was framed after an address by Mr. Therrien. Removal of mail trains, cuts in the mail force of mail clerks and other war changes have affected the newspapers seriously, according to Mr. Therrien. Without some vigorous opposition, he believes the situation is due to become infinitely worse.

A telegram making plain the attitude of newspapers was sent to the Postmaster-General, and Secretary J. O. Taft was directed to draft a formal protest in a letter to follow it. Other state associations, it was said, were taking similar action.

Among the papers and discussions at the two business sessions were the following: "What circulation managers gained through the National Convention at Atlanta," by James McKernan of the New York World.

"The best plan for encouraging independent carriers and country agents to obtain new business," by Charles E. Blewer of the Binghamton Press.

"Branch offices in towns of 5,000 to 50,000 and value of localized editions," by W. C. Hixson of the Syracuse Post-Standard.

"Experience with newsboy clubs," by all members.

Mr. Hixson was appointed chairman of the membership committee with E. C. Hanford, M. A. Condon, and A. W. Cockerill, associate members.

The convention committee contains F. A. Roberts, Charles E. Blewer and R. J. Bulger, and the auditing committee is made up of R. R. Cleland, Raymond Parramore and Martin A. Miner.

The April meeting of the association, a two-day conference, will be held in Buffalo on invitation of the united Buffalo newspapers.

WHAT CIRCULATORS GAINED BY MAKING THE TRIP TO ATLANTA THIS YEAR.

By JAMES MCKERNAN.

Circulation Manager of the New York World; Second Vice-President I. C. M. A.; Vice-President New York State Circulation Managers Association.

(Address at New York State Circulation Managers Association meeting, Syracuse, November 15.)

The recent convention of the International Circulation Managers Association, which was held in Atlanta, was typical of its conventions, inasmuch as there were numerous subjects discussed that dealt with the many problems which confront the circulation manager in the discharge of his duties. To enumerate each subject would be a task too large to undertake; therefore, I will only mention the general advantages gained by attending the convention.

There was and always is an opportunity given the members at the convention to ascertain how particular schemes or problems are handled by other men in the same business.

There is nothing that tends to broaden a man's ideas more than to hear a general discussion from various viewpoints and to learn of the other fellow's way of doing things.

The experiences in the different sections of the United States and Canada of members who represented papers that recently raised their selling price was very valuable information to the circulation manager, especially if his publisher contemplates similar action. This was gone over very thoroughly at Atlanta.

The handling of army camps—Are you sure you are doing this in the best way?

Would you like to know how it is being done elsewhere?

The question was discussed at Atlanta, and I am sure all who attended learned something new about this important subject.

Economy in running your department was another important subject. No one will deny the advantages accruing to members who can avail themselves of all improvements made in this particular line by members representing both small and large newspapers. The big fellows can often learn much from the little fellow on this subject.

One has only to look at the following partial list of papers read at this convention to satisfy himself of their importance and benefits to those hearing them discussed:

Effects of raising price of paper to two cents; methods of holding circulation in such cases.

Can one or more papers raise prices without concerted action?

The psychology of price raising.

Schemes for reducing circulation expenses.

Value of magazine clubbing offer to daily newspaper circulation.

Cooperation versus competition.

Are mailing machines a success?

Various methods of handling collections.

Various methods of organizing and handling city solicitors.

Bulletin service value to circulation.

Improving mail service.

New zone rate and how best to handle it.

The control of newsboys.

Best plan for "R.F.D." circulation.

These are only a few of the subjects discussed from different angles. I believe the answer to any one of them, if such a question was bothering a circulation manager for a correct solution, would more than pay his publisher for the time he spent in attending the convention, and it ought to convince any fair minded man that the journey was a profitable one—at any rate this was the consensus of opinion of those who attended.

ENCOURAGING THE CARRIERS

AND COUNTRY AGENTS TO GET NEW BUSINESS—THE INDEPENDENTS BEST.

By CHARLES E. BLEWER,

Circulation Manager Binghamton (N. Y.) Press.

(Address at New York State Circulation Managers Association meeting, Syracuse, November 15.)

I will not say that we have the best plan for independent carriers to secure new business, but think we have a very good one.

Previous to January 1, 1917, the Binghamton Press was a one-cent paper, and we paid our carriers $1.00 per week. While we got a fair delivery, it was not satisfactory, for we were unable to interest the boys sufficiently to make him do good work. It was also a difficult matter to keep our carrier list up to where it should be, as we sold papers to many salesboys, and they would work it among regular routes and get many of the subscribers. This made it necessary for us to send our canvassers at certain times to build up the routes.

The first of last January, we changed from a one-cent to a two-cent paper. We also put our carriers on an independent carrier basis. This was a very radical change to make at one time, but we had hopes that with the help of our carriers, and by arranging it so that they building up their routes, it would mean more money for them that we would get away with it without much loss of circulation—which we did.

Our circulation decreased about ten per cent the first two months. At the end of that time, we had adjusted ourselves to the new system and decided to put on promotion campaign for new business and make an effort to get back a portion of the subscribers who had stopped their paper on account of the increase in price. We all realized that the boy, properly handled, would be our greatest asset as a selling force.

To get the most work out of the boy, it is important to get as close to him as possible, making him feel that he is an important factor in the organization and impress him with the fact that to be successful he must have a perfect delivery of the paper.

Also show him if he is selling the papers daily he will make a certain amount, but if he can increase to seventy-five or 100 copies daily, he will earn that much more.

Show him the importance of being on time for his route every night and that he must get his papers delivered at a certain time, if possible, for there are certain "subs" who have to leave home at 4.30 or 5 o'clock, and they must have their papers before they go.

Make him feel that he will be well come to tell the circulation manager his troubles, and do the boy a favor if possible.

The circulation manager who follows the above suggestions is bound to get good results from his carriers, and they will respond and work for him every time he asks them to.

On March 1, 1917, we began a six weeks' contest with our boys, offering them twenty cents for each new subscriber who stayed on our list one month or more. We also put up three prizes for them to work for, which consisted of a gold watch, valued at $21, a sweater coat, valued at $8 and a pair of Boy Scout shoes, valued at $6.

The spirit and enthusiasm in which they entered this contest was splendid, and they brought in a total of 500 new subscriptions in the city alone. At the close of the contest, we gave the boys a banquet at the Y. M. C. A. Hall with music. Also several prominent men, some of whom had been former newsboys, gave them a talk along the line of service. We also distributed the prizes and the checks for commission that the boys had earned.

We have continued this policy with our boys to date and have just started our third contest, beginning November 5. The first week showed a gain of 100 new subscribers. I might also add that our city carrier list increased thirty-three per cent since January 1, 1917. This showing could not have been made with our former methods.

In the country towns, we get better results to use each town as a unit, for all the people in the town know the local boy, and if they do something for him they want him to win.

Follow the plan I have described in each separate town, and you are bound to get good results.

You will also get better service as we find that where the carrier solicits his own new business, he takes more pains in his delivery.

The motto of our circulation department is service, which we honestly try to give in every way.

EVENING PAPERS on RURAL ROUTES.

HOW ONE "WITH THE GOODS" CAN MAKE GOOD OVER
"A. M." COMPETITION.

By MARVIN A. MINER,
Circulation Manager Utica (N. Y.)
Observer.

(Address at New York State Circulation Managers Association meeting, Syracuse, November 15)

An evening newspaper can hold its own and make headway against morning competition.

Some cut their rates to a very low figure; some predate their last evening editions; others make a paper that appeals to some people they want to have on their lists and sell it to them on its merits or in connection with some premium or clubbing offer.

My paper endeavors to make an out-of-town edition that will interest every rural and small town newspaper reader in its territory. We charge our full price of $5 a year in the small towns where the paper is received the same day as published, and $4 a year on rural routes where the paper is received the next morning.

To stimulate rural and small town circulation, you must first get the co-operation of your news and editorial departments to produce a paper that will interest rural people.

Especially attention should be given the stock and market reports, as they are of vital interest to every farmer. Many farmers take a morning paper simply because it gives, as a rule, these reports very completely. But there is no reason why an evening paper cannot give him what he wants and needs and thus gain his subscription.

Correspondents should be secured in all small towns to furnish a letter of neighborhood gossip once or twice a week. Country people like to read about the little happenings and personal of the people they know, and such news is a big factor in circulation building.

Every newspaper has men on the road collecting and soliciting, and in addition to this work they should take the name of every non-reader. Lists of prospects can also be secured from your correspondents, farm directories, and various other sources.

During the fall and winter months these lists should be "hit up" with sample copies and letters setting forth the merits of your paper and also telling of any special offers you may have at that time.

Print an order blank across the bottom of your paper and always send a return envelope. Farmers aren't great letter writers as a rule, and the idea is to make it as easy as possible for their names to get on your list.

Magazine clubs can be used to advantage, and I have no doubt that premiums would go very well, too.

Sample copies sent a day or two in advance of your traveling man will help many an order along. By offering a liberal commission to postmasters many an order can be swung your way.

It is customary for evening papers to make a little lower rate to their rural route subscribers, as the paper is not delivered until the day after publication. This offsets the argument about your paper being a day late, etc., and is one of the best inducements you have.

These are some of the methods, described briefly, we have used.

They are not new or original with us, nor very startling, but they do bring in business.

The whole thing is this—An evening paper with the "goods" can get rural readers.

A.N.P.A. ADVICE ON PAPER CONTRACTS FOR 1918.

WHY MANUFACTURERS MUST MAKE NEWS PRINT—BAD LEGISLATION CAUSE FOR U.S. NON-INVESTMENT.

The American Newspaper Publishers Association's paper committee says that a further study of the market situation indicates that the advice of the paper committee for the past two weeks has been most timely in relation to next year's contracts.

The committee announces:

A large number of contracts have now been signed since this decision of the committee was announced under the terms which it indicated should be sought. Publishers are finding little difficulty in most orders in protecting themselves for next year under much more reasonable terms than they had anticipated.

"On the other hand, we hear, of course, the usual talk by manufacturers of drought and floods and labor trouble and the gross exaggerations of the ills to which they are subject, which under the glamor of present war conditions can be stretched even farther than usual.

"The Great Northern Paper Company apparently proposed the fairest method of charging two and one-half cents at the mill, plus increased costs for next year.

"Many well informed authorities claim that the only satisfactory way is to have some sort of an adjustable contract, which may be adjusted over short periods, or buying in the open market entirely.

"It is obviously unfair to the publisher to be forced to sign a contract today for paper to be delivered in the next twelve months under prospective conditions for which there is no precedent, and which can only be estimated and guessed at.

"Manufacturers naming prices under such conditions will, in addition to their very large profit, add every possible contingency as and if breaking against them, with the result that the publisher will pay for every contingency which can be thought possible at all for the entire year, whether it happens early or late in the year, or at all.

"For this basic reason, the paper committee believes that contracts should only be arranged for next year at a fair price and that the five per cent over-weight allowance should be reduced to a maximum overweight of one-half pound, or certainly not more than three per cent, which would be equal to approximately one pound, and that the average weight of the paper supplied must be 32 pounds on the basis of 34x26/500 sheets.

"Further figures show that consumption has been substantially decreased, and will doubtless continue, due to publishers increasing price, eliminating waste, returns and free copies, loss of circulation due to new postal rates and a further decrease in consumption, due to reduced advertising.

"During the past month, the advertising in many large cities, particularly New York, was kept up by the recent elections, but the real increase is much less than would be shown by the figures. In addition to this, we have increased production, a number of new mills coming on the market, Newfoundland paper—all of this coupled with decreased exports.

"Under the panicky conditions of last year's market at this time, publishers covered themselves even at the then existing fearfully high prices, for their maximum requirements. These savings effected a drop in business, which have had the result of building up enormous storage, so that it is now known that in the hands of the manufacturers, in transit and in publishers' warehouses, there are substantially 300,000 tons, or, roughly, a three months' supply.

NO WOOD SHORTAGE NEAR.

"The famous wood shortage, heralded broadcast by the manufacturing fraternity failed to materialize. Labor conditions, while very scarce and severe, have not been as bad as anticipated.

"Woods operations have been continued and all mills are getting in a satisfactory supply, although at increased prices. It is apparently possible at the present time that a serious wood situation may develop by a year from now but certainly not before.

There has been ample water in all the mills, particularly those United States mills in Wisconsin and northern New York, so that the supply and production of groundwood pulp is very much above normal and there are enormous stocks on hand, the aggregate of which is probably in the vicinity of 250,000 tons, single manufacturers having as much as 40,000 tons, so that the pulp supply for the coming year promises to be exceptionally good. Price dropped from $36 a ton at the mill to now about $30.

"The 'ghost from the closet,' which publishers have nearly always fallen for, of turning machines on to other grades is not and could not materialize.

"It would cost millions of dollars to turn any substantial number of these machines on to other grades of paper and in the case of practically all the good news print mills it would be almost impossible to do so. Their machines are built strictly for news print, have not an adjustable wire, the mills run on slush pulp and have little or no beating equipment and could not possibly make a higher grade of paper, or even a wrapping paper.

"Only the small, old mills, such as the International is so plentifully supplied with, could make any other sheet and its tonnage is always small, as can be seen by the fact that the International is today running fewer machines on news print than a year ago, but is making more news print paper. The only active news print mill to change has been Berlin, which had a sulphate mill to furnish the kraft pulp for wrapping paper.

"Now, there is sufficient paper on hand and sufficient production in sight for next year's business and sufficient raw materials assured to be able to say to these manufacturers that these inefficient marginal mills with their production are not needed in news print and it will certainly tend to a more staple and healthy condition in the news print manufacturing business for such mills to be in some other market, rather than always making news print under the menace of stopping if they do not get what they want.

"STUPID" LEGISLATION REASON FOR U. S. NON-INVESTMENT.

"These are the kind of mills that raised the holler about the Canadian tariff being taken off, and other developments which happened in the last few years. The real fact of the matter is that the only thing which ever scared capital in the United States from investing in news print mills was the unfortunate operation of these marginal mills, lack of satisfactory water power legislation and lack of adequate timber supply in the section of the United States where most of the paper was consumed.

"In the only part of the United States where there is any timber, viz., the Northwest, the water powers are all under such poor legislation that no mills could be developed.

"Instead of the Canadian tariff killing the mills in this country, it was stupid legislation and poor mill management.

"The publisher in the open market next year will have no difficulty if he handles his buying properly from being better protected than he would be under an iniquitous contract. If, however, he can make some equitable contract, such as the Great Northern proposed, he would of course be ill advised not to make such a contract.

"There is ample paper in sight and nothing to worry about for next year's supply. Manufacturers are much more reasonable, and apparently very anxious after they have made their 'killing,' to maintain more friendly relations for the future, and although it is a year late, still it is the hope of the paper committee, that such relations may now be established permanently and an equitable market maintained indefinitely."

EDITOR URGES LEAVE FOR CANADIAN VETERANS.

Stewart Lyon, managing editor of the Toronto Globe, is back in Toronto after spending almost a year with the Canadians at the front, as representative of the Canadian Press.

Mr. Lyon made a plea that those who remained of the first Canadians to see active service should be given an opportunity to visit their homes again.

"There is no military reason," said Mr. Lyon, "why they shouldn't come back."

U. S. NEWS PRINT IMPORTS AND EXPORTS INCREASE.

Reporting on news print imports and exports, the A.N.P.A. paper committee says:

"Imports show a substantial increase over last year, which will probably be maintained for the balance of the year.

"Exports, up to September, showed a decided decrease over the same period last year.

"The month of September shows the highest export record yet of 12,000 tons. This includes a large shipment of about 3,000 tons from the International Paper Company and some others to Australia, in addition to some unusual shipments.

"Last year, the month of August showed a very heavy export figure of 10,000 tons. This total of exports for September is probably only a temporary jump and the total exports to date are still somewhat under last year."

N. Y. PRINTERS ASK BIG INCREASE.

NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS IN MANY CITIES HAVE HAD TO RAISE WAGES.

In New York City, the newspaper scale committee that was appointed by President Rouse of Typographical Union No. 6, some time ago has finished its labors so far as the drafting of the document is concerned.

To begin with, it calls for $1 a day increase and at the same time reduces the hours of work for those laboring on the night and third shift one-half hour. The document also stipulates that during July and August (the two warmest as well as the dullest months of the year) an additional reduction on all shifts of one-half hour shall take place.

At a special meeting of the union an endeavor was made to go even farther by reducing the hours to seven on all shifts, but eventually the committee's report prevailed.

A new wage scale is being discussed by union printers in Hartford, Ct.

An increase of $3 per week has been granted by publishers in Port Arthur, Ont., making a flat scale of $26 per week.

A raise of $2 per week all around, the scale to be in effect from September, 1917, to September 1, 1919, has been granted in Coffeyville, Kan.

Increases from $1.50 to $3 per week are provided for in a one-year contract recently signed at Livingston, Mont.

A new scale, to cover the period from July 6, 1917, to July 6, 1919, with an increase of $1 per week all around, has been signed in Kankakee, Ill.

A wage contract to run for a year and a half has been signed with the employers, newspaper and book and job, of Kirksville, Mo., granting an increase of $1.50 per week all around.

Union printers of Marion, Ohio, have received a wage increase of $3 per week, on a contract running for five years from September 23, 1917. Beginning with the date of the agreement an increase of $2 per week became effective, and the further increase of $3 is spread over a three-year period, beginning September 23, 1919.

Foremen in book and job offices received an increase of $1 per week and all others in both newspaper and book and job offices an increase of $2 per week, through an agreement signed by the employers of Tuscaloosa, Ala. The contract runs for one year from October 1, 1917.

The Flint (Mich.) Daily Journal, the only daily newspaper in that city, has granted wage increases as follows: Until January 1, 1918, $24 per week; and for the following two years, $25. A scale of $22 per week,

Between Two Extremes*

ONE EXTREME is the system by which you cast and store fully a hundred times more display type than you actually need.

THE OTHER EXTREME is the system of buying foundry display type at a cost which keeps quantities down to the minimum—you never have enough in an emergency.

THE LUDLOW TYPOGRAPH is the happy medium because it is midway between the two extremes of too much and not enough.

The Ludlow Typograph

The Ludlow Typograph provides an unlimited quantity of type; requires only the metal that actually goes into the forms; and needs practically no storage space.

A request for Ludlow Typograph literature will bring you the complete information.

an increase of $4, was agreed upon for proofreaders.

Printers employed on the San Diego (Cal.) Morning and Evening Tribune and the Evening Sun, the two first-named Spreckles papers and the latter owned by the Scripps-McRae League, were informed on October 1 that their pay would be increased 25 cents per day. Six months hence, if business warrants, the management of the Union and Tribune said a similar increase would take place. The men donated the first day's increase to the soldiers' tobacco fund.

The Tulsa (Okla.) Times and Democrat, morning and evening, have raised wages of all composing-room employees $2 per week, making the rate of pay $27 and $30 for day and night work, respectively, and the raise on the World, morning, also is $2 per week above the scale. The Mid-West Printing Company and the Democrat job office are paying $27 a week, which is an increase of $3 over the scale.

A new scale to be in effect for one year has been agreed to in Orange, N. J. Hand compositors in book and job offices will receive $23 per week and machine operators $25. Night rates are $3 per week over the old scale. The increase amounts to $2 and $2.50 per week, respectively, for hand and machine men.

The new union at Sherbrooke, Province of Quebec, has been granted the eight-hour day and an increase in pay of from $3 to $6 per week.

An increase of $4 per week for floormen and $2 for machine operators and foremen has been agreed to in Beaver Valley, Pa., for the years 1918, 1919 and 1920.

Rahway, N. J., has a new scale, with an increase of $1 per week for floormen and book and jobbers, the wage being $23 per week.

Roger Daniels, formerly reporter on the Savannah Press, now is state director of publicity in Georgia for the Young Men's Christian Association. His headquarters are in Atlanta, but he spends most of the time in the field, particularly at Fort Oglethorpe.

John K. Allen, a Boston advertising man, is covering the publicity in the military department of the Northeast for the thirty-five million dollar War Work Fund campaign, carried on by the Young Men's Christian Association, November 11-19.

Leon M. Wickersham of the Wilmington (Del.) Star, is handling the publicity for the fund in Delaware.

SOLDIERS' WEEKLY HAS NEW NAME.

The ? ? ? , the weekly newspaper of the 1st and 2d provisional regiments, New York Guard, doing duty along the state's aqueduct and barge canal now has a real name and will henceforth be known as the Watchdog.

An award of $25 was promised to the soldier who would suggest a name satisfactory to the contest board, but the latter had to go outside the names submitted. The prize was awarded to the board, but the $25 was declined, and it was unanimously voted that the money be given to the Watchdog to aid in further financing it.

GERMAN EDITOR INTERNED.

Max Lucke, former editor of the Portland (Ore.) Deutsche Zeitung, now suspended, was arrested on November 8 and will be interned for the period of the war. Of late Mr. Lucke has been editing a German weekly.

SOME NEW BOOKS

"ACCOUNTING PRINCIPLES," by Samuel F. Racine, C. P. A.; Western Institute of Accountancy, Commerce and Finance, publisher.

In the production of this book, the fifth in Mr. Racine's "Accounting Students' Series," particular study was made of the published examination papers of recent years, and the salient features of these papers were brought into the volume. Instructors and students using this book find it valuable.

"PSYCHOLOGY," by Burtis Burr Breese, professor of psychology in the University of Cincinnati; Charles Scribner's Sons, publishers.

This text aims to give a comprehensive view of the facts, principles and theories of human psychology. Representing, as it does, the various points of view of modern psychology—the analytic and the descriptive, the structural and the functional, the genetic and the physiological—the study of mental life.

"MANUAL OF MILK PRODUCTS," by William A. Hocking, professor of dairy industry at Cornell University; the Macmillan Company, publisher.

This new work is intended to serve as a reference book covering the entire subject of milk and its products. The book is the eighth volume in the "Rural Manuals" edited by L. H. Bailey, one of the foremost authorities on agricultural science, and maintains the excellent standard already established by the earlier volumes of the series.

MURPHY FILES COMPLAINT IN LIBEL SUIT.

The complaint in the $500,000 libel suit of Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, against the Press Publishing Company, because of the publication in the New York Evening World on October 22 last of an editorial containing alleged remarks by ex-Chief of Police William S. Devery concerning Mr. Murphy, was filed on November 13 in the Supreme Court.

The complaint quotes the alleged libelous articles, and alleges that "the statements set forth purport to connect the plaintiff with certain pool-rooms, amounting to charges that the plaintiff had been guilty of crimes and of violations of the penal law and the penal code." The complaint is signed by Mr. Murphy.

FIFTY YEARS' SERVICE TO SOUTH AND NATION.

ATLANTA CONSTITUTION'S BIRTHDAY RECALLS CITY'S VERY INTERESTING JOURNALISTIC HISTORY.

By SAMUEL W. SMALL,

A member of the news staff of the Constitution in its pioneer days.

In 1868 the mad orgy of "Southern reconstruction," under the legislation of the rampant radical Republicans of the "rump congress," was just getting under full headway.

It was in the midst of that confusion of government and of political counsels that the people of Georgia began to organize their scattered forces and recover courage to assert their constitutional rights, with the intention to regain the control of the state and destroy the rule by carpet-baggers.

With the assurance that the states of the South were to be soon accorded representation in the Government, even though upon terms dictated by aliens, there arose a general desire for a press leadership at Atlanta, that had been made the state's capital by military action. The real people of Georgia demanded a voice at the center of political power, by which they could utter their convictions, register their protests and promote measures for regaining their right to rule the state.

The answer to that demand was the establishment of the Constitution on June 18, 1868, by a small company of determined men.

Colonel Carey W. Styles was the prime mover in the adventure and the paper began its daily career upon a very precarious foundation, trusting almost wholly to the patriotic devotion and sacrifices of an impoverished but "unreconstructed" constituency.

The times were exceedingly parlous, the powers dominant were sure to be hostile and unscrupulous in devices of oppression and suppression, and threats were not lacking that the paper would be quickly strangled.

MAN FOR EMERGENCY.

Colonel Carey W. Styles had been a Confederate soldier and officer with no doubt at any time of his courage and dogged stubbornness. He had an active brain, a fiery temper and reckless daring in the use of both words and weapons. He was just the sort of spirit the emergency and the enterprise called for. After many vicissitudes of fortune he passed out of life in the Soldier's Home in Austin, Tex., some years ago, but it is just to him to say that at the most critical juncture of Georgia's history his voice was that of her Roderick Dhu.

During the year that he stood at the helm of the Constitution occurred the Presidential campaign of 1868—a campaign that was full of excitement because it was the first one after the conclusion of the Civil War and in which most of the Southern statesmen were permitted to take part by electing electors.

The fact that Georgia in Republican control, "went Democratic," was attributed in main to the strenuous and brilliant fight made by the Constitution, which had sprung into widespread popularity among the people and whose power as their champion was admitted and felt sorely by their opponents.

Scarcely a day of that birth year, 1868-9, of the Constitution was barren of some sensation affecting the domestic or political life of the people of Georgia, and how faithfully every vital event was reported and the interests of its constituents represented by this newspaper can only be understood by one familiar with its files of that era.

It may be of interest to note that on the same day, perhaps, that the Constitution was born, the Louisville Courier-Journal also appeared, control of the two journals so hyphenated having been acquired by Henry Watterson, who had given up his partnership in the Nashville Banner in order to command the larger vantage point on the Southern bank of the Ohio. Since then Colonel Watterson has made his paper famous around the globe and is now the one great editor whose name is more often used than that of his paper in quoting its utterances.

When Colonel Styles, in the face of the notorious "Black Friday" panic, when gold reached 164 on Wall street decided that he could no longer finance the Constitution, he transferred his holdings to Colonel J. H. Anderson, whose patriotism and fine business abilities prompted him to keep the paper in action.

Colonel Anderson associated as his partner his son-in-law, Colonel William A. Hemphill, who had been a gallant Confederate artillery officer and wore in one cheek a deep scar that testified how nearly he had given the supreme sacrifice of courage and duty. He came from a teacher's desk to the business table of the Constitution, and for more than thirty years his watchworks brain and steady guiding hand piloted the paper over financial shoals and across quicksands of competition that threatened sure disaster scores of times, and, probably under other pilotage would have planted the paper in the once notorious Atlanta "newspaper graveyard." His close economies, his fine personal integrity and the confidence of the business world about him made him the right man for the precarious journey any daily paper in the South was fated to make in those days to a position of security.

The retirement of Colonel Anderson left Colonel Hemphill as the principal owner of the paper. He called to its editorial head Colonel Isaac W. Avery, who had been one of "Morgan's men" in the war, and who was a keen and brilliant editorial writer.

Later on he was called to other engagements, and Colonel Edward Y. Clarke purchased an interest in the paper from Colonel Hemphill and became its managing editor.

In 1871 the Republican machine in the state began to break down, and on the last day of October the Constitution announced the startling news that Governor Bullock had resigned the night before and fled the state. This was a great triumph for the Constitution, for it had fought Bullockism night and day from its inception.

About these times arose a fierce competition between the daily newspapers in Atlanta for the patronage of the reviving people, especially in southwest Georgia.

The railway schedules out of Macon to the Southward were such as to make it impossible for the Atlanta morning papers to reach Macon and get South of that city before the night trains of the same day.

In order to overcome that handicap and meet the intense demand for newspapers from the capital city, where important events were constantly occurring, the Atlanta newspapers began to hire special trains—an engine and car—to carry their papers to Macon on fast runs to catch the morning trains to the southwest and southeast Georgia. The early morning races to get "off the press" first and start the first train became a state-wide sensation, and many thrilling adventures marked the rivalry, but the most thrilling thing about the contest was the daily scuffling to get the money in each office to pay the heavy and exhausting tolls charged by the railroads for the extraordinary service.

In the end the Constitution won out and not only saw its competitors distanced and defeated, but fortunately succeeded in securing such changes of schedules as to finally put it independent of all competitors.

One of the contributing factors to the victory of the Constitution was the advent of Colonel N. P. T. Finch, an able writer from New York, brother of the author of "The Blue and the Gray" poem, who brought money enough to buy a respectable block of stock in the paper at this critical juncture. Colonel Finch remained as chief editorial writer until after Colonel Clarke had sold his interest to Captain Evan P. Howell in 1876, and then, in 1877, Colonel Finch sold out to Henry W. Grady and retired for some years, later becoming editorial writer on the Birmingham Age-Herald.

CONSTITUTION REORGANIZED.

When Captain Howell—who, returning from the war, became city editor of the Atlanta Intelligencer, then Atlanta's only daily, giving him an acquaintance with journalism, and who had lately been solicitor general of the circuit and state senator—took active management of the paper as president and editor-in-chief, he began a thorough reorganization of its forces.

He it was who negotiated the purchase of the Finch interest by Henry W. Grady, whom Captain Howell had brought to the Constitution as a special writer, and between whom, until death broke the bond, there existed an attachment of the keenest affection.

Grady had already become famous among Georgians by his connection with other papers, notably the Atlanta Herald, as co-partner of the brilliant and ill-fated Colonel Robert A. Alston. He possessed one of the most fertile and versatile minds ever produced in the South, was owner of an ornate and picture-projecting vocabulary, a keen appreciation of news values and his associations with public men gave him outlooks upon events especially such as "cast their shadows before them" that were fairly prophetic and almost statesmanlike.

Grady was passionately devoted to Atlanta and to Georgia, and, in fact, to both the South and the nation. He used the columns of the Constitution with tremendous power to promote the Atlanta spirit, to make Georgia a merca for capital and enterprises, to vindicate the loyalty of the people of the South, and to put them in line with cosmopolitan patriotism.

In all those remarkable campaigns inaugurated for such purposes he had the sympathetic and wise support of Captain Howell, who was pre-eminently astute in political matters and had an acute judgment over men and measures in every field where his paper exerted influence.

Among those who became interested financially in the Constitution during the era in question were Albert Howell, Sr., brother of Colonel Evan P. Howell. He sold afterwards to Sam and Hugh T. Inman, while Clark Howell, Jr., son of Colonel E. P., acquired three shares of the Finch stock, the major part of which had been bought by Grady.

The yellow fever epidemic on the coast in 1878 caused Joel Chandler Harris, then engaged upon the Savannah News, to seek refuge in Atlanta. Harris had been associated there with Colonel W. T. Thomson, the author of the famous humorous adventures of "Major Jones," and the quiet fun in both had found frequent ebullition in the columns of the News. Indeed, Harris had become very popular as a paragrapher of state news, which then was a prominent feature of all daily newspapers.

UNCLE REMUS.

Captain Howell made successful proposal to Harris to join the staff of the Constitution as a general writer and paragrapher on the editorial page, and thus the future classic folk-lore humorist of the South began to reach that national audience that now was being acquired by the Constitution under the popular names of Howell and Grady. And it was in the Constitution that Harris' immortal "Uncle Remus" sketches first appeared.

During all those first thirty years of its career the Constitution had been bucking the varying hard times of the South and the country, slowly gathering a constituency that rallied to its every slogan and surviving perhaps the most persistent efforts at competition ever encountered by a daily newspaper outside of New York city or Chicago during those same years. The history of those competitions in Atlanta would make a fascinating story to a modern journalist.

Readers may recall the first snuffing out of the old Intelligencer, conducted by Colonel Jared I. Whitaker, a journalist of the stately ante-bellum "pistols and coffee-for-one" style.

Then Colonel Sam Bard, who had become an emergency Republican, ex-governor of the territory of Idaho, and now Grant-appointed postmaster of Atlanta, printed his New Era, that succumbed promptly when Colonel Bard became separated from the national pay roll.

Georgia's final status politically was yet hanging fire in Congress, and that aroused the ire of Alexander Hamilton Stephens, former vice-president of the Confederacy, now restored to political rights, but who, with Herschel V. Johnson, had been refused the seats in the United States Senate to which they had been chosen by the legislature assembled by President Johnson "to restore the state in the Union."

Mr. Stephens was determined to fight for the rights of Georgia and her sisters in plight, and concluded that the way to win the battle was to establish a newspaper in Atlanta and bombard the radicals with incontestable constitutional arguments. So he founded the Atlanta Sun, that began to shine in red-hot style.

The political admirers of Mr. Stephens supported him bravely for a season, and his lengthy editorials, signed "A. H. S.," became the temporary wonder of the state and eventually the journalistic joke of all the prominent newspaper sanctuaries of the nation. His money soon failed and that of his immediate friends could not stand the steady and fierce drain upon a daily newspaper exchequer, so the Sun soon went down to rise no more.

Then in varied successions some of the most versatile and impecunious "trained journalists" of Georgia and the South tackled the problem of taking the field from the Constitution—that by now was acknowledged to be the standard daily of the state.

The most ambitious and temporarily serious of these undertakings were the Atlanta News, by Alex St. Clair Abrams, the Atlanta Herald, by "Bob" Alston and Henry W. Grady—and it was after its death that Captain Howell brought Grady to the Constitution—that had a brief and bailiff-chased career under Colonel B. F. Sawyer; the Daily Capital, under Charles S. Atwood, whose busy legs were his chief capital, but his venture was also captured by the mortgage-master; the Post-Appeal, by Colonel Marcellus E. Thornton, then by David E. Caldwell, made a bold bid for permanency, but could not stand the pace and, I think, was eventually absorbed into what is now the Atlanta Journal, the sole and successful survivor of a steeplechase pack of papers, such as Telegrams, Evening Herald, Gazettes and others "too numerous to mention" as the sheriff might have stated upon the vendue bills that wound up the affairs of most of them.

GENIUS OF GRADY.

The genius of Henry W. Grady for journalism was peculiarly suited to his time after he found his place on the Constitution, unembarrassed by financial shackles upon his news enterprises. In close working harness with Captain Evan Howell, whose common sense, even balance, and remarkable power for leadership was a marvel, the two soon lifted the paper to a place in the sun of national recognition and power.

What Grady wrote obtained quotation everywhere, while invitations arrived from all sections, South and North, for addresses upon special occasions and at important public functions. These things brought subscribers and advertisers to the paper out of fields that no other Southern journal had been able to reach, and the circulation and prosperity of the Constitution not only increased by leaps, but became large and constant.

Captain Howell impressed Grady with the fact that the prosperity of the people to be served must be the sure basis of the paper's own prosperity. Therefore, while other editors were grinding out encyclopedic editorials in their hidden sanctums, burying their faces in exchanges and sitting in clubs or public offices listening to the jowling of obsolete politicians, Howell and Grady were busy among the people who were bringing things to pass.

They went in and out among the railway men and boosted whatever those managers did that would benefit the Southern farmers, factors, or towns, especially Atlanta; then they would detect some injustice in railway rates or management and would jump upon it with such publicity and protests as to force corrections; they attended county fairs, state fairs and farmers' conventions and made the Constitution the alert and faithful friend of the farmers—and were the pioneers in making farm news and counsel a paramount feature in their publications.

They made it their rule not to miss any important political gathering and college commencements and public school celebrations could make sure of either their presence or a personal representative from the Constitution. Nothing that was of interest to the people was alien to either of them, and under their policy the popularity of the paper grew nation-wide.

NOTABLE ENTERPRISE.

Several notable instances of enterprise by the Constitution should not escape worthy treatment in any history, either of the paper itself or the progress of the state.

In 1877 a constitutional convention was called to Atlanta to revise and amend the constitution of the state.

Recognizing how tremendously concerned were the substantial people of Georgia in the labors and product of this fateful convention, Captain Howell, upon the suggestion of the writer of this, who was then a reporter of the Constitution, and a skilled stenographer, decided to have a verbatim report of its proceedings printed daily in the Constitution, so that the people of the state might know from day to day what was being said and done in the making of their new constitution.

He undertook a labor and expense that had never before been tried outside of the national Congress. The venture proved sensational, popular and wise, the circulation of the Constitution was greatly augmented and the volume of debates that resulted has since been a vade mecum to the legislatures and courts of Georgia in defining and construing the purposes of those great constitution makers.

The next great adventure championed and made actual by the influence of the Constitution was the first "International Cotton Exposition," held in Atlanta in 1881.

The old office of the Constitution that had been the theater of its struggles and triumphs for so many eventful years had grown too small for its expanding business by 1883 and the new building was begun, and completed and occupied in 1884—as it now stands at the corner of West Alabama and Forsyth streets.

It became a center of state and Southern influence and in its offices many strenuous and notable political campaigns were projected and managed to victory. One of the great events of its first years' occupancy was a famous celebration of the election of Cleveland to the Presidency—the first Democrat chosen to that office since the Civil War.

GETS TRAINING IN THE EAST.

In the summer of 1883 Clark Howell, Jr., son of Captain Evan P. Howell, but "junior" to his greatly beloved and honored grandfather, was graduated by the University of Georgia, after completing the course of the Atlanta public schools. He had determined while yet in the Atlanta High School to follow journalism as a profession, and employed all his studies to that end.

He was already familiar with the personnel and workings of the Constitution, but he desired training in cosmopolitan schools, and to obtain it he went East and worked zealously under the managing editors of the New York Times and the Philadelphia Press for about a year. Having familiarized himself with the most modern methods of searching out and handling news, he returned to Atlanta in the spring of 1884 to take the place his devoted father had been preparing for him. His first billet was that of night news editor, but soon after he became the regular night editor, and later the assistant of Grady as managing editor.

Between Grady and the younger Howell there was the same confidence and accord as between Grady and the elder Howell, so that as the public calls upon both Captain Howell and Grady became multiplied and they were frequently abroad filling such requisitions, the full burden of conducting the paper frequently rested upon the brain and hands of Clark Howell.

Grady especially was in constant demand for orations in many of the greater cities, and for that reason he freely trusted to his facile and accomplished lieutenant and so the latter came to be the reliable governor of the mechanism of the great journal when but little more than twenty-four years of age.

When in December of 1889, as the Christmas eve cheer was permeating the homes of the nation, the spirit of Grady, the "Apostle of the New South" and of the reunion of peace and patriotism, passed into the mysterious bourne, followed by nationwide grief, it was the natural thing that he should have no other as his logical successor than Clark Howell, who thereupon became the responsible managing editor of the paper.

Thus, within half a dozen years this young university alumnus had forged his meritorious way to the full generalship of a great daily that had by his help come already to popular fame as "The Standard Newspaper of the South."

WIDELY QUOTED.

And that, be it truthfully recorded, was no self-assumed flamboyant title, because no newspaper in the South and few in America have ever had consistently upon its staff writers of such national favor and fame as the Constitution. No other Southern journal has been as widely and constantly quoted, had its special arti-

STRIKE! STRIKE NOW!! STRIKE HARD!!!

Congress is about to convene and newspaper publishers should at once in their own interest impress upon their Senators and Representatives the immediate necessity of enacting such laws as will enable the unused water powers owned by "Uncle Sam" to be developed along such lines as will enlist capital and make possible the utilization of the vast paper making timbers now waiting, some of which is dying and going to waste.

These immense resources would be enhanced in value by intelligent cutting, as has been demonstrated in foreign countries.

Conservation should mean intelligent utilization instead of wasteful stagnation.

For example, the forest reserves of New York State are suffering because no one is permitted to even remove dead, down, or rotten timber.

Could any one conceive of a more assinine or unintelligent statutory condition? Yet this was and is the result of activities of a class of fanatical people calling themselves conservationists.

No Senator or Representative would deliberately turn the newspaper publishing interests over to the tender mercies of our friends the Canadian paper manufacturers. Yet their failure to afford the relief asked for will work to exactly that end.

Encourage capital to embark in the paper making business.

Encourage the development of new tonnage in this country so that we may abandon the policy of price fixing, which will ultimately drive every one out of the news print making industry and leave us absolutely at the mercy of other countries.

Never for a moment lose sight of that fundamental principle so well expressed by the celebrated T. P. O'Connor in one of his so-called "Irish Bulls": "No matter what our relations in life may be, that which is good for you and is not good for me is not good for either of us."

Encourage increased production so that the free play of the law of supply and demand may afford us all the relief possible.

Sixty millions is the estimated potential water horse-power of the United States.

present being availed of through electrical development.

Dependable estimates show that thirty-five million water horse power can be developed as soon as the necessary Federal authority is secured.

Bills now pending in Congress, the passage of which will place the requisite authority in the hands of the Departments of War and Interior, adequately protect the public interest and at the same time assure the early development of these water powers.

At least 500,000 horse-power is located adjacent to paper making timber, where the powers could be developed at extremely low initial unit cost and with timber supply, barring fires, in perpetuity.

This development alone would provide us with 5,000 tons per day of news print paper.

There should be no question as to early action and the conditions should be so attractive that immediate action will ensue.

A prominent public man has said: "Development has been held back by a little group of water power magnates and their friends in Congress who have blocked all legislation which would not give them these valuable properties forever and for nothing."

If the newspaper publishers in this country are alive to their own interests, each and every one of them will actively and affirmatively, right now, inform their Senators and Representatives of what all this means, for it is inconceivable that this water power legislation shall be longer delayed when they know the facts.

It is up to you, Mr. Publisher, for if you "let George do it" you will finally pay the piper.

GOVERNMENT BRANDS LIGHT ADVERTISING AS A WASTE.

The use of coal in the production of electricity for non-essential purposes is curtailed throughout the United States in an order issued November 9 by Fuel Administrator Garfield.

The order will prevent the lighting of advertising signs and other outdoor electrical display until 7.45 at night, and they will be forced to darken at 11 o'clock at night.

It is estimated that this order will save fifty per cent of the fuel now used in maintaining this class of electrical display.

Dr. Garfield is anxious to avoid interference with legitimate business just as far as possible, but he is determined to see that the industries essential to the conduct of the war and the domestic consumers of the country have the coal they need.

The order makes an exception of signs maintained by small merchants for the purpose of directing customers to their places of business.

These, if not of an unreasonable size, will be permitted to continue while the establishment is open for business.

Experts have determined that at least 250,000 tons of coal per year are used for this display electric lighting. This amount, it is estimated, would keep 100,000 people warm throughout the winter.

A committee of the gas and electric service companies of the country co-operated with the Fuel Administration in determining the need for a limitation on coal consumed in supplying current for the outdoor display lighting, and the restrictive order has the approval of this committee.

It is expected that the restrictive order will result in an incidental reduction in addition to the fifty per cent curtailment directly ordered.

With the effectiveness of the display signs cut in two, it is probable that advertisers will reduce their use of outdoor displays, which is purely and simply a waste of national resources.

This offers a splendid chance for newspapers to educate electric sign advertisers in the value of newspaper space.

It's a safe bet that they won't go back to old methods—if the newspapers take proper advantage of their opportunity.

THE BOOK PAPER MAKERS WILL BE GOOD.

If only the news print situation was in as satisfactory a shape as the book paper situation there would be signs of relief in the vicinity of the Federal Trade Commission. It has been apparent to the Trade Commission ever since formal "complaint" was filed against the book paper manufacturers and their Bureau of Statistics, that the producers in this section of the industry have no disposition to assume any such attitude of defiance toward the trade body as has characterized certain news print manufacturers since indictments were returned in New York.

As a Trade Commissioner has expressed it for THE FOURTH ESTATE:

"The book paper manufacturers in effect deny that they have done the things that we said they did, but they clearly convey their promise not to do them in the future."

The virtual abandonment of the Bureau of Statistics and the shift of its erstwhile secretary, Charles F. Moore, to other activities is accounted at the Trade Commission the keynote to an attitude of virtual compliance on the part of the book print men. To be sure, only twenty-three out of forty important book paper manufacturing concerns have been members of the association known as the Bureau of Statistics.

However, the twenty-three producers are accounted a "majority" in every sense of the word, their aggregate output being 2,200 tons daily out of a total of 3,000 tons daily for the full two-score manufacturers, so that it is reasonable to assume that the twenty-three firms will set the pace for the industry in all phases of sales policy as well as in bowing to the mandate of the Trade Commission.

It will be recalled that ostensibly the function of the Bureau of Statistics, Book Paper Manufacturers, upon which the Trade Commission prosecution was hinged, was merely the gathering and disseminating of statistical information. The Trade Commission investigators did not mince words in declaring that the facts indicate that "the activities transcend such declared purpose." Indeed, the suspicion of the Trade Commission was aroused by the coincidence that the sharp advances in paper prices that occurred in 1916 almost invariably followed meetings of the Bureau of Statistics at the Vanderbilt Hotel, in New York.

Perhaps the most important thing that has happened recently with respect to the Trade Commission's police work on the paper beat has been an open-and-shut acknowledgement from one of the leaders of the opposition to the effect that the trade body was strictly within its rights when it brought up short C. F. Moore, the secretary of the misnamed Bureau of Statistics.

The association of paper manufacturers that made up the bureau employed camouflage to the extent that the association was unincorporated and had neither constitution nor by-laws. No minutes or records of meetings were kept. The only officer was the secretary and the only office his office.

When the Trade Commission sought to come down on the secretary there was, consequently, more or less talk in paper trade circles to the effect that "it can't be done"—argument that there was nothing to get hold of.

However, the Trade Commission had come to the conclusion that, whereas ostensibly the duties of the secretary were to compile and distribute statistical information, in reality his role was to encourage, by correspondence and personal solicitation, the raising of prices by members.

Now after the bluff has been called, comes an attorney for the paper interests and acknowledges publicly that the Trade Commission was right. Appearing before the trade body in another case and speaking on the broad subject of the jurisdiction of the commission, Gilbert H. Montague digressed, the other day, to say:

"Take, for example, your book paper case. In your theory of that case that you did have jurisdiction under the act you were unmistakably right on one proposition and that was in putting in as one of the respondents Charles F. Moore, who is merely an individual, who is merely secretary of an association, who himself nor his association is engaged in interstate commerce. But you very properly held that even though he himself was not engaged in interstate commerce he was doing some kind of act which in your theory did interfere with the interstate commerce of somebody else. It is a perfectly clear principle and you are absolutely sound on it. It happens to be the first instance in which you did it and I think you were eternally right on that proposition."

NOTE AND COMMENT.

The City Council of Panama has issued a decree that in the future no signs or advertisements will be permitted in public places unless the owners sign a contract with the municipality for the display. Commercial signs in front of places of business are excepted from this ruling, but they are to pay a tax of $1 a month. Payment of this fee in advance will reduce it to $10 a year. All signs displayed in public places must bear a stamp showing compliance with the decree, and must be in Spanish. The text in a foreign language, however, may be placed directly under the Spanish working, if desired.

The display of signs, posters or advertisements containing mistakes is prohibited and is penalized by fines.

The W. D. McJunkin Advertising Agency, Mallery Building, Chicago, claims the distinction of having prepared the first advertising campaign for the sale and distribution of human skeletons. The agency has just completed the preparation of such a campaign for Truax of Chicago, dealer in physicians' supplies, and the skeleton copy will appear shortly in a number of medical magazines.

The copy writers on the skeleton job were compelled to rely entirely upon their own resources, there being absolutely no precedents to govern such advertising.

Before the war newspapers were not sold on the streets of Amsterdam, but only at news-stands and publication offices. The war has produced street sales—not only by newsboys, but by men and women.

They are not as numerous, as in the United States and England, however, for as a rule the Dutch people are regular subscribers to the journals that they read.

Until a few months ago the price of the newspaper sold on the street was five Dutch cents (two American).

Then it was raised to six Dutch cents, and today it has been advanced to seven and one-half (three American).

This applies to the principal daily newspapers.

The advance is made by the publishers because of the increasing cost of paper and other items. The price to regular subscribers, advanced ten per cent in 1916, is not changed at present. It ranges from $1.35 to $1.75 per quarter, according to the newspaper.

This subscription price covers a morning and an evening edition every day except Sunday and Monday, which have one edition each, and except on several holidays in the course of the year, when one or both editions are omitted. The week-day morning issue consists of four to six pages; the Sunday, eight to twelve. The evening edition, which is the most important, consists of ten to fourteen pages.

For a village of less than 800 inhabitants and five and a half miles from a railroad, Raritan, Ill., has fully contributed its quota to the newspaper fraternity.

Among those who once made their home in or near Raritan, who published newspapers, are: J. C. Coulson of the LaHarpe (Ill.) LaHarper; A. H. Kershaw of the Stronghurst (Ill.) Graphic; C. E. Pendarvis of the Media (Ill.) Record; W. H. Bonham of the Deadwood (S. D.) Pioneer-Times and F. L. Basco of Dice, Ill., retired.

The Standard Oil Company published a page advertisement in New York newspapers this week in honor of its employees with the colors. The name of each man was printed under the following announcement:

"In this space we have hitherto listed the dealers who distribute 'Socony' Motor Gasoline. We now take pride in listing the names of more than 300 men from the Standard Oil Company of New York who have entered the service of their country. We know they will serve their colors as capably as they served us."

In advising publishers that they are going to launch a very extensive advertising campaign in leading national magazines exploiting Riley's Works, Harper & Brothers offer newspaper publishers an advertisement to run whatever space available will permit, agreeing to pay for same twenty-five per cent for each order received and passed for the set of books. They go one better by submitting a similar proposition on Mark Twain.

Emphasis is placed on the big chance for publishers to make money on this proposition!

It will be interesting to learn what publishers accept it.

Co-operation among its departments secured a perfect record in the publication of the Toledo Blade during October, 1917. The Blade issues seven editions daily. Not a single edition was late in October.

The record was due not only to fine co-operation among the departments but to the loyal co-operation of advertisers as well. It was accomplished, too, in face of the fact that October was one of the heaviest advertising months in the Blade's history. It shows a high standard of shop spirit.

The Blade maintains an operating chart which is consulted daily by the heads of departments. The chart stimulates each department to strive for perfect record.

John R. Rathom, editor of the Providence (R. I.) Journal, will tell how he exposed German plots in this country through a series of articles in the World's Work.

CHANGE IN THE NEW YORK EVENING MAIL STOCK.

Notice of an agreement to reduce the capital stock of the S. S. McClure Newspaper Corporation, publishing the Evening Mail, from $3,000,000 to $100,000 was filed November 12 at the office of the secretary of state of New York. In the original articles of incorporation, 30,000 shares of stock were listed; 20,000 preferred and 10,000 common. Only a portion of this stock had been issued. The S. S. McClure Newspaper Corporation is a holding company.

The stock of the Mail and Express Company was increased from $400,000 to $1,250,000; $1,000,000 of common and $250,000 of preferred.

CANADIAN PUBLISHERS AID VICTORY LOAN.

The publishers of Canada are doing everything in their power to make the Victory Loan campaign the success hoped for. They are devoting much space in their editorial and news columns to the subject, and the advertising departments are making every endeavor to persuade clients to devote a large part of their space to the appeal: "Buy a Bond." In the latter regard, many papers have carried full page advertisements blocked off into cards in which the Victory Loan is the sole topic of the various space users, and many of the large firms which seldom advertise in the regular way have made big displays.

Many of the publishers have made it possible for some of their employees who, perhaps, would not otherwise be in a position to do so, to purchase bonds, offering them the "dollar a week plan."

Among those may be mentioned the Ottawa Journal Publishing Company, which has offered to buy bonds for its employees and deduct the amount involved at the rate of $1 per week per bond. In such a case, of course, the publisher loses the amount of interest on principal, as no deduction is made for this carrying charge.

The papers are "doing their utmost"—a phrase which is now replacing "doing their bit"—towards making the Victory Loan a success.

IOWANS CONFER NEXT WEEK.

The third annual conference of Iowa newspaper men will be held at the University of Iowa, in Iowa City, on November 23 and 24.

E. W. Williams, editor of the New Carlisle (Ohio) Sun, has been elected a justice of the peace.

The board of directors of the Advertising Club of New York has unanimously recommended raising the dues of the association to $50 annually, including the war tax on membership. A meeting of the club has been called for December 12, for the purpose of making the necessary amendment to the constitution and by-laws.

Norman B. Hickox is now sales and advertising manager of the National X Ray Reflector Company, Chicago. Hugh D. Butler, formerly manager of the Chicago sales department, has been made assistant sales manager and is succeeded as Chicago sales manager by Guy R. Hastings, formerly assistant manager of that department.

E. E. Reed, formerly of the Hamilton Advertisers Agency, Hamilton, Ont., is now in the sales department of the F. F. Dalley Company, Ltd., Hamilton, maker of "2-in-1 Shoe Polish."

At a meeting of the Minneapolis Advertising Forum held on November 8, John H. Mitchell, president of the Mitchell Advertising Agency, spoke on the advertising campaign for the recent Liberty Loan. An interesting feature of his address was the exhibiting of a roll of paper, upon which was pasted all of the advertising used to urge Minneapolis people to buy the Government bonds. The long roll, when unwound, circled three times the long tables set for the ad men.

Benjamin G. Lee of the L. S. Donaldson Company, chairman of the meeting, addressed the Forum on "Institutional advertising," which, he said, "is a creator of good will not only toward the products a store sells and the manufacturers of those products, but toward the store itself."

Institutional advertising, as it is seen by manufacturers, was taken up by William B. Morris of the Northwestern Knitting Company.

C. E. Greenfield, formerly manager of the automobile advertising department of the Milwaukee Journal, has joined the Chicago office of Omara & Ormsbee, special newspaper representatives.

No advertising manager has as yet been appointed by the Cadillac Motor Car Company, Detroit, to succeed K. P. Drysdale, recently made director of sales promotion for the Cleveland Tractor Company. The Cadillac advertising is under the supervision of E. C. Howard, sales manager.

The San Francisco Advertising Club has appointed its convention board in anticipation of the 1919 convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs in that city. The members are Frank H. Abbott, Jr., general director, B. F. Schlesinger, Milton H. Esberg, Samuel P. Johnston and Charles W. Duncan.

John Ritchie, Jr., spoke before the Pilgrim Publicity Association of Boston on what "Technology has done for preparedness," at one of the Tuesday noon meetings.

On November 8, the Boston ad men were, with their wives, the guests of the United Drug Company. The party inspected the plant of the company and each man and woman was presented with a souvenir.

Frank L. Boyle, until recently sales manager of the Water Color Company, New York, is now sales manager of the Standard Music Roll Company, Orange, N. J.

The first of the five monthly meetings planned for the New York Advertising Club is scheduled for November 21. Former Senator Theodore E. Burton, president of the Merchants National Bank of New York, and Saunders Norvell, general manager of McKesson & Robbins, New York, will talk on "When is the price break coming?" William H. Ingersoll, former president of the club will preside and direct the discussion.

The Clowry Chapman luncheon, announced by the export division of the New York club for November 13, was postponed, the date to be announced later.

At the club luncheon on November 15, James E. West, chief scout executive of Boy Scouts of America, told of the part that publicity played in enabling the Boy Scouts to sell over $100,000,000 of bonds in the second Liberty Loan campaign.

Bruce Blyven, of the editorial staff of Printers' Ink, spoke before the Young Ad Men's Club of New York, on November 9, on the national advertisers' relations with the retailer, talking in detail on the subject of dealer help.

At the next meeting of the club, on November 23, Frank Fehlman, of the Fruhaufer Brothers Company, will talk on another phase of "How the retailer affects advertising."

The League of Advertising Women of New York will gather at the New York Ad Club on November 20. The program will be divided into two parts; the art of solicitation and export advertising.

Under the first heading, Dan A. Carroll, a special representative, and Miss J. J. Martin, president of the association and advertising manager of the Sperry & Hutchinson Company, will be the speakers. Under the second caption, Dr. W. T. Aughinbaugh, foreign and export editor of Leslie's Weekly, and Miss Lucy Goldsmith, export manager of the Aeolian Company, will talk.

United States Senator Hiram W. Johnson criticized the war revenue law as "unscientific, ambiguous and by no means just" in an address on November 7, before the San Francisco Advertising Club. He declared unwavering loyalty to the President, but asserted that the nation's war profits were inadequately taxed.

LIBERTY BOND ADS WERE WASTED.

THE A. A. C. W. OFFICIALS SHOW HOW AT MEETING IN INDIANAPOLIS.

Much of the session of the executive committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs held on November 12 and 13 in Indianapolis was devoted to a discussion of how advertising can help win the war.

Recent Liberty Loan advertising was thoroughly reviewed, plans for helping the Y. M. C. A. were discussed, and the meeting was attended by C. E. Raymond, advertising director of the Food Administration, and Dr. Barton Dunn, advertising manager of the Oneida Community, who has just been appointed advertising director for the Fuel Administration. Mr. Raymond and Dr. Dunn were made members of the advisory board during the meeting.

Herbert S. Houston, chairman of the National Advertising Advisory Board, regretted that the Government at Washington was not yet in the attitude of paying for advertising space to put over war bonds, and he especially stressed the fact that the present method of advertising them resulted in great waste.

In the course of the meeting the fact that one New York daily newspaper had used five and one-half pages in one day to advertise Liberty Bonds was brought out, and there were numerous other cases where from three to five pages had been used in a single issue. This was claimed to give a definite proof of waste.

"No business man would take five and one-half pages in a single issue of a great New York daily," said Mr. Houston.

The meeting developed the fact that most of the advertising, when it is paid for either in money or space contributions by local advertisers, is concentrated in the big centers, while there is very little advertising in the smaller cities and in the rural districts.

An interesting side-light was thrown upon this situation in the statement of William H. Rankin of Chicago, vice-chairman of the National Advertising Advisory Board, who showed that after farm papers were used in Illinois, Illinois farmers subscribed for the Second Liberty Loan in greater proportion than the farmers of any other part of the country.

Mr. Rankin told how $75,000 cash was raised for a campaign in Chicago, where the advertising cost of selling the bonds was twenty-six one-thousandths of one per cent. This plan and its results were explained in full in THE FOURTH ESTATE last week.

O. C. Harn, chairman of the committee on plan and scope for the advisory board, reported that his committee had been able to act as a clearing-house for ideas which were passed from one to another of the board members in the twelve Federal Reserve Districts, who were in direct charge of district campaigns. He said that the handling of the advertising was also greatly facilitated by the fact that these local managers exchanged information directly.

Mr. Houston spoke, as already mentioned, of the work of the advisory board at a dinner which the Advertisers' Club of Indianapolis gave the executive committee and visiting club presidents who attended the sessions.

Frank Stockdale, retailing counsel for the Associated Clubs, spoke on retail profits in war time and suggested that retailers should fortify themselves in these days of rising prices. He suggested that a merchant should keep his stock as low as possible and that if he did follow the policy of carrying much stock he should have a sinking fund to meet the time when prices are bound to fall.

Speaking on what advertising is doing for business in war-time, William C. D'Arcy, president of the Associated Advertising Clubs, read several telegrams from prominent publishers and business men.

William G. Rook, publisher of the Canadian Home Journal, Toronto, told what advertising has done for the Canadian government in war-time, citing the fact that the Dominion government has run twenty-one distinct advertising campaigns and that eight others have been placed by the Canadian Provinces. That this advertising has paid the government well, he said, is demonstrated by the fact that the appropriation during the last year is larger than at any time. If it had not paid, he suggested, the Government would not be increasing its appropriations.

One entire day was practically given over to a discussion of educational and vigilance work, these discussions being led by Harry Tipper, New York, chairman of the national educational committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs, and Merle Sidener of Indianapolis, chairman of the national vigilance committee. Mr. Tipper said the educational work should divide itself into two chief parts—the study of advertising practice by experienced advertising men and the promotion of the education of young men. He advocated more research work in the advertising clubs.

Among the speakers were: Noble T. Praeger, educational secretary; George M. Husser, secretary of the national vigilance committee; Will P. Green, in charge of vigilance work through better business bureaus of local clubs; Frank Stockdale, Harry E. Myers, and Llewellyn E. Pratt, chairman of the national program committee.

This Indianapolis meeting was the first to which advertising club presidents have been invited. In addition to attending the sessions, the visiting club presidents inspected the association headquarters office and learned first hand of the service the association is rendering the clubs.

AN ANNIVERSARY DINNER.

In celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of their entrance into the newspaper game, A. Boyd Hamilton, Associated Press correspondent and long connected with the editorial department of the Harrisburg (Pa.) Telegraph, and J. P. McCullough, superintendent of the mechanical department of the Telegraph, entertained some forty newspaper men at a dinner given at the Country Club of Harrisburg on November 8.

The order appointing a receiver followed the filing of a petition by Mr. Staplin, as a stockholder and creditor, asking that a receiver be named.

M'CALL'S ELECTION.

Allan H. Richardson, president; Henry J. Fisher, chairman of the board; R. C. Wilson and O. B. Capen now make up the executive committee of the McCall Company, New York, publisher of McCall's Magazine and McCall's Patterns.

Joseph M. and Ira E. La Londe, father and son, have taken over the Outlook (Mont.) Promoter.

FOR A MONTH OF PATRIOTIC ADS

ADVERTISERS AND AGENTS WILL ADD TO SERVICE TO NATION.

A plan for a month of patriotic advertising by national advertisers of the country has received the endorsement of prominent advertisers and advertising agents and their associations.

A meeting was held in the headquarters of the Association of American Advertising Agents, in New York, on November 15, at which the plan was outlined by Eula McClary to Secretary James O'Shaughnessy, executive secretary of the A.A.A.; Joseph A. Richards, president of the New York Advertising Agents Association; Herman Halsted, president of the Six-Point League; John Sullivan, secretary of the Association of National Advertisers; and Mr. Thorson, representing the Periodical Publishers Association of America, and to representatives of the advertising and newspaper trade press.

The representatives of all interests at the meeting pledged their support to the plan to urge advertisers to give their copy a touch of national service appeal in the month of March. This may be done by, in whole or in part, basing copy theme on how advertising readers may be of service to the Government through conservation of vital war munitions, inspiring the patriotism, etc., all of which will aim to arouse Americans to win the war quickly.

Eula McClary, who recently introduced the plan of showing people how they might eat cheaply through the example of the New York police diet squad, is sponsor for the patriotic advertising month. She said that prominent citizens and officials of the nation had promised to co-operate with her in the way of giving their full support and even furnishing inspiring "talks" and pointers on America and the war for use in copy. She mentioned among these such prominent advertising men as Frank Presbrey, William H. Johns and O. H. Blackman.

It was suggested that the newspaper advertisers do their part in the first week of March.

THE FOURTH ESTATE will explain the plan in detail in an issue of the near future.

Two Facts for Thought!

CIRCULATORS IN ILLINOIS

THEIR SECOND SEMI-ANNUAL CONVENTION HELD IN SPRINGFIELD.

More than a score of Illinois circulation managers gathered in Springfield on November 13 for the second semi-annual convention of the Circulation Managers of Illinois.

In the morning a general business session was held at the St. Nicholas Hotel, at which questions of vital importance to the circulation men were discussed. "Country or R.F.D. circulation," "Handling carriers," "Child labor," "Cost of carrying papers," "Office controlled routes" and "How to get city circulation" were among the topics programmed.

After the photograph of the members had been taken, a luncheon was given at the St. Nicholas. The business session was resumed in the afternoon and many helpful ideas were offered at the open discussion which took place. Among those who led in the discussion were Clarence Eyster of the Peoria Evening Star, Willard E. Carpenter of the Lincoln Courier-Herald and Lawrence Barrett of the Rockford Morning Star.

Following the afternoon business session a trip was made through the newly equipped plant of the News-Record. The visiting newspaper men were the guests of the Springfield papers at a banquet at the St. Nicholas Hotel and a theater party at the Majestic.

The annual election of officers will take place at the next meeting, which will be held in Peoria.

The present officers of the organization are: President, L. V. Vaneleave, Rockford Republic; vice-president, Clarence Eyster, Peoria Star;

cles eagerly copied by the general press, or had its editors so often called upon to leading metropolitan journals to specially voice Southern sentiment on great events or in great political controversies.

In 1897 Captain Evan P. Howell retired from the duties of editor-in-chief, selling his interest in the paper to Hugh T. Inman. A new organization of the publishing company took place, and Clark Howell, although he held but a small block of shares, was honored by election to succeed his father as editor-in-chief. Later on he bought back the stock that his father had sold and thereupon became also the president of the publishing company.

He brought now into full play his enthusiasms to prove a capable successor to his father and Grady to make the Constitution an ideal institution that had been forming in the brains of all those who had worked upon it from its inception—a newspaper that would hold undisputed the confidence of the world-at-large and be the voice of the sanest and most progressive spirit of the great South. That he has accomplished that great ideal is not now disputed anywhere by impartial observers.

In 1901 Roby Robinson joined with Howell in buying the shares of Colonel Hemphill, who was now ready for a well-earned retirement from active service, and after a popular term in the office of mayor of Atlanta.

The Constitution Publishing Company was then reorganized upon a million-dollar basis—the most valuable newspaper property in the South.

Roby Robinson succeeded Colonel Hemphill as business manager for the next five years, having accepted the position only until it could be filled by the management. Mr. Robinson himself not having given up his other large business interests—which assumed such proportions that he could not continue in the business management of the Constitution, from which position he retired to give his full time to his own business, though retaining the vice-presidency of the company.

In 1912 Albert Howell, Jr., brother of Clark, was made president of the company, and Clark himself became general manager of all the interests of the paper, editorial and business, which condition yet exists, and doubtless will continue until some readjustment.

GEORGIA'S HISTORY.

The intelligent elder men of Georgia will readily agree that a comprehensive history of the state for the past half century can never be written without almost constant reference to the daily files of the Constitution.

One does not have to ignore that older and ably edited daily papers have existed and appeared continuously in Georgia during all those fifty years.

The Augusta Chronicle, with its more than a hundred years' record, and effulgent during the semi-cycle under the Wrights, father and son, and Patrick Walsh and "Tom" Loyless; the Savannah News, under Thompson and Estill; the Macon Telegraph, under Sisby, Jones, Albert Lamar, Henry Richardson, Charles R. Pendleton and W. T. Anderson; and the Columbus Enquirer and Sun, under very able editorships, are all of them to be counted as potential press forces in the redemption, the resurrection and rehabilitation of Georgia to her present more than pre-bellum power and prosperity.

Their labors and loyalties were as ungrudging as any and the gratitude of Georgians will always be a part of their glory. Nevertheless, because of its emplacement at the center of Georgia power, and of the slow and costly processes of news distribution in the early years of the era under consideration, the Constitution had the advantage of first and full information, the first chance to favor or to fight any proposition or performance affecting the people, and thus it became not only an open reservoir of the growing materials of history, but the source upon which other presses freely and confidently drew for the completion of their own columns.

It is a fact that a skillful compiler and commentator could use the file room of the Constitution and write from its pages a comprehensive history of the city, the state, the nation or the salient world movements since the paper's birth.

One of the supreme services rendered to the state by the Constitution has been its early and constant devotion to the development of the railway system, particularly as those "modern acts of the apostles of civilization" affected Atlanta.

OLD-LINE REPORTERS.

Among the many distinguished "graduates" of the Constitution's staff is Joseph Ohl, now representing James Gordon Bennett in control of the New York Herald. A reporter on the Constitution, he later became city editor, then news editor, succeeding Henry Richardson as Washington correspondent, which position he filled with such distinguished ability for several years as to attract the attention of Mr. Bennett, who sent him to Asia in charge of the New York Herald's Asiatic bureau at Peking; remaining there several years, he then returned to New York as a member of the Herald's executive board, of which he is now chairman.

In the old days the Constitution also had the services of that unrivalled newsmonger, Edward C. Bruffey; and the labors in staff service from time to time of Robert T. Small, now the Associated Press man with Pershing in France; of Alfred C. Newell, now a tower of strength in the insurance world; of Lucian Lamar Knight, Georgian historian and author; of Robert Adamson, now fire commissioner of New York City; of Ivy Lee, now publicity man for the Rockefellers; of Remsen Crawford and others who went out from apprenticeships in the Constitution to do admirable work in other fields from New York to Nome, in Alaska.

By the way, I must not omit the fact that for extra scout reporting we had at hand always the newsy nose and able legs of the well-remembered and lovable Colonel Marcus E. Thornton.

The great editorial and fiction work of Wallace P. Reed is a brilliant page in the history of the Constitution, from 1885 until his death about twenty years later.

In Saint Paul's in London you read of Sir Christopher Wrenn, its architect, "Si monumentum requiris, circumspecte."

Concluding this desultory chapter of memories of the Constitution for fifty years I can only repeat that—"if you seek its monument, look about you!"

From end to end of Atlanta may be seen the institutions, the utilities, the statues and adornments—such as Soldiers' Home, the Hill statue, the Jewish Orphans' home, Piedmont park and other like affairs—all of which are examples of how loyally and unselfishly the Constitution has labored for the public good.

OF NATIONAL IMPORTANCE.

Now, under the trained and wise direction of its editor, Clark Howell, whom I have seen grow up out of knee breeches into national importance and influence, the paper presents a solid, sane and safe helpfulness to Atlanta, to Georgia, to the South and the nation.

Mr. Howell was yet fairly a boy when the people elected him to the state house of representatives, where he served splendidly and twice as its speaker; then transferred to the state senate he broke another record by successive elections to its presidency and as the Georgia member of the Democratic National Committee for over twenty years he is now its member of longest service and one whose counsel is sought and respected by the leaders of the party in every national emergency.

Clean, clear headed, prejudiced naturally for all right and good things, generous with a fault to his friends, too tolerant of those who want to be his foes at any time, charitable to all in need, and ready to lend a hand wherever he can personally or with the paper advance any beneficent public work, he holds deservedly a place of high honor among the most eminent editors of America in the affection of his intimates and in the confidence of the people—the multiplied thousands—who regard the Constitution with positive affection and who whenever the term "The Georgia Bible" is used, know at once that it means the Constitution.

Such are the bones of the story of the origin and building up of one of the most eminent newspaper properties of the nation, but one having the peculiar distinction of representing in the popular mind the life, the labors, the ideals of an entire section of the republic and especially that section which can never be absorbed or disorganized, but will always remain unique within the union.

THE NEWSPAPER PRICES AND SIZES IN GREECE.

By a Royal decree which was published September 1, 1917, O. S., no Greek daily paper will be allowed to be sold at a price lower than ten lepta (about two cents).

Semi-weekly papers may be sold for fifteen lepta ($0.0289).

Annual subscriptions to daily papers must be at least thirty-six drachmas per annum ($6.95).

For exceptional reasons, and not more than fifteen days during the year, papers of double size may be issued.

From the prices which have been given two and one-half lepta will be paid to the sellers of the papers (about one-half cent), while one-half lepton (one-tenth cent) will go to the selling agency.

Foreign language newspapers published in Athens also will pay to vendors and selling agencies a total of three lepta on each paper, but the proportional distribution is not prescribed.

The total weekly surface of daily papers must not exceed 2.04 square meters (22 square feet).

Semi-weekly papers may not exceed 73 by 75½ centimeters each issue (28 11-16 by 29¾ inches).

Infringement of these regulations will be punished by imprisonment up to six months and a fine of not more than $1,930. The regulations will continue in force from the date of publication until six months after the signing of the treaty of peace.

LIBERTY LOAN CAMPAIGN COST IN CHICAGO.

EDITOR THE FOURTH ESTATE.

Sir: Since the report on the Chicago campaign was sent you, the Government has issued figures showing a subscription of $177,301,000 instead of $200,000,000, as given out at first.

This makes the cost of the campaign 27/1000 of 1 per cent.

In giving publicity to this report, will you please make these corrections? WILLIAM H. RANKIN, President W. H. Rankin Co., Chicago.

[NOTE.—Mr. Rankin refers to the figures in the article by Robert E. Rhinehart, printed in THE FOURTH ESTATE last week. His letter was received too late to make the correction at that time.]

FRAUDULENT FINANCIAL PUBLICITY.

WORKING GUIDE FOR WEEDING OUT UNTRUTHFUL FINANCIAL PUBLICITY.

(Copyright, 1917, by the Investment Bankers Association of America—Published by Permission.)

[The board of governors of the Investment Bankers Association of America has authorized the preparation by its fraudulent advertising committee of a "working guide" on financial advertising to enable publishers, bankers and others to pass on the honesty of financial copy.

This is the first step in a broad campaign to endeavor to stamp out fraudulent advertising and to protect the interests of newspapers and other media, the investing public and legitimate finance. Other plans are being formulated and the co-operation of a large number of influential newspapers has already been pledged.

On the ground that it will be a big help to the cause to do so, the association has given THE FOURTH ESTATE permission to print its guide, despite the fact that it is copyrighted. At the same time Secretary Gordon Cloyd of the fraudulent advertising committee said: "We particularly desire to receive information from readers of THE FOURTH ESTATE on questionable promotions for our reference files and solicit your personal co-operation in this respect."

"If any readers of THE FOURTH ESTATE have any suggestions for future work in the interests of legitimate finance we will be glad to receive them. We need your assistance."]

It is almost impossible to estimate accurately the many millions of dollars of savings of persons of small means which yearly have gone into fraudulent or highly questionable operations under the guise of investments.

The hardship occasioned by the sale of these practically worthless securities has been deplorable. Every day investment bankers are coming into first-hand contact with persons who might have had a competence, had they been protected from misrepresentation regarding the fundamentals of the investments they thought they were making. These misrepresentations have been made chiefly through printed circulars distributed by mail and advertising matter in the press of the country.

Believing that an obligation in respect to protection of investors of the country lies upon it, the Investment Bankers Association of America desires to do everything in its power to prevent fraud or misrepresentation in connection with the sale of securities.

Preliminary investigation with a large number of publications in various cities throughout the United States has resulted in a request being made upon this association for the preparation of a simple working guide, which may, in some measure, assist advertisers, advertising agencies, publishers and Government authorities to eliminate fraud and misrepresentation from advertising copy of financial character.

To this end the following has been written.

CHARACTER OF ADVERTISERS.

In view of the necessity of publishers passing very promptly upon copy presented to them for publication, it is desirable that they be assisted as much as possible toward accepting, rather than rejecting, advertising.

A number of financial associations and exchanges of the country, having in mind the necessity of keeping financial advertising clean, police their membership to this respect and endeavor to investigate cases of misrepresentation on the part of their own members. While this custom does not vouch that there may not be lapses from good practice on the part of members of such organizations, nevertheless, newspapers should feel fairly safe in accepting financial advertising from them—

Provided that the copy in itself does not appear suspicious. In assuming that any individual financial advertiser intends to be honest and truthful, the dividing line has been placed between such associations and exchanges as supervise their membership in such respect, and those which do not.

While, doubtless, there are in the aggregate many financial advertisers who do not belong to such associations and exchanges, yet who are entitled to the best consideration, there is no quick method of passing favorably upon their character, if they are not well known.

In such cases it is highly desirable that complete information regarding the character and antecedents of the advertiser be available.

Moreover, the more membership in recognized associations or exchanges should not be advanced as a reason why those interested should not have full information regarding the advertiser.

When any one is in doubt regarding the advisability of accepting copy from an unknown advertiser, the following set of questions may aid in arriving at the information:

Advertiser—Who?

If the advertiser was once associated with fraudulent promotions in which there were indictments, prosecutions, etc., it is very likely that his new venture is dangerous.

A number of the more progressive publications in the country make it a policy never to accept copy from men who at any time have been associated with a fraudulent enterprise. They go even to the extent of declining to accept advertising matter describing a security of a corporation in which a man with such a record has any apparent influence, either as director, officer, large stockholder or broker.

To What Association Does Dealer Advertiser Belong?

If the dealer belongs to one of the recognized and responsible financial associations, information regarding him may be promptly obtained by addressing the secretary of such association.

If at any time information is required regarding members of the Investment Bankers Association of America, such information may be had from the secretary's office, 111 West Monroe street, Chicago.

The mere membership in commercial clubs and various exchanges of the country does not necessarily imply responsibility on the dealer's part, and intimate investigations should be made in cases of doubt.

References.

A reference from a bank, merely stating that the advertiser has a satisfactory balance and has not asked for accommodation, does not mean anything whatsoever regarding the character and responsibility of the advertiser.

The fact that advertising bills can be paid for in cash does not mean that the securities advertised are properly issued. In case of doubt, explicit, detailed reports should be secured from some bureau which makes a specialty of the history of individuals managing properties, such as Hill's National Reporting Company of Chicago, or Bishop's of New York

ADVERTISING AGENCIES.

Under ordinary circumstances, the reputation of a responsible advertising agency is sufficient guaranty for most types of commercial advertising.

Investigation of a large number of highly questionable financial flotations has developed the fact that many reputable advertising agencies have been misled and have suffered large financial losses by not understanding the fundamental selling plan and type of securities of clients who seem to be financially responsible.

In some cases of late, large advertising agencies have declined to handle financial copy, except from the oldest and best known banking houses, lest by chance they inflict a loss upon innocent investors.

In view of the probability that the number of investors will increase materially by reason of the Government financing in the war, and in consequence financial advertising will increase in volume, it would seem to be unwise for advertising agencies to overlook entirely the possibilities of business in this field.

Empirically, however, there is necessity for the advertising agency knowing its client and his policies before taking on an account; and in view of the fact that there are only a few agencies in the country which have specialized in placing financial advertising, the presentation of financial copy from a reputable agency does not imply that the real advertiser is trustworthy.

PRESENT BAD PRACTICES.

The reason that so many millions of dollars annually are sunk in worthless securities is that the sellers of such so-called investments make alluring promises of great profits to be derived from a few dollars.

If deliberate misrepresentations and recklessly loose statements are eliminated from advertising and circular matter, get-rich-quick operators will not be able to make their fraudulent schemes pay.

In investments one does not get something for nothing any more readily than in any other branch of merchandising. It is entirely misleading, therefore, to use statements which will lead investors to believe this to be possible, such as the following taken from one piece of copy advertising a promotion that failed utterly:

"The best investment ever offered to the American public."

"Immense profits on small investments."

"$1,000,000 a month profits."

"You take no chance."

"Golden Harvest."

Some of the other more dangerous bad practices which invariably mislead are the following:

Trading on reputation or earning power of another company, such as implying that a new automobile company will be as successful as the Ford Motor Company, or using a name which sounds similar to a well known trade name to imply that the well known person or corporation is interested in the new company.

Offering securities where the corporation has not a well defined financial plan calculated to carry the company through poor times, as well as good times.

Giving undue importance to the name of the banks acting as trustee or registrar, and implying thereby that these banks in any way are responsible for the securities. The fee for such services paid to banks or trust companies is very small, and the services do not insure safety of securities.

Offering to let people in on the ground floor.

Stating that securities are as safe as Government bonds.

The use, by a dealer concern, of a name which implies that it is a bank or trust company when it is not such.

Using the word guarantee as applying to the security when no guaranty exists.

Placing up sub-heads in copy on one subject matter in such a way as to

COLUMBUS CIRCLE IS LIVELY THESE DAYS.

Columbus Circle, in New York City, the home of THE FOURTH ESTATE, has again become the center of life and activity through the opening of the Century Theater and the Park Theater.

The tremendous production of "Miss 1917," with the usual generous cast, artistic settings and elaborate costumes, characteristic of Dillingham productions has drawn the illuminations from all sections to the Century.

"Miss 1917" is a wonderful review filled with constant surprises, clever conversation, "pep" and color, and requires several hundred pretty and lively citizens to complete. The review is a hit in every way, and William Raymond Sill isn't losing any opportunity to tell the world that the Century has something real behind its numerous doors.

The Park Theater has struck its old gait with a real novelty. Someone scoured Spain and landed the greatest company of Spanish performers in the shadow of the Columbus monument that New York has ever seen.

"The Land of Joy" is a musical comedy filled with the tuneful melodies of Valverde, and is an inexpensive and interesting trip to Spain. The costuming, settings dancing and music are something new in New York, and that it is appreciated is shown by the packed houses that greet the performers.

Walter N. Lawrence had a great idea when he decided to bring this large company from Havana and give New York a breath of Spain.

Lawrence Anhalt should make the Park Theater the headquarters for Spanish plays on the same plan as the new French players at the old Garrick.

With such good plays as "The Land of Joy," and the great floating spanish speaking public in New York, the Park would retain the old life of the day of "The Wizard of Oz," "Quaker Girl," etc., it has just regained through "The Land of Joy," which is the slogan given for Spain.

WHAT BOOKS ARE WANTED BY AMERICAN SOLDIERS.

As to the books the soldiers from America read in France, and want to read, there is a very definite statement in the volume of correspondence by Lieutenant Clifford Almon Wells called "From Montreal to Vimy Ridge and Beyond," published by the Doran Company. In a postscript to a letter to his mother Lieutenant Wells wrote:

"In your next box, will you please slip in something to read. Some cheap copy of a good novel, or some other book—not too deep, but yet of a good length. Some good old English novel preferably. One of Jane Austen or Thackeray, or some good modern novel or essay—anything with lots of reading matter in it. I am asking Emma to do the same. All reading matter is carefully preserved and passed around."

These letters contain a surprising variety of topics, graphic descriptions and information on many matters of interest to all who have friends overseas. Lieutenant Wells (a youthful doctor of philosophy) of the 8th battalion Canadians, B. E. F., was killed in action April 28, 1917.

TESTING COPY OUTWARDLY NOT BAD. Presumably, those interested in clean financial advertising desire that money from people of small means who cannot afford to lose it should not go into greatly hazardous enterprises.

While ordinary business risks can never be eliminated, it is possible to obtain the information which will disclose whether or not the securities to be advertised are extremely hazardous and should not be offered by responsible investment bankers to such persons of small and moderate means.

Where the character of the advertiser appears to be satisfactory and there are no flagrant misrepresentations in the copy, it may still be desirable to know whether the corporation whose securities are being offered, is such as will presumably bring grief to the investor.

When it is desired to disclose the more subtle hazards in such securities, the real situation can generally be ascertained by requiring of the advertiser information along the following lines:

Property.

What constitutes the property?

Is it actually built?

Where is it located?

What is real appraisal value of property by competent, intelligent appraiser, audited by certified public accountant?

What is value of property for the purpose of operation?

Is property in operation?

If so, how long has it proved successful?

What is output?

Does company own or lease property?

Earnings.

What are actual earnings as audited by certified public accountant?

What are detailed earnings over a period of years?

Are earnings estimated instead of actual?

If estimated, by whom?

Estimates should not be vague, but should be definite and calculated on some basis, else they are valueless. They should not be made essentially on the basis of earnings of other very prosperous companies in the same line of business, for different managements will not operate with equal success.

Goodwill.

Is the goodwill all in prospect, or has it been valued on definite earning power?

Goodwill should not be valued primarily on the earnings or goodwill of other successful companies in the same line of business.

Investment Income.

What dividend or interest is paid on securities offered?

If income is being paid or promised, who has audited the books of the company?

The payment of the dividend implies that it has been earned. Grave harm can be done by representing securities as dividend payers when payments are made from capital.

Price of Securities.

Securities of dangerously financed companies are generally offered in small par value so as to appeal to people of small means. This is especially true in the sale of stock. If the par value of the securities offered is $10 or less, an investigation is desirable; if it is below $1, this investigation is imperative.

It is bad practice to offer securities for sale with a statement that the price will be advanced on a certain day. This statement implies that the value has increased to the extent of the increase in price; as a matter of fact, the increase in price may not mean this, and usually it is only a plausible selling scheme. One good test of this is to ascertain at what price the advertiser will buy back the same stock he is offering.

Financial Statements.

Any statements mentioning figures should be susceptible of proof through an income account and balance sheet, audited by a certified public accountant.

These two accounts should be given as of one date, because it is possible to cover up inaccuracies if the balance sheet is given on a date different from that of the income account.

Any company offering securities for sale which will not, if requested, submit an income account and balance sheet, subjects itself to the suspicion of fraudulent practice.

The financial statement of a company should be as of the date on which the securities will be outstanding, and the balance sheet should, therefore, show the securities as liabilities.

From these statements can be calculated the tangible net assets per share of stock or the value of property securing bonds. If these figures fall materially below the selling price of the securities, the risk is considerable, and requires a detailed explanation.

Great care should be taken that the promoter does not glibly promise future growth to explain away any discrepancy, or represent that goodwill is of sufficient value to take care of it. Where a company is showing real earnings with very little property, it is, of course, legitimate to capitalize these earnings to a reasonable extent.

Equity.

Misrepresentations are often made when an issue of treasury stock is offered. Care should be exercised that a large amount of stock is not issued on a disproportionately small amount of property. Where practically all the cash capital of a company is raised on such a basis, advertisements should not be permitted to mislead investors into thinking that an adequate amount of property is behind the stock.

Bonus Stock.

When common stock is offered as a bonus to the investor, equal in amount to a certain percentage of the preferred stock he buys, it is well to make inquiry and find out just what risk the promoter has taken in putting out the preferred stock.

In some of these undertakings the public puts up all of the money, and if the scheme is successful the public gets little of the profit above the preferred dividend.

If the project is a failure, the public loses all the cost of the undertaking, while the promoters lose nothing but their time. Advertisements should not hide these important features, and usually advertisements offering preferred stock with a bonus of common stock justify particular scrutiny.

Corporation Management.

What are the names of officers and directors of corporations?

Management should include men trained in all the branches necessary to the successful operation of the business whose securities are advertised.

Generally, on the board of directors one will find the name of a notorious promoter, if the company is suspiciously financed. Special attention should be paid to this man's record, because any former bad practices by him will probably taint the plan under which the company is being financed.

A properly financed company usually will have on its board of directors one or two bankers or experienced financiers, who will know how to take care of the investors' future through permanent, sound financing of the company. If there is no such banker, special inquiry should be made as to the permanent financial plan under which the company is securing its money.

SERVICES OF INVESTMENT BANKERS ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA.

For the purpose of assisting in eliminating fraudulent financial advertising, a committee of the Investment Bankers Association of America is prepared to co-operate with publishers, vigilance committees, advertising agencies, individual advertisers, financial organizations or Government authorities.

To this end it maintains a file of information on the subject which is available to persons interested.

In view of the fact that most fraudulent enterprises are promoted by persons of previous bad records, it is highly desirable that this committee secure as much information as possible regarding the record of any suspicious or definitely bad promotion.

Any information, or requests for such, should be addressed to the fraudulent advertising committee, Investment Bankers Association of America, 111 West Monroe street, Chicago.

LARGER PAPER, USING LESS

EDITOR THE FOURTH ESTATE.

SIR: Here is a matter which, though it contains some elements of free advertising, I think will be interesting to all of your readers who are using a Duplex flat bed perfecting press. I assure you that I have no interest in either the Duplex Company or the Rousseau Company.

At a cost of less than $100, we have enlarged our paper and at the same time cut down the consumption of print paper. We formerly used 70-inch, 53 1/4-inch and 35-inch paper. By the purchase of four Rousseau chases, which have narrow sides, we can use 67-inch, 50 1/4-inch and 33 1/2-inch paper. The margins are narrower, but are ample.

By taking out the iron head sticks at the top of the page, and cutting down the iron foot-sticks to half an inch, and by substituting 12-point foot-slugs for 18-point foot-slugs, we increased the length of the columns from 20 to 21 inches, giving us 56 inches more space in each 8-page paper.

This has resulted in our frequently being able to avoid going to 10 pages to take care of our advertising and news.

Anything that tends to economy in these days, it seems to me, ought to be passed along.

ILLINOIS PUBLISHERS MAY HAVE OWN PAPER MILL.

At its annual meeting, the Illinois Daily Newspaper Publishers Association took steps that it is hoped will solve the print paper problem for the members. After hearing reports on the de-inking process invented by John Welsh of the Green Bay Paper and Fiber Company, the association appointed a committee of two members together with A. G. McIntyre, special representative of the A. N. F. A. paper committee, to pursue the subject farther. The committee is to report on the advisability of purchasing a mill and manufacturing 400 tons daily for the members of the association.

The organization is considering a plan for intensive publicity in Illinois which state is thoroughly covered by newspapers operated by the members.

The association has declared for the principle of proven circulation and expects to equalize rates on an equitable basis guaranteeing the advertiser in Illinois exactly what he is paying for.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President, Archibald S. Leckie, Joliet Herald-News; secretary, Fred LeRoy, Streator Independent Times; treasurer, C. C. Marquis, Bloomington Pantagraph.

AUTHORS PROTEST AGAINST SECOND CLASS INCREASE.

The Authors League of America held a meeting last week which was attended by many of the best known authors of both sexes, to consider what action might be taken to persuade Congress to repeal the postal section of the War Revenue Bill imposing high zone rates on second class matter. The meeting was held in New York.

The consensus of opinion was that this heavy and destructive burden which it is proposed to lay upon the publishers would seriously interfere with the dissemination of intelligence through literature; that it would tend to sectionalize the country; that it would discourage reading; that it would penalize the people living at a distance from the centers of population; that it would not produce revenue; that, in fact, the Post Office Department should not be used to collect taxes of any kind and that the development of authors would be seriously hampered because of the restriction of their opportunities and the serious curtailment of their remuneration.

The authors are deeply stirred over this matter and propose to use the full power of their pens in awakening the people of the country to the real character and import of the postal legislation which has been tacked on to the Revenue Bill.

POST OFFICE BANS NEW YORK CALL.

SHUT OUT OF THE SECOND CLASS MAILS, BUT IT IS STILL DEFIANT.

The New York Call, the Socialist daily newspaper, was served with a notice by Postmaster Patten on November 13 that its second class mailing privileges had been revoked, to take effect immediately.

The action was ordered by Postmaster General Burleson, under the Espionage Law.

About a month ago the publishers of the Call were cited to appear in Washington to show cause why the newspaper should not be denied the use of the mails. The citation set forth numerous editorials published in the Call, and alleged that they tended to obstruct the prosecution of the war and the enforcement of the conscription law.

The Call, in reply, denied that it had advocated the violation of any law, but simply had exercised its constitutional right to criticize the Government and to urge the repeal of the conscription law.

The paper began immediately the replication of all the editorials objected to by the Government on the plea that it was showing the public that it had violated no law.

Interest in the Call's fight to retain its mailing privilege was intensified by the fact that it was made an issue in the mayoralty campaign.
Morris Hillquit, the Socialist candidate for mayor, championed the cause of the paper, declaring that if the Government used repressive measures against "the greatest and bravest Socialist organ in this country, it would do so without sanction of law."

Charles W. Ervin, managing editor of the Call, has stated that in spite of "the arbitrary and autocratic action of the Post Office Department" the out-of-town circulation of the newspaper would be continued through the first class mail.

Following the example of newsdealers who have refused to handle copies of the Masses and other publications with radical anti-war policies, on the ground that there is danger of severe punishment under the Trading with the Enemy Act for handling them, the Interborough
Rapid Transit Company of New York has ordered that no copies of the New York Call be sold from the subways stands which it controls.

It was said at the offices of the Call on Tuesday that only about 300 copies of that newspaper had been sold on the Interborough stands and that since the ban was placed on the Call 900 copies a day have been sold in these stations by newsboys.

The New York Call has been barred from the news stands of the Brooklyn (N. Y.) Rapid Transit Company by the Broadway Subway & Homes Borough Advertising Company of New York. The reason given is that the daily sales of the Socialist organ on the news-stands were "negligible."

"We simply found that the sales of the Call did not warrant its being handled any longer," said an official of the advertising company. "There had been no complaint against the circulation of the paper, nor did we attempt to assume the role of censor as to what the public shall read."

This is the Story of a Newspaper

It is in brief the record of what one man in an inland city did to make that newspaper known all over the world.

HENRY WATTERSON, Editor

In 1868, when the wounds of the War of Sections were still bleeding, Henry Watterson, of the Louisville Journal, and Walter N. Haldeman, of the Louisville Courier, decided to cease being rivals and to become partners. So they merged those newspapers into one and, buying the Louisville Democrat, created the Louisville Courier-Journal.

Then the struggle to establish the new creation began. By partnership contract Mr. Watterson was supreme in the editorial department, Mr. Haldeman in the publishing department; but they worked together for thirty-five years as one man, when in 1902 Mr. Haldeman passed from the scene.

Louisville is a border city. It was much divided by the War of Sections. Kentucky had furnished an equal quota of fighting men to the North and South. The country and the time seemed to require that a voice be raised in Louisville which should be heard and heeded in both sections.

Henry Watterson became that voice. Young, aspiring and sagacious, with unusual experience in journalism and public life, during the War a Confederate soldier, he set to work to rescue the South from the fate of Poland and Ireland.

It was a long battle, and he had by sheer force of his personality and his pen to stand between the hot-heads of the two sections.

He brought the South to realize the situation and to understand the anomalous character of the institution of African slavery.

He told the story of Lincoln to the South and popularized it.

He brought the North better to comprehend the idiosyncrasies of the old South and to believe in the loyalty of the new.

He became for thirty-five years the driving forces behind the Democratic party and its accepted interpreter.

He did all this through the party platforms which he dominated in seven National Conventions, but mainly through the Courier-Journal until it became the most celebrated newspaper in America. It is true to say that he did more to make lasting peace between the estranged sections of the Union than any other man of his time.

Through the eras of Greenbackism and Free Silverism he fought as successfully for the public credit as he had fought for the national unity. He was the foremost Democrat in the West and South to bury sectional hate and rag money. He led the Tilden movement which regenerated the Democratic Party.

Throughout each and every crisis of the last half century Mr. Watterson and the Courier-Journal, one and inseparable, have been at the forefront in the making of American history.

Then came 1914 and Serajevo. Then came the loosing of the Prussian wolves that overran Belgium, Luxemburg and France. From the beginning of the struggle Mr. Watterson saw clearly what part America would be obliged to play. He saw and forecast the submarines and the campaign of frightfulness. He fathomed the plots of the Kaiser Reservists and exposed the seditions of German propaganda. He penetrated the mask of duplicity worn by Bernstorff and in 1915 urged the President to send him packing. Carefully distinguishing between the masses of the German people and the Berlin War Party, he anticipated the President's Proclamation of 1917 by three years with the slogan:

"To Hell with the Hohenzollerns and the Hapsburgs."

THIS is a brief statement of what the Courier-Journal and its Editor have attempted and achieved, and nearing its fiftieth birthday, The Courier-Journal Company extends hearty greetings to the newspapers of America, through THE FOURTH ESTATE, and bids them be sure that it will remain always on the firing line.

Making the Most of Chicago

Advertisers when cultivating the Chicago market, in their desire to reach all buyers, naturally turn to The Daily News first.

Here's Why: The Daily News is read by very nearly every worth-while family in Chicago—94 per cent of its immense circulation being within Chicago and its suburbs.

The London Chronicle says:

"The Chicago Daily News is by far the best evening newspaper in the world." Chicago agrees with this. Chicago likes The Daily News; reads it; believes it.

Eminently successful advertisers, local and foreign, use more space in the six buying days a week, month after month, year after year in The Daily News than in any other Chicago newspaper. Successful advertisers, making the most of Chicago, use

NEWS PRINT PRICE SET AT THREE CENTS?

THE FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION IS UNDERSTOOD TO HAVE ACTED AS A WAR MEASURE.

At the moment of going to press, THE FOURTH ESTATE received word from a dependable source that the Federal Trade Commission has fixed the price of news print at three cents a pound for the first three months of 1918, this period to be used as a basis for future revision of the price, if necessary. The action is understood to have been taken as a war measure.

THE FOURTH ESTATE so far has been unable to obtain a confirmation or denial from the Federal authorities in Washington.

INDICTMENTS NOT DROPPED.

ATTORNEY GENERAL DENIES REPORTS ON THE NEWS PRINT CASE.

Attorney General Thomas W. Gregory has issued a statement in an effort to correct a widespread belief that the Government's case against the manufacturers of news print paper, under the anti-trust laws, would be dismissed.

This is the announcement by the Department of Justice:

"The Attorney General states that his attention had just been called to a report in some newspapers to the effect that the indictment of the news print paper manufacturers, the trial of which opened November 15, would be dismissed. He stated that there is no foundation whatever for this report."

Up to the time of going to press there had been no change made in the decision of Judge Mayer to open the trial on November 26 in the Federal Court, New York.

The jury was chosen on November 15, as told in THE FOURTH ESTATE last week.

Mark Hyman, one of the prosecutors for the Government, told THE FOURTH ESTATE at the time of going to press that, of course, there is always the possibility of a postponement, but so far he knew of no reason for one. He said that several suggestions to settle the case without trial have been under consideration by the Department of Justice, but there is nothing definite or final in the matter.

At the time of going to press, the following telegraphic message was received from the Washington correspondent of THE FOURTH ESTATE:

"There is nothing new at the Federal Trade Commission.

"The Department of Justice is leaving to its attorneys at New York all the details of the attempted compromise with the paper makers and is not informed as to recent progress."

HOSTS TO RATHOM.

Members of the Pilgrim Publicity Association of Boston were hosts to John R. Rathom, editor and general manager of the Providence (R. I.) Journal, at a dinner on Wednesday evening. Mr. Rathom spoke on "Three Years of Germany's War Against the United States."

Urey Woodson, publisher of the Oenahoro (Ky.) Messenger, has become a member of the S. N. P. A.

NEW PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION.

PERIODICAL TRADE AND CLASS INTERESTS TO FIGHT POSTAL RATES.

A new organization representing the various periodical publishers' associations and allied bodies has been formed in New York to promote and defend the common interests of all. It is called the Publishers' Advisory Board and is composed of the presidents or other executive officers of the constituent bodies.

The members are as:

Periodical Publishers' Association—Allan H. Richardson, McCall Publishing Company, chairman; A. C. G. Hammesfahr, of Collier's, treasurer.

Associated Business Papers—M. C. Robbins, Iron Age.

Agricultural Publishers' Association—E. T. Meredith, Successful Farming.

Association of Religious Papers—George E. Cook, vice-president, David C. Cook Publishing Company.

Association of Medical Publishers—Dr. H. Edwin Lewis, American Medicine.

Authors League of America—Rex Beach.

Allied Printing Trades—Peter J. Brady.

The director of the board is Charles Johnson Post.

The first work to be undertaken by the board will be directed toward securing the repeal of the postal zone provision of the war tax bill passed by Congress at its last session. A thorough analysis of the postal situation will be made as soon as possible.

CANADIAN NEWS PRINT INQUIRY RE-OPENED.

PUBLISHERS PROTEST COST FIGURES --CONTROLLER PRINGLE EXTENDS $2.50 PRICE UNTIL JANUARY.

The paper controller, Robert A. Pringle, K. C., will continue the inquiry for the purpose of hearing the contentions of the Canadian press and the argument of the news print manufacturers. No date has been set.

A new Order-in-Council extending the 2.50 cent per pound rate for news print paper was made by Controller Pringle on November 19. The order also provides that each of the news print manufacturers bear a proportionate cost in the supplying of news print paper to the Canadian press. The Canadian mills are ordered to make reports as to the amount of their tonnage produced and the amount shipped for export.

Canadian newspaper publishers are putting the Canadian news print manufacturers to a third degree of proof in connection with the cost figures for the manufacture of news print paper. As a consequence, the price of news print paper in Canada will remain at the 2.50 cent per pound rate until January 20, 1918.

The manufacturers may ask for an investigation into the publishers' business.

The Canadian news print probe, which was supposed to have officially ended on November 2, is to be continued at the request of the newspaper publishers, who are not satisfied with the figures of the official auditor, Geoffrey Clarkson, as regarding the charges for stumpage and allowance of return on capital invested in the Canadian news print mills.

Mr. Pringle in an official interview given the correspondent of THE FOURTH ESTATE said there was very little to be given out. He said he had a most satisfactory interview with the Federal Trade Commission at Washington and that he had every reason to believe that the principles governing the question of costs would be agreed upon between himself and the Federal Trade Commission. If these principles are settled there will be little difficulty in the future in getting at the cost of manufacture both in the United States and Canada.

"The manufacturers have been urging very strenuously," continued the Controller, "that the evidence submitted at the inquiry justifies me in advancing the price to at least $60 per ton. On the other hand, the Canadian Press Association has raised a number of questions in regard to the accountants' methods of arriving at costs, more particularly as to return on investment.

"I feel that rather than fix a price on the evidence before me and do an injustice to either the manufacturer or the publisher that it will be more advisable to extend the present order until January 20, 1918, so as to give all parties an ample opportunity of presenting their views and evidence."

According to Auditor Clarkson's statements, the average cost of manufacturing news print in Canada in the month of June (which is the last month complete records were taken) and after allowing a reasonable return on the actual capital, which Mr. Clarkson considered was really invested in the different enterprises, was about $57. The manufacturers contend that costs have increased very substantially in the months of July, August, September, October and November, and are still on the increase.

On the other hand the representatives of the press have raised several questions as to Mr. Clarkson's method of arriving at his average cost of approximately $57 per ton. "These have got to be considered," said Mr. Pringle. One important question that has arisen is in regard to the allowance of $2 per cord for pulpwood on the stump. This was put in the cost by Mr. Clarkson at the direction of Commissioner Pringle, as it was considered it would be a more equitable way of getting at cost than by allowing interest on investment in limits, etc.

A great deal of evidence was taken in regard to the value of pulpwood on the stump and Commissioner Pringle came to the conclusion that $2 per cord was the minimum allowance.

The new Order-in-Council is as follows:

THE CONTROLLER'S ORDER.

"WHEREAS by Order-in-Council dated 3rd November, 1917, I was authorized and empowered to make such order or orders as I might deem necessary or advisable for the distribution and delivery of paper by the manufacturers to the publishers, and for the distribution and delivery of pulp (including sulphite and sulphate) to the manufacturers of news print and other paper.

"AND WHEREAS the Honorable the Minister of Customs, acting under authority of Order-in-Council dated 1st September, 1917, did fix the price and quantity of news print paper in sheets and rolls to be furnished to the publishers in Canada by the manufacturers up to the 20th day of November, 1917.

"AND WHEREAS it is necessary for me to fix the price from that date.

"NOW THEREFORE under and by virtue of the powers given to me by said Order-in-Council, dated 3rd November, 1917, I do ORDER and DIRECT that the manufacturers of news print paper do supply to newspapers throughout Canada news print paper in rolls at the rate of $2.50 per 100 pounds in carload lots; $3.25 per 100 pounds in sheets in carload lots, and $3.50 per 100 pounds in sheets in less than carload lots of two tons and over, f. o. b. the mills of the various manufacturers, for a period of TWO MONTHS from the 20th day of November, 1917, to the 20th day of January, 1918.

"AND WHEREAS under existing conditions the supply of news print paper to Canadian publishers is not proportionately distributed between them, and by reason of the fact that the prices fixed are lower than the manufacturers are receiving from export business, I DO ORDER that each manufacturer should bear his due proportion of the cost so entailed in complying with above, and that if arrangements are not made between the manufacturers for the pooling of such cost and for adjustment between themselves in proportion to the percentage of their output supplied to Canadian publishers, then an accounting be made and the manufacturer or manufacturers who have supplied a greater percentage of Canadian tonnage than properly attributable to them shall be paid by the other manufacturers sufficient to place them in the same position as the manufacturer or manufacturers who have not supplied their proper percentage of paper to the Canadian publishers.

"I DO FURTHER order that the manufacturers shall, when called upon, furnish accurate figures showing the total tonnage of news print paper produced and shipped by them during such period as directed and the tonnage so produced and shipped for the Canadian market and export markets respectively together with the prices f. o. b. at the mills both for paper for export and paper for Canadian trade.

"THIS ORDER is made subject to revision as to the price in event of it being decided at a later date that the prices

ONE MORE HEARST NEWSPAPER.

IT'S THE BOSTON ADVERTISER AND C. M. PALMER HEADS THE NEW COMPANY.

The second big newspaper transaction to take place in Boston within two months (the first was the absorption of the Journal by the Herald) occurred this week when the Boston Advertiser, a morning newspaper, was sold to the Northeastern Publishing Company for the purpose of providing the Boston Evening American, owned by William R. Hearst, with a morning edition.

The Northeastern Publishing Company is composed of Hearst interests. Charles M. Palmer of New York has been elected president. Mr. Palmer is widely known throughout the United States as a successful broker in newspaper properties and it was he who negotiated the deal by which the Advertiser was sold. Mr. Palmer also is owner of three-quarters of the stock in the St. Joseph (Mo.) News-Press and holds interests in other newspapers. Mr. Palmer will continue in all his other capacities as in the past, in addition to his new Boston post.

As soon as possible, before December 1, the Northeastern Publishing Company will take over the Boston American and issue a two-cent morning newspaper known as the American and Advertiser, which, Mr. Palmer told THE FOURTH ESTATE, "will be a conservative business man's and family newspaper."

The sale of the Advertiser, on November 19, followed closely on the heels of an announcement made on November 16 by Charles Sumner Bird, president of the Advertiser Company, that the Advertiser would establish a Sunday edition on November 18. This first number of the Sunday Advertiser did appear on the date set, and another will be published tomorrow if the consolidation details of the American and Advertiser deal are not completed by today.

Mr. Hearst's purchase of the Boston Advertiser is generally believed in newspaper circles to be for the purpose of obtaining the Associated Press news service for his Boston Sunday American.

The sale does not include the Boston Evening Record, published by the Advertiser Company.

The Advertiser was founded by Samuel Adams in 1748. It has been issued as a daily since 1813.

For his new position as president of the Northeastern Publishing Company, Charles M. Palmer is well equipped, and he also is thoroughly acquainted with the policies of the Hearst organization from past associations.

The success of Mr. Palmer in the handling of the many deals in newspaper properties that he has brought about, to the satisfaction of all parties, is to be attributed to his thorough knowledge of newspaper conditions and values, acquired from many years' experience as a newspaper owner himself and to practical training in newspaper management.

Mr. Palmer is regarded as an expert in all departments of newspaper work. He began his career with William R. Hearst in San Francisco and when Mr. Hearst came to New York and took over the Morning Journal from John R. McLean, Mr. Palmer was made its manager. In this he scored a big success, and it has attended his every operation since then.

Mr. Palmer later owned the New Orleans Item and at the present time,

CHARLES M. PALMER,

PRESIDENT OF THE COMPANY WHICH HAS PURCHASED THE BOSTON ADVERTISER AND WILL ALSO TAKE OVER BOSTON AMERICAN.

besides conducting his newspaper properties brokerage business, has numerous other personal newspaper interests. Mr. Palmer's business headquarters are at 225 Fifth avenue, New York City, and his home is at Saranac Lake, N. Y.

VIGILANCE IN SEATTLE.

A decision handed by the Supreme Court of Washington affirms a decision of the Superior Court dismissing an action for libel brought by Fahey & Brockman against the Seattle Retail Clothiers' Association, which had accused the firm of dishonest advertising.

The retail firm charged the association with injuring its business by informing the Seattle Ad Club that they were "advertising $25 suits for $15, while the suits they have in stock, which were so advertised, only cost from $9 to $9.50."

The New Hampton (Ia.) Courier has been discontinued.

THE PRINTERS WANT PAPER UNDER FEDERAL CONTROL.

The New York City Central Federated Union on November 10 unanimously indorsed the plan to be presented to Congress in December by the Senate printing committee for the Federal control of paper mills for the duration of the war. Edward C. Rybicki, delegate from Typographical Union No. 6, urged the resolution, which set forth that the Senate committee had followed the findings of the Federal Trade Commission, which stated:

"The evidence shows beyond any question that the print paper industry, in its greed for excessive profits, has imposed a most unjust burden upon the American press, which faces serious disaster if relief cannot speedily be had from the oppressive prices now exacted for print paper."

The Hearst Chicago newspapers have a roll of honor containing seventy-seven names.

SAYS ITALY'S SONS SHOULD FIGHT IN MOTHER LAND.

The Bollettino Della Sera (Italian Evening Bulletin) has begun a campaign to have men of Italian birth or descent now serving in the draft army sent to Italy to aid their mother country in repelling the invasion of the Teutonic hosts.

Frank L. Frugone, editor of the Bollettino, has launched a series of petitions addressed to President Wilson and the Bollettino, speaking of the movement, says:

"Many thousands of Italians and their sons now living in America are anxious to go and fight the invaders in defence of their country, their home and the land where they were born or where their fathers were born.

"Because of their customs, the knowledge more or less of the Italian language it will be an easy matter for them to understand and learn military instructions from the Italian officers. They will be inspired with double sense of patriotism and thus fight with greater courage and patriotic force, for they will be fighting for our country and their mother country."

"Already there has been a hearty response to the call," Mr. Frugone said the other day, "and we expect it to bear fruit."

FIRST CLASS MAIL LAWS AMENDED.

The following amendment to the Postal Laws and Regulations will affect those persons and concerns who have sought to secure the postage rate of two cents an ounce for their letters by sending the letters to other post offices to be mailed for local delivery, instead of mailing them at the post office where they are located and paying three cents an ounce. (Letters so mailed will be charged with the deficient postage at the three-cent rate for collection from the addressee on delivery):

"Paragraph 2, Section 399.—When persons or concerns of any city or place send their letters in bulk for mailing for local delivery at a post office at another city or place, such letters are not stamped and are not entitled to the stamp letter rate, but shall be charged with postage at the rate of three cents for each ounce or fraction of an ounce."

DEITRICH LEAVES HEARST.

Theodore C. Deitrich, for many years connected with the Hearst publications in New York in editorial positions and for the past two years advertising and publicity director of Mr. Hearst's International Film Service, has resigned.

Mr. Deitrich has announced the formation of De Luxe Pictures, Inc., a $200,000 concern, of which he has been elected president and general manager.

COPENHARVE HONORED.

The annual banquet of the Butte (Mont.) Newspapers' Association was held on November 11. While the affair was primarily the customary get-together session it also partook of the nature of a farewell dinner to Charles Copenhavre, for many years city editor of the Anaconda Standard, who will leave for California the last of this month.

Mr. Copenhavre was presented with a beautiful silver cigarette case.

MADISON'S DAILY ON JANUARY 1.

NEW PAPER WILL BE NON-PARTISAN, SAYS
EDITOR.

The Capital Times, the new evening newspaper at Madison, Wis., which THE FOURTH ESTATE has mentioned several times, will make its first appearance about January 1, instead of December 1, as had been announced. A large force of workmen is remodeling the Capital Times' building and modern equipment is being received daily by the new enterprise.

The Capital Times is starting with an organization headed by William T. Evjue, editor and general manager, who was formerly business manager of the Madison State Journal.

William C. Allman, the manager of advertising, was formerly advertising manager of the State Journal.

Harry Sage and Thomas C. Bowden, who will have charge of the circulation, were formerly in charge of the circulation of the State Journal.

The Capital Times has obtained the full leased wire service of the Associated Press.

"The Capital Times will be independent and will not be published in the interest of any party, group or individual," said Mr. Evjue to THE FOURTH ESTATE. "Southern Wisconsin is one of the finest fields in the Middle West for a progressive paper and we believe that the character of the paper which we will publish will appeal to this community."

The Dayton (Ohio) News circulation department recently addressed an inquiry to a national list of circulation managers. The Dayton News has used "Polly and Her Pals," "That Son-in-Law of Pa's," "Buster" and "Hans and Fritz" for the past three years and has increased its Sunday circulation in that time from twelve thousand to twenty-six thousand.

This is the result of the vote by the circulation managers addressed:

An analysis of the vote by the circulation managers, representing publications using different comics and in widely different fields, shows an overwhelming majority in favor of "Polly and Her Pals" as a circulation producer—and that more than sixty-three per cent voted for "That Son-in-Law of Pa's" and "Buster" as among the best.

This independent vote by the men who know results establishes a precedent for the choice of Newspaper Feature Service star features.

Dear Mr. Kavanaugh:

I am in receipt of yours of the 21st instant, and in reply to same will state that the four comics we are using are as follows:

THE KATZIES, THAT SON-IN-LAW OF PA'S, JUST BOY, DIMPLES.

Until we secured these comics, the writer is safe in stating that we had the worst comics of any paper in the South; but we feel now that we have the best comics of any paper going out from Atlanta.

Hearst prints a paper here. You know what the Hearst comics are. We feel that our comics, week out and week in, are better than his, principally on account of "That Son-in-Law of Pa's" and "Just Boy."

Our comics are purchased from the Newspaper Feature Service, 37 West 39th Street, New York City.

Yours very truly,

THE FREIGHT TAX PLAN "OK'D".

THE CLAUSE BOTHERING SOME ADVERTISERS IS EXPLAINED.

Secretary McAdoo has approved a ruling, mentioned in THE FOURTH ESTATE two weeks ago, which relieves newspaper publishers and express companies from a burdensome feature of the new war tax on express packages.

The practice of sending packages of newspapers by express to news dealers and subscribers along a railroad route presented a problem.

The express companies take such packages with the agreement to break them, and throw off specified portions at the various stations to which they are addressed, but charge only the lump rate for the whole package, which is taken by weight.

Some parts of the package may go only two or three miles, and others may go a hundred miles or more, but the single payment covers the entire bundle.

The office of the Internal Revenue Commissioner holds that the single payment is the one to be subjected to the tax.

The tax is one cent in every twenty cents that may be paid to an express company for carrying a package from one point to another point in the United States.

If it had been held that every part of a package of newspapers was a separate shipment the tax would have been very much increased.

FRENCH CENSORSHIP RULES TO BE REVISED.

Georges Clemenceau, the new French Premier, has promised to draw up regulations for military news, so as not to conflict with the liberty of the press.

The Premier says:

"We have paid too great a price for our liberties to cede any part of them beyond the need of preventing divulgations and excitations from which the enemy might profit. A censorship shall be maintained for diplomatic and military information, as well as for those susceptible of disturbing peace at home, up to the limits of respect for opinions. A press bureau will give advice, nothing but advice, to all who solicit it."

"In war time as in time of peace liberty is to be exercised under the personal responsibility of the writer. Outside of that rule there is only arbitrary anarchy."

M. Clemenceau has been editor of L'Homme Libre (the Free Man), which has been suspended several times since the beginning of the war because of criticism of the French Government. For this reason the name of the paper was changed to L'Homme Enchaîné (the Chained Man), appearing again under its original name a few days ago, after its editor had become Premier.

Stephon Pichon, political editor of the Petit Journal, was appointed Foreign Minister in the new Cabinet.

COURT PERMITS USE OF ADVERTISED SURNAME.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of New York has reversed the judgment of the Supreme Court, rendered in January, 1917, perpetually enjoining Albert Romeike & Co. from using its corporate name or the name "Romeike" as part of its name or in connection with advertising its press clipping business.

The court has now ruled that no one has a monopoly in the patronymic "Romeike," and holds that no man can, by turning his business over to the corporation bearing his name, bar any one else of the same name from using his family name in his own business.

"It is dishonesty in the use that is condemned, whether in a partnership or corporate name and not the use itself," said Judge Dowling in rendering his decision, and he declared further that there was no evidence of any dishonest use by Albert Romeike & Co. of its corporate name nor any resort to artifice or deceit to mislead the public or to cause confusion.

Albert Romeike, having left the employ of the Henry Romeike (Inc.) Press Clipping Bureau, started in a similar business, associated with Albert Reube. They were enjoined from using the name Albert Romeike & Co., in a judgment of the Supreme Court of New York on the ground that "while a person who does business under his name has a natural right to the use of it, a corporation must not adopt a name which would be confused with its competitors."

The two men then started a partnership under the name of Romeike & Reube. In June of this year, Judge Learned Hand of the United States District Court granted an injunction against their using the name of Romeike & Reube, because that partnership name had as its chief and distinctive title the name Romeike and would be likely to cause confusion.

Judge Hand's decree read as follows:

"The defendants are enjoined from using the name of Romeike & Reube, but not from using the title Reube & Romeike. They are likewise enjoined from adopting any other title designed or calculated to cause confusion between the plaintiff and themselves."

That decision is now over-ruled by the Appellate division of the Supreme Court.

GERMAN EDITOR ARRESTED.

Frank J. Dori, editor of the Vital Issue of New York, was arrested on November 22 at the request of the Department of Justice. Dori, was born in Germany and there educated as a chemist. He has been in this country fifteen years, early abandoning chemistry for journalism.

Dori said he never applied for citizenship for the reason that he preferred to remain loyal to the land of his birth. His publication, the Vital Issue, did not make its appearance until after the United States entered the war. He also was editor of Issues and Events, where it was stated after the arrest that Dori left the magazine early last spring.

IN SMITH'S MEMORY.

An impressive memorial service as a mark of tribute to the late Raleigh C. Smith, veteran newspaper man, was held last week at the club house of the Baltimore Press Club. Many prominent men of the city and scores of co-workers of the writer attended.

A handsome bronze tablet will be erected by the Baltimore press and placed on the walls of the club house.

ADVERTISING AND WAR CONTRACTS.

THE CLAUSE WHICH BOTHERED SOME ADVERTISERS IS EXPLAINED.

The interpretation of "Article 20" of purchase contracts made by the Government with manufacturers has caused some anxiety.

The text of the article reads as follows:

"ARTICLE XX. The contractor agrees to refrain from exploiting, by publicity, or otherwise, its product manufactured in the pursuance of this contract, or in any way publicly advertising the fact of the manufacture of said product, and to refrain from publishing or causing or allowing to be published any photographs, drawing, written or printed matter, or other data disclosing the articles, or parts of same, or the process of manufacture, or the plans of the government, or any information concerning the same, or which shall result in such disclosure. The contractor agrees to submit all pictures or printed matter showing, describing or in any way relating to the process of the work to be prosecuted under this contract, which he may desire to publish, before publishing the same, to the chief signal officer of the army, who may permit such publication, and shall have the right to censor the same."

While most advertisers felt that this was not meant to inhibit or restrict the general advertising of a contractor for Government work there were some who said it was not clear.

However, the War Department has stated this milder rendering is correct. A letter signed by Stanley King, War Department, Washington, D. C., says:

"This clause is apparently designed to meet two purposes:

"First. To prevent the publication of information or drawings disclosing a matter which might be of military importance, and,

"Second. To prevent a contractor using for advertising purposes the fact that he holds a contract with the Government."

"An analysis of the section in question seems to me to show clearly that it was not designed to prevent a manufacturer from carrying out his general advertising policy merely because he has accepted a contract with the Government. This section seems to me carefully drafted with this in view and I do not see that any ruling of this department could make it more clear than does the contract."

FOR METAL REFINING.

Improvements recently made in methods of manufacture have enabled the Stereotype Metal Flux Company, Canton, Ohio, to issue a new product called "Ambone," in solid, round tablets. Hereafter, orders for "Ambone" will be filled with the solid tablets, the company announces, excepting where the former black powder is specially specified.

In the tablet form, "Ambone" may be introduced, by means of a special metal stirring stick, into the bottom of a pot of molten stereotype or Linotype metal and allowed to work upward through all the metal, cleaning, fusing and refining it. In the powder form it was necessary to sprinkle the powder on the top of the pot and stir it into the metal with a ladle. In the new form "Ambone" is being guaranteed by its manufacturers to clean and fuse metal, retard oxidation and reduce dross accumulation fifty per cent.

The metal stirring stick, also being manufactured by the Stereotype Metal Flux Company, is being introduced to the trade in two sizes. One size is suitable for stirring remelting pots. The other size is suitable for using the "Ambone" flux for cleaning plunger pots in slug casting machines.

"THIS ORDER is subject to approval by the GOVERNOR-IN-COUNCIL.

"DATED AT OTTAWA this 17th day of November 19, 1917.

"R. A. PRINGLE,
"Controller."

This action temporarily relieved apprehension on the part of both producers and consumers, but at the same time it gave no inkling as to what might be expected in the future. In some quarters, significance is attached to the fact that this extension nicely covers the election period, but many people who know Mr. Pringle personally say they do not think that any such influence played any part in the decision to this effect.

While no official intimation has been made regarding the future course, it is understood by THE FOURTH ESTATE correspondent in Ottawa that Mr. Pringle proposes to thoroughly inquire, informally, into certain phases of the situation which were not made clear at the inquiry, in order to arrive at a finding which will be fair to all concerned. The probe has been a thorough one to date, but the evidence produced did not cover some grounds which Mr. Pringle is understood to consider essential.

Meanwhile, the producers are confident that, no matter what course the commissioners' investigations take, a fixed price of at least $3 per hundred will be decided upon, while the publishers are equally emphatic in declaring that such a price will force many of their number out of business.

The situation remains very mixed, and is likely to continue to do so until Mr. Pringle's final decision is arrived at.

In the meantime, the inquiry into the book paper situation will be gone ahead with.

SEVEN ON MASSES INDICTED.

ACCUSED OF VIOLATING THE ESPIONAGE ACT.

The Government took a great leap in its efforts to suppress alleged sedition when Max Eastman, editor, and six other of the Masses editorial and business staffs were indicted by the Federal grand jury in New York on November 10 on charges of conspiring to violate the Espionage Act.

The decision of Judge Rogers of the Circuit Court of Appeals on November 2 sustaining the action of the postal authorities in barring the Masses from the mails removed the last block from the path of the Federal authorities.

The court said: "If the magazine (the Masses) is non-mailable under that section it may be that the editor has committed a crime in publishing it for which upon conviction he may be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned for not more than twenty years, or both."

Earl B. Barnes, Government prosecutor, immediately laid the facts before the grand jury.

Besides Eastman, those indicted are Floyd Dell, managing editor; C. Merrill Rogers, Jr., business manager; Henry J. Glinkenkamp, cartoonist; Arthur Young, cartoonist; John Reed, writer, and Josephine Bell, poetess. In addition to the seven indictments, presentments were also filed against the Masses Publishing Company as a corporation and C. Merrill Rogers, Jr., as an individual, for attempting to use the mails for non-mailable matter.

The indictments were based on articles, cartoons and illustrations, which appeared in the Masses between June 15 and November 19, of the present year.

Special references are made to articles by the various defendants. "A Question," by Max Eastman; "Conscientious Objectors," by Floyd Dell; "Knit a Straightjacket for Your Soldier Boy," by John Reed, and "A Tribute," a poem by Josephine Bell, are mentioned as having appeared in the August number of the magazine.

A cartoon entitled "Death," by Glinkenkamp, in the October number and a picture called "Having Their Fling," by Young in the September issue, are also specified.

The indictment against the corporation and C. Merrill Rogers, Jr., cites that they attempted to mail copies of the August issue of the magazine, which was non-mailable at the time, the publication having been barred from the mails.

The indictment for conspiracy states that the magazine contained "articles, poems, cartoons and pictures calculated and intended to create and promote insubordination, disloyalty, mutiny and refusal of duty among the persons belonging to said military and naval forces of the United States, and among those liable to service therein, pursuant to the provision of the said act (Espionage Act) approved May 19, 1917."

"This action has been expected by us for some time," said Eastman. "The indictments seem to be a part of the organized effort of certain subordinate officials in the service of the United States Government to crush the voice of the Socialists. We have as yet no evidence that the courts of the United States are a party to these proceedings. We have complete confidence that they are not. I can say nothing concerning the steps we shall take."

The indictments constitute the latest effort of the authorities to suppress the alleged seditious utterances of the Masses. On July 5, W. H. Lamar, solicitor for the Post Office Department, ruled that the magazine had violated the Espionage Law by decrying conscription.

The entire August edition was held up in the mails by Postmaster Patten. On July 24, Federal Judge Learned Hand granted a temporary injunction restraining the Postmaster-General from barring the publication from the mails.

Assistant United States Attorney Earl B. Barnes then obtained an order from Judge C. M. Hough in the United States Circuit Court staying the injunction until the Circuit Court of Appeals could pass on the case.

A second injunction suit was brought by the Masses against Postmaster Patten when he barred the September issue from the mails on the ground that the magazine had forfeited its second class mailing privileges by failing to appear at regular intervals. The injunction was not granted and the Masses resorted to the first-class mails.

On November 2 the Circuit Court of Appeals sustained the Postmaster-General in barring the publication, reversing Judge Learned Hand.

ASSISTS IN FOOD WORK.

Paul W. Kieser, formerly a Dakota newspaper man and member of the faculty of the Northern Normal and Industrial School of Aberdeen, S. D., has been appointed assistant to former Governor C. N. Herreid, Federal food administrator for South Dakota, with offices in Aberdeen, and has already entered upon his new work.

A COAL SHORTAGE IN THE SOUTH.

PUBLISHERS ALSO FEAR TIE-UP ON RAILWAYS—HIGH TRUCK INSURANCE.

The coal shortage is giving some Southern publishers almost as much concern as that of the news print situation during its most acute stages, according to Secretary Walter C. Johnson of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association, who, reporting on newspaper conditions in the South says:

"Quite a number of publishers use a large quantity of coal for power and heating. The reduction in coal production, car shortage, together with the action of the Government in diverting coal to other points has caused a serious shortage of coal throughout the entire South.

"Publishers who made contracts with coal operators or jobbers felt they would be protected, but the unfavorable condition and general confusion among producers and jobbers has made the matter of delivery very uncertain at times. After experiencing some trouble in finding an operator who would sell a car, one publisher reports that the car was delayed in transit and upon arrival he experienced considerable difficulty in getting it hauled to his building. Although purchased for office use, he was compelled to relieve the distress of some of his employees by supplying a quantity for their home use.

"And all this is taking place in the sunny South in the early fall season.

RAILROAD TIE-UP PREDICTED.

"The International Harvester Company has just issued an announcement in the form of a paid advertisement appealing to customers to ship and have shipped all possible supplies at the earliest possible date, predicting the worse railroad tie-up in the history of the country this winter. In bringing the matter to the attention of the public, it gives as the reason of the prediction that the movement of troops and Government supplies, together with the inevitable reduction in the effectiveness of motive power on account of cold weather, shortage of fuel, and general congestion.

"Experience of publishers during the past few weeks indicates that there is some truth in the above prediction. Shipments of paper are being delayed long beyond the customary period. In fact, it is nothing unusual for a car of paper to be en route thirty days when usual time was ten days.

"Publishers are also finding considerable trouble in returning empty spools to the mill. Embargoes of the principal gateways on shipments routed through these gateways have caused considerable trouble, some publishers having resorted to rail and water routes in order to get the spools back to the mill.

HIGH INSURANCE ON NEWSPAPER DELIVERY TRUCKS.

"Publishers in several of the Southern states, who have recently purchased trucks for use in the delivery of papers, and have applied for liability insurance, have awakened to a realization that trucks used for delivering newspapers are under the classification A-1, which carries the highest rate on trucks. In fact, they are classed along with ambulances, police patrols, etc.

"As an illustration, the premium on a truck used by a lumber dealer is $50, while if that same truck is used by a newspaper for the delivery of papers the rate is $125. This includes public liability and employee liability. It makes no difference as to the size of the truck the rate being the same on a truck of 500 pounds capacity as one of two tons.

"The rate is highest in the states of Tennessee, Alabama and Kentucky. "In the states of North and South Carolina, Georgia, Louisiana and Mississippi the rate is about fifty per cent lower than that of the three states mentioned.

PUBLISHERS ACTIVE FOR LIBERTY LOAN.

"Members of the S. N. P. A. were among the most active and aggressive members of the various local campaign committees in their respective cities. These members not only devoted their news and editorial columns to furthering the sale of bonds, but got out and helped sell them.

"The patriotism of Southern publishers was exemplified to the fullest extent in the campaign which closed on October 27. No limit was placed on the amount of editorial and reading matter devoted to the second Liberty Loan. It stood first in importance from the very beginning.

"These publishers realized that a great deal depended upon the South, and the splendid results shown in the reports from the several Federal Reserve Districts and the leading cities in these districts proved the effectiveness of the publicity. The advertising columns played an important part in the campaign.

In a number of cities the local committees raised a fund which was devoted to newspaper advertising. This in many cases was supplemented by advertisements over the signatures of patriotic firms, corporations, and individuals.

"Every advertisement that appeared in a Southern publication was paid for through patriotic contributions or donations on the part of the newspapers. It was noted that in a number of instances publishers carried full pages in their own papers stating that it was a donation in addition to the editorial and news matter.

"It would be a difficult matter to estimate the total amount of display advertising that appeared in the papers of the 110 odd members of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association. St. Elmo Massengale of Atlanta, Ga., chairman of the advertising committee of the Sixth Federal Reserve District, has undertaken to compile a record of the amount of editorial news and advertising matter carried in the various daily and weekly newspapers in the Sixth District.

"It is doubtful if the total will be ascertained, although the figures he has already secured will prove a surprise to those who are not acquainted with the extent of publicity given by the various papers from the time the campaign was inaugurated until it closed on October 27."

The Worst Kind of Tax is surcharging the Memory

Professional men and women of many grades find it necessary almost every day to refer to matters with which it is inadvisable to burden the memory.

The New York Times Index is the friend of all workers in lines of research. It provides them with the outline of every event and leads to the supply house of information. The New York Times Index is an alphabetical arrangement of the world's events, constituting a guide to developments in every phase of activity—war, politics, literature, science, art, industry, finance, etc.

To locate any event and to ascertain details connected therewith, the New York Times Index is indispensable.

Professional and business men testify to the value of the Index. It is universally admitted that no library or office is complete without it.

THE NATIONAL ADVERTISING ADVISORY BOARD'S STAND—WHY OLD METHOD MUST BE CHANGED.

By HERBERT S. HOUSTON,
Chairman of the National Advertising Advisory Board.

Advertising is undertaking with power and courage and persistency to help win the war.

It has been calling and will continue to call the country to the battle-line of democracy. And the great thing about advertising is that it can speak in one strong voice and deliver one common message to the nation at one time. This unmatched power of advertising, as a means of human appeal, has never had greater confirmation than during the two Liberty Loans.

When we offered our services to Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, making it clear that the professional service of A.A.C.W. members and of the members of all the clubs, whose representative and servant we were, would be without cost to the Government, we stated it as our judgment that news and editorial publicity could not sell the bonds.

And I am going to quote the words we put in our printed plan which expressed our judgment on this point, for I am sure you will agree that our judgment has been established to be sound by the experience in both Loans.

"In this connection let me state the judgment of the National Advertising Advisory Board, based on wide experience and close investigation, that editorial and news publicity, however great its volume, will not be sufficient, unsupported by advertising, to place the whole loan. This judgment is based not merely on our own experience, but it is a clear and irresistible conclusion drawn from the experiences of all the great World Expositions, from the experience of Mr. Hoover and the Commission for the Relief of Belgium, from the experience of England and France in placing their war loans and from countless experiences of railroad companies and business and manufacturing concerns.

"Publicity gives information, but advertising spurs to action."

The Treasury Department agrees, and every banker and business man in the country who has been in touch with the selling of bonds, agrees that the view that we thus outlined has been demonstrated to be correct.

In Washington last week I was told by the Treasury Department that every one agreed that the advertising had been of incalculable and absolutely essential service. It has given the spur of action, which was essential to floating the loan.

And as convincing proof of our point as to the necessity of advertising, the number of subscribers to the loan have been in almost exact ratio to the power and amount of the advertising.

For example, in Rochester, N. Y., during the first loan, 60,000 individual buyers were secured which meant practically one buyer in every family in the city.

This was the result manifestly, in very great measure, of the strong and convincing advertising which was carried forward by L. B. Jones of our advertising board.

And in Muncie, Ind., a demonstration of almost equal completeness was made.

Indeed, there were similar demonstrations in every state in the Union. But I do not need to argue before advertising men as to the place and need of advertising in making a quick and sure and broad market for anything.

But there is one big and dramatic proof of our case that I must recount for your satisfaction. When the members of our board gathered in New York to complete the plan we were to submit to Secretary McAdoo, we had luncheon with a group of important investment bankers at the Manhattan Club. At that luncheon I asked President Franklin of the Investment Bankers Association of America; Mr. Mitchell, president of the National City Company of New York, and other great investment bankers, how many individual investors there were in the United States.

The highest number stated was 500,000. I remember saying that the great loans that would be needed to win the war could not be floated unless there should be 10,000,000 investors and that 10,000,000 investors could not be secured without the power and support of advertising.

All the bankers agreed that this number of investors or even more would be required. And here is a great thing to tell you—within forty days from that day 5,000,000 buyers were secured for the first Liberty Loan and for the second Liberty Loan, as announced in Washington, 9,000,000 individual investors were secured—an increase of over 9,000,000 beyond the number that the bankers of the country had secured in a generation by ordinary selling methods.

Surely here is a great demonstration of the power of advertising.

There is one point that I must refer to. The National Advertising Advisory Board stated in the beginning that advertising space was a commodity and that it should be bought as such, just as blankets or guns are bought.

And that is the view of the board today. It is the view of all advertising men. And that view, in effect, has prevailed.

The advertising that has been put behind the great Liberty Loans has been paid advertising. But the Government has not paid for it.

AMAZING WASTE OF MONEY.

It has been paid for by patriotic business men and organizations. Now I shall not stand second to any man in paying honor to these generous and patriotic men who have bought the space which our advertising boards have used in the selling campaigns. But I cannot stand here and speak truly unless I say that these volunteer contributions of space resulted in an amazing amount of waste.

They made it impossible to carry forward the controlled, efficient and economical campaign, which we had formulated and stood ready to carry out.

I state it deliberately, and I am confident that I am well within the mark, when I say that on the second loan over $5,000,000 were spent for paid advertising by business men and that an equal result could have been secured by an expenditure of $2,000,000 by the Government in wisely coordinated and wisely distributed advertising.

The truth is we fought the fight for the Liberty Loan with volunteer forces, but we are fighting the actual battles of the war with trained and efficient forces.

Some day our advertising and selling will be done by those who are best trained to do it, just as our Army and Navy are directed by those who are best able to direct them.

And then we shall not have a $3,000,000 loss through waste, as has been the case in the second Liberty Loan—and this loss and waste occurred in a time when we are crying to Heaven for conservation and economy.

I say deliberately, but without reservation, as a patriotic American citizen, that such loss and waste in a time of war is shameful loss and waste. And I say with equal positiveness that the responsibility does not rest on the National Advertising Advisory Board or the Associated Advertising Clubs.

We have stated again and again that in a democracy—and this war is for democracy—all the people constitute the Government. Therefore the advertising for selling the bonds of the Government should be paid for by all of the people and not by a few of the people.

AD MEN HAVE ENLISTED FOR THE WAR.

But let me say for the glory of our advertising men—and I say it with the deepest pride—we enlisted for the war.

We gave and we are glad to continue to give the Government our best judgment, based on advertising experience that we have paid hundreds of millions of dollars to get.

But we stand ready and shall continue to stand ready to help carry out any plan that is adopted. So when the Treasury Department announced its plans we rushed to the colors and fought with as much zeal and enthusiasm as though the plan had been our own. And that is precisely what we shall continue to do.

If we can't fight in regular Army service, where efficiency and economy and controlled advertising are the rule, we shall fight in the volunteer service.

And the power of advertising is so great and the generous and patriotic disposition of the American people is so great that we shall win the victory whether in regular service or in volunteer service.

But we want to make the point clear that there is a distinction and a difference between a regular campaign, carried on by the nation and a volunteer campaign carried on and paid for by a few citizens of the nation.

Let me point out just one of countless illustrations I could give of the inefficient and wasteful result from the volunteer plan. In one issue of the New York Times there were five and a half pages of Liberty Loan advertising in this last campaign.

Now no one holds the New York Times in higher esteem than I do, but there is not an advertising man in this country, worthy of the name, that would take five and a half pages in that paper in a single issue, while any number of papers that reach a large number of possible buyers were used inadequately or not used at all.

But the donors of this volunteer space stipulated where they wanted it to appear. It was not, therefore, within the control of the district advertising boards to say how the advertising should be used. The result was wasteful duplication and ineffectiveness.

We as advertising men can increase the military power, the naval power and the economic power of the nation through advertising and we propose to do everything within our reach to see that that power is made irresistible, to the end that Prussian autocracy may be overthrown and democracy and civilization preserved.

WHAT NEWSPAPER ADS DID IN GREENE COUNTY, MO.

The city of Springfield, Mo., and Greene County exceeded its quota of the Liberty Bonds by half a million dollars. The amount of the minimum allotment was $1,240,000, and the total amount of sales was $1,777,000. This feat was accomplished very largely through newspaper advertising at a cost of only 53/100ths of the amount of the sales.

A letter written to J. M. Acuff, advertising manager of the Springfield Leader, by Vance C. Criss, who managed the publicity in the territory, tells how the campaign was handled and points out how display space in daily newspapers played such an important part in the success. The letter follows:

My DEAR Mr. ACUFF:
First of all, let me say that I (Continued on Next Page, Last Column)

LESSONS BY LORD NORTHCLIFFE.

GREAT BRITAIN'S CENSORSHIP EXAMPLES LESSONS FOR U. S., SAYS PRESS.

American newspapers have drawn several lessons for the United States from the outspoken criticism made by Lord Northcliffe this past week, of Great Britain's war cabinet and war policies; also from the war news censorship example of Great Britain. For instance, the New York Sun says:

"CONCERNING THE CENSORSHIP OF OPINION.

"From the American point of view it is refreshing and encouraging to observe the toleration, both in England and in France, of honest criticism of Government, of governmental policy and of governmental measures. In those great and free countries the distinction is clearly made between criticism that is designed to obstruct and criticism that is intended to help the national effort.

"There is no longer much confusion in the popular mind, at least in Britain and in Gaul, of the two widely different attitudes of disloyalty to the cause itself and of disagreement with the opinions or acts of those temporarily in authority, when the matter in question is merely the wisdom of method or the expediency of process.

"Lord Northcliffe's letter to Lloyd George, stating with characteristic frankness his opinion of certain aspects of war administration at London, affords the latest illustration of that which we are saying.

"How easy it would be in a slightly different public mood, and from a slightly different angle of observation, to represent this patriotic, intelligent and outspoken critic of war methods as a seditious person, a bringer of aid and comfort to the enemy, an assailant from within the lines of the cause in which, as we all know so well, his heart and soul and mind are devoted to the utmost limit of personal devotion.

"What would happen to Lord Northcliffe, for instance, if he were a German, expressing in similar fashion his opinion of the German High Command?

"Yet in England and in France and (we hope) also in America, in Lord Northcliffe's case and in all similar cases, the distinction will be clearly drawn between loyalty to the flag and the cause and 'loyalty' to the persons for the time being in charge of operations; that is to say, intellectual subservience combined with perfunctory admiration of anything they may think or do.

"Lord Northcliffe's warning will be heeded, as it has been heeded before. His advice will be taken, as it has been taken before. The nation will profit by his warning and advice, as the nation has profited before. And his courage and freedom of utterance, thus tolerated in England, will result not in aid and comfort to the enemy, but in incalculable damage to that enemy.

"In France, likewise, there long ago ceased to be any attempt to put the gag on public opinion about the conduct of the war.

"Sedition there would be promptly suppressed, if sedition showed its ugly flat head.

"Treason would be sternly punished, if treason were discovered.

"But meanwhile there would be in France no sort of confusion of treason or sedition with mere difference of opinion as to the capability of men or the wisdom of measures.

"Indeed, it is a somewhat striking coincidence that on the very day when Lord Northcliffe's letter to Lloyd George was published in London and New York Georges Clemenceau, in Paris, was engaged in forming a ministry to take the place of a cabinet overthrown in consequence of just such loyal if destructive criticism as Teuton censorship would have treated as treasonable and suppressed with ruthless rigor.

"Let us rejoice here in America that the Prussian system of suppression of criticism and shackling of public opinion is not prevailing in either Great Britain or France.

"There is still a portion of the civilized world where those checks on utterance that forbid adverse comment on the wisdom of policies or the competency of individuals in the Government are not applied according to the methods of autocracy; where a proper and healthy and advantageous freedom of speech exists even in time of war."

The New York Journal of Commerce says:

"THE POWER OF PUBLICITY.

"It is evident that Lord Northcliffe feels that he can be of greater service to his country by retaining his liberty of publicity and criticism, in person and through the press that he controls.

"He has made himself conspicuous, not only by the exercise of that liberty, but by advocating the policy of taking the people into the confidence of the Government by keeping them well informed and allowing free discussion of the questions raised in the course of events.

"As one of the results of his observation in this country, referring to the obstruction and delay in sending Lord Reading's 'vital and most successful mission' over here, Lord Northcliffe says: 'I find the censorship still being misused and that men in various positions of authority, who should have been punished, have been retained and in some cases elevated.'

"Speaking of the achievements of the British War Mission sent over here and their assistants, as deserving to be better known by their Government, he says: 'The fact that their work is not known is due to the absurd secrecy about the war which still is prevalent. Everything these officials are doing is known to our American friends, and, of course, to the Germans.'

"Speaking of the documents that passed through his own hands over here, he expresses the belief that if they were published it would greatly increase our prestige in the United States and hearten our people at home."

"He attributes the 'tragedy' of the situation in Russia, in Italy and earlier the tragedies of Serbia, Rumania and Montenegro, to the propaganda of Germany which the Allies did nothing to expose or counteract.

"There is one tragedy that he feels sure that the Allies will not encounter, and that is 'the tragedy of the United States.'

"He declares that he knows from countless conversations with leading Americans that unless there is swift improvement of methods in England 'the United States will rightly take into its own hands the entire management of a great part of the war. It will not sacrifice its blood and treasure to the incompetent handling of the affairs of Europe.'

"This is in itself an example of the liberty of speech that he believes in."

"In all this there is a lesson which is somewhat needed in Government circles in this country, notwithstanding the compliments of Lord Northcliffe and the contrast which he found here with conditions in corresponding circles at home.

"It is not to be denied that in time of war there are some things connected with strategy and the movements of military and naval forces that should not be disclosed.

"But at the beginning of our actual participation in the war on the side of the Allies in Europe, there were strange efforts on the part of the Government, both executive and legislative departments, for closely restricting publicity, for censoring reports and statements of fact, and expressions of judgment and opinion as well.

"This was in direct opposition to the general spirit of the people of the country and the principles of freedom of speech and of the press which is one of the foundation stones of our Republic.

"Much less was accomplished in this direction than was attempted, and such restraint of opinion and its expression as was provided for has not had much direct effect.

"What has been done by censorship of publication and transmission by mail is of questionable benefit to say the least. It is liable to do more harm than good.

"Everything in the nature of disloyal attack upon the Government, of misrepresentation and false statement, of effect to hinder, obstruct or defeat the conduct of the Government as a party to the war, should be severely dealt with.

"On the other hand, what the Government may do to conceal its own conduct and purposes, to keep the people in ignorance and to suppress their liberty of judgment and opinion on what is happening, being done or proposed to be done, is far more likely to do harm to the cause at stake than to help its vindication.

"The people should be brought together in united support of their Government and the cause for which it is exerting all its power.

"This will be done most effectively if they are fully informed and are enabled to understand what is going on and why, and are free to exchange opinions and form judgments under the influence of a strong sentiment of loyalty which will then be sure to prevail.

"This kind of publicity will prove to be an element of power and not of weakness for the Government.

"There is far more danger from concealment of action and designs than from their exposure to the light."

SOUTH DAKOTA PAPERS ARE COMPLIMENTED.

Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo was much pleased at the big over-subscription which Brown County, S. D., made in the recent Liberty Loan campaign. He says so in a letter to J. H. McKeever, editor of the Aberdeen American, in which he extended his congratulations to the subscribers, the workers and the newspapers. He expressed appreciation of the work which the newspapers did there and everywhere in making the bond issue a success.

Brown county led the state in point of over subscription with sixty-four per cent on a quota of $350,000.

WHAT NEWSPAPER ADS DID IN GREENE COUNTY, MO.

believe paid newspaper advertising was in no small measure responsible for the showing Greene County made.

I do not wish to minimize the benefit the campaign received from news space, but I do believe the paid space was one of the big features. In this campaign we used half pages and whole pages daily in the Springfield papers, and half pages in the weekly papers of the county. It is of the page space in the dailies, however, that I desire especially to speak.

In paying for space we were enabled to use this space exactly as we saw fit. This gave the opportunity for a systematic advertising campaign along the following lines:

The campaign was opened by an explanation of Government bonds, telling what they were, what their security was, what interest they bore, and when they would be paid. This was followed by an explanation as to the purpose of the bonds. Then came a discussion of the bonds as investments. Next was an advertisement devoted exclusively to telling how one might purchase bonds.

Then came an appeal to various classes to buy bonds. This covered a series of advertising within itself, an appeal being made to women, men on a small salary, to citizens of foreign birth and financiers.

Then came a series of advertisements seeking to set forth a patriotic duty to all classes to buy bonds, as the duty of every loyal citizen.

I trust this will make clear to you my reason for saying that paid space is essential.

All these points of course could be brought out in news stories, but the style of news composition would not permit the wording a publicity man might desire, nor the emphasis of certain features of the advertisement to be obtained by the use of different types and the arrangement of matter.

In conclusion, it seems to me that paid space is essential, that plenty of space is highly desirable, and that constant rather than sporadic use of this space is absolutely necessary if one accomplishes the results he seeks.

A NEW PULITZER EXECUTIVE.

YOUNGEST SON OF NOTED PUBLISHER OF N. Y. WORLD IS APPOINTED.

Herbert Pulitzer, youngest son of the late Joseph Pulitzer, publisher of the New York World, who has just attained his majority, appeared in person before Surrogate Fowler in New York on November 21 and petitioned to be appointed a trustee of the Pulitzer Estate in place of J. Angus Shaw, one of the original executors and trustees under the will of Mr. Pulitzer.

The petitioner gave his home address as 7 East 73d street, New York, but said that his temporary address was the naval aviation detachment, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Cambridge, Mass.

On the recommendation of his brothers Ralph and Joseph and the officers of the Union Trust Company, who form the trustees of the estate, the surrogate granted the prayer of the petitioner and signed the order making the petitioner one of the trustees of the estate.

Under the provision of the will Mr. Shaw had to serve as executor only until Herbert Pulitzer reached the age of twenty-one, which he did this week.

QUICK CHANGE IN LOUISVILLE.

New composing room machinery, comprising a battery of fourteen Intertypes, was installed this week by the Louisville Herald. For five years the Herald had used fifteen Monotypes, and was one of the few papers in the country to use this type of machine to the exclusion of "slug-casting" type-setters.

The Herald has retained two Monotype casters, which will be used in casting display and head-letter type. The new Intertypes will cast from six-point to thirty-six-point, and the majority of the heads will be set on machines.

The change was made over-night, a force of twenty men being required to make the move. Work started at 2 a.m. before the last form had been sent to the stereotypers. At six o'clock the next night nine of the Intertypes were at work and by eight o'clock the whole battery was in service.

Remodeling of the composing room was done by carpenters before the installation of the new machines.

PAPER ASSOCIATIONS TO MEET IN FEBRUARY.

The American Paper & Pulp Association will hold its next convention on February 4-7 at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York. The annual banquet will take place on February 7.

The National Paper Trade Association has set February 4-6 as the dates for the next convention. The meetings, together with the annual banquet which will be held on February 6, will be in the Waldorf-Astoria, New York.

The committee in charge of the banquet is composed of K. S. Warner, chairman; George F. Perkins, Jr., Fritz Lindenmeyr, Charles H. Baldwin and William C. Ridgway.

"Making Good" in the Panhandle State

LAST March the Charleston (W. Va.) Mail installed a Model 17 Linotype—the first of this model to go into the Panhandle State.

Mr. Williams, the machinist in charge, who had never before seen a Model 17, erected the machine without assistance.

Four months later Mr. Walter E. Clark, President of the Charleston Mail, wrote:

"Our Model 17 has been operating with no interruption whatever. Foreman and all our operators are enthusiastic over its ready versatility, smooth running, and all-round efficiency."

Aside from their simplicity, continuous composition Linotypes possess many time and labor saving features that are exclusively Linotype.

NEW IOWA ASSOCIATION.

Responding to the invitation of W. P. Wortman of the Malvern (Ia.) Leader, a number of newspaper publishers met at Malvern on November 15 for the purpose of organizing a county association.

A permanent organization was perfected by the election of C. W. Bays of the Silver City Times, president, and W. P. Wortman, secretary.

The object of the association is to establish and maintain a uniform schedule of prices for job printing, and for the purpose of holding occasional meetings to talk over various phases of the country newspaper conditions and the printing business in general; also create good fellowship among the members.

The visitors were the guests of Mr. Wortman at the Cottage Hotel for dinner. Another meeting will be held at Glenwood on December 7 for the purpose of adopting by-laws for the guidance of the association.

INTER-STATE BODY IS FORMED.

CIRCULATORS OF MARYLAND, PENNSYLVANIA, NEW JERSEY AND DELAWARE MEET.

Following generally in the footsteps of the sectional organizations of circulation men that have recently been formed by New York, New England and Ohio newspaper circulation managers in their respective territories, a number of circulation men of newspapers in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia met on Tuesday in the Adelphia Hotel, Philadelphia, and organized the Inter-States Circulation Managers Association.

The purpose of the organization is to create a spirit of closer co-operation between the circulation men in these territories and bring about a beneficial interchange of ideas so that from the sum total of their experiences and effort each member may be able to cope more vigorously with the problems that arise from time to time, and be able, collectively, to bring about conditions and changes which may be mutually advantageous.

A. E. MacKinnon of the Philadelphia North American was elected temporary chairman and A. R. Michener of the Harrisburg (Pa.) Telegraph acted as temporary secretary and will do so until permanent officers are chosen at a subsequent meeting in the very near future.

The problem of newspapers' sales and distribution in the various soldiers' training camps was the main topic of discussion. This problem seems to be quite an urgent one just now for newspapers throughout the country, and is occupying the attention of almost every circulation man.

In many cases papers have been sent to training camps and have been either lost in transit or have disappeared with a total loss to the publishers; and in a good many cases it has been hard to collect for papers actually sold.

A method has been sought which would obviate any loss to the publishers, be of profit to the divisional camp exchanges selling the papers; not do away with the privilege of sales promotion which some of the newspapers are doing or might wish to do, and yet allow the small newspapers to come in for their share of patronage at the various cantonments.

PLAN FOR CAMP CIRCULATION.

M. T. Zepp, circulation manager of the Washington Times, and a member of the new organization, told the circulation men what had been accomplished by E. D. Shaw, publisher of the Times, and himself in that respect, and submitted the following suggestions evolved by them, which he thought might be advisable to take up with Harold Braddock of the Commission on Training Camp Activities, a branch of the service under the United States War Department, in charge of divisional camp exchanges, where newspapers and other periodicals are sold:

"1. No newspaper, periodical or magazine shall be given superior facilities for sale or preferred display to any other of its general classification.

"2. The price paid by the camp agent for newspapers, periodicals and magazines shall be in each case not less than the wholesale price regularly charged by the publication. It transportation expense in getting publications into camp from a transfer point is necessary and is incurred by the agent, the actual expense involved may be apportioned and charged among the publications benefiting.

"3. The price charged the purchaser shall not be more than the published retail price for the publication unless written authorization has been obtained from the publisher to sell at a higher price.

"4. While the camp agent is not required to put on sale all publications offered to him for that purpose, it is expected that he will put on sale those newspapers, periodicals and magazines for which there is a natural and expected demand.

"5. Agents authorized to sell newspapers, periodicals and magazines within the limits of the camp are expected to agree in advance to the principles outlined above and permission to sell within the camp should be made conditional upon the observance and maintenance of those principles."

ALL ASSOCIATIONS TO CO-OPERATE.

Mr. Zepp also said that he brought a personal message from the Government in Washington that it is willing to meet newspaper publishers half way in any proposition that would solve the problem. All that is necessary was to formulate some definite plan of operation satisfactory to all.

A committee of three was appointed, consisting of Mr. Zepp, F. A. Clark of the Philadelphia Evening Ledger, and A. R. Michener to act in co-operated with committees appointed by other sectional managers, associations and representatives from the magazines to formulate a plan and present it to Mr. Braddock in Washington, tending to satisfactorily solve the problem of distribution and sale of newspapers in army cantonments.

The next meeting of the association will be held on December 11, at Philadelphia, when a full attendance is looked for and definite steps will be taken in that direction.

CHECKING UP THE PRESS COUNT

WITH NUMBER OF PAPERS SENT OUT THROUGH THE CIRCULATION END.

By HUGH A. AKIN.

Circulation Manager Columbus (Ohio) Citizen.

What system is best to check up the press run from the counters on the press with the total number of papers sent out in the various branches of circulation?

I have frequently heard complaint along this line, and, personally, have experienced considerable trouble until we were able to work out our present system.

Our press room is located in the basement of our building and papers are delivered to the mailing room on hydraulic lifts and the normal load is 300 papers.

Our presses are five-deck straight-line Goss presses with a capacity of twenty pages to a single fold, and never do we exceed twenty pages, not running any supplements or sections. These presses deliver papers in bunches of fifty, and the fly-boy criss-crossing the papers easily determines when he has 300, and then carries same to the lifts.

There are two of these lifts, and each is manned by a boy stout enough to easily carry 300 papers of the maximum size. Our mailing room is so arranged that the papers for the five branches of distribution—namely mail, express, newsboys, office carriers and branch carriers—are in separate parts of the room.

The boys who man these lifts have a sheet conveniently at hand separated into these five departments, and as they take from the lifts these 300 papers they are checked out to the department to which they are delivered.

For example, if a bundle of 300 papers is delivered to the man at the newsboys' window, under the column of newsboys is marked with a single stroke the fact that 300 papers have been delivered to this department, and likewise to the others when delivered to them.

This sheet is a little more than an ordinary tally sheet, and, as I said before, each stroke indicating 300 papers. This is made so simply that it is almost fool-proof.

Then, at the end of each edition run, these sheets are turned in to the chief mailing clerk, who at the end of the day compares them with the pressman's report of total perfect print—and, I might add that our net daily press run for the year of 1916 was 74,526, with an average of papers not accounted for of twenty-two.

With the many chances for miscount, I think that the average of twenty-two is practically the minimum.

By dividing the distribution in the mailing room into the five departments before mentioned, it also offers an opportunity to very easily trace any extraordinary discrepancy.

As a method of checking spoils, our pressman has adopted the following plan, which in a small office like ours, has proven very satisfactory.

The press counters are changed on each edition, or, rather, set back for each edition, but instead of starting at zero we start at all nine's, excepting the last number, which is set at five. This gives him an opportunity to turn the press five revolutions, or the equivalent of ten papers, which takes care of all spoiled papers in changing the plates or increasing the size of the paper from one edition to another.

These papers as they come through are laid aside, first counted, and then at the close of the edition, with whatever spoils may arise, are weighed.

Understand me now, weighed and counted for each edition, and whenever this is tried, you will be surprised at that notwithstanding not all full papers come out of the press, how close weight and count come.

These papers also give an opportunity to the fly-boy to make up quite a number of perfect print papers, as certain papers on one press will be perfect where those on the other are not, and by looking them over at the end of the run, as I said before, several perfect print papers can be secured.

With us this system has been in vogue so long that it is pretty nearly second nature, and it is possible that I may have skipped over some point that would be of interest, and if so I would be pleased to answer any questions that may be put to me on this point.

NEWS NOTES OF CIRCULATORS.

The circulation staff of the Des Moines (Ia.) Register and Tribune was banqueted by Gardner Cowles, publisher, at the Savery Hotel on November 12, to celebrate the gain in circulation enabling them to reach the 100,000 mark.

The staff, composed of twenty-five men in direct connection with carrier and newsdealer work, was addressed by Mr. Cowles, who discussed the print paper situation, the increase in postage and why the Government would not permit news of the movement of troops to be printed.

A banquet will be held about December 1 for the circulation road men who are working on the rural routes of Iowa soliciting cash-in-advance subscriptions and who expect to have a real harvest during the months of December, January and February.

J. L. Garrison has become identified with the Register and Tribune road circulation staff.

The Morton Ross Company has changed its headquarters from Galveston, Tex., to Columbus, Ohio.

This firm has just closed circulation campaigns for the Johnstown (Pa.) Leader and the Frankfort (Ind.) Crescent-News.

Charles D. Isaacson, editor of "Our Family Music Page" of the New York Globe, read "Face to Face with Brahms" at the Globe concert on November 11. Two thousand Globe Music Club members were present.

During the same afternoon the Globe's choruses co-operated with the New Singing Society for the benefit of the Syrian-Armenian fund at the New York Hippodrome.

The Louisville Courier-Journal has reduced the subscription price for the daily, (by mail), from $6 to $5 per year.

The Philadelphia North American will insert in every copy of its issue of Sunday, December 2, a Government picture, "The Army," by James Montgomery Flagg. Another Government picture appeared in the issue of Sunday, September 2.

A. E. MacKinnon, promotion manager, says that the North American has secured the exclusive use of those Government pictures distributed.

Glenn Stewart, of the circulation department of the Quincy (Ill.) Whig, became circulation manager of that paper on November 12. Mr. Stewart was formerly circulation manager of the Dixon (Ill.) Leader and has been with the Whig since February of this year.

The circulation department of the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal and the Times came to a halt for a time Wednesday afternoon, while a delegation representing the different branches of the circulation department called upon G. E. Johnson, who until a week ago was circulation manager of both papers, and presented to him a handsome initialed ring and a handsome traveling bag.

The presentation speech was made by Miss Stella Floyd, who was Mr. Johnson's private secretary for many years and who continues with the circulation department since J. L. Bomar has succeeded Mr. Johnson as circulation manager, in the capacity of Mr. Bomar's first assistant.

Mr. Johnson will continue as Mr. Watterson's private secretary and will act in an advisory capacity in connection with solving circulation problems and in addition will be in charge of an improved filing system for illustrations and articles to be installed by the Courier-Journal and the Times.

Charles M. Gunnison, former circulation manager of the New York Evening Mail, the Denver Post and the Denver Times, is now with the William L. Betts Company, World Building, New York.

The Betts Company has just started a nine and a half weeks' campaign for the Meriden (Conn.) Journal, giving away two automobiles and various other prizes in a popularity contest.

The Jacksonville (Fla.) Daily Metropolitan newsies to the number of more than half a hundred were participants in an enjoyable outing given for them one night last week by the circulation department of the newspaper at Camp McDonald, on Arch Creek. The boys were under the chaperonage of R. H. Berg, circulation manager, and Reese Combs, advertising manager.

FRANCE TO GET MORE NEWS PRINT PAPER.

The principal newspapers of France have jointly organized a National Paper Office. Through this organization an appeal has been made to the Interministerial French Press Commission to have provided ample space in French government ships in which to transport news print paper from the United States to France.

This appeal has resulted in the government's placing at the disposal of the National Paper Office such space as will be necessary to provide the French newspapers with what paper they need.

The charge for this space will be approximately $50 per ton. F. o. b. ship cost, plus ocean freight, landing charges at the French ports and rail haul to Paris will mean that the French publishers' paper, laid down to them, will cost between eight and eight and one-half cents per pound.

This is a new and interesting phase of the news print paper situation so far as it affects the newspaper publishers of France.

MAGAZINE MEN ASK REPEAL OF POSTAL INCREASE.

A resolution urging the Government to repeal the recently passed postal rate increases on second class mail matter was adopted on November 19 by the Representatives' Club, which is composed of magazine advertising men, at a luncheon at Hotel McAlpin, New York.

In discussing the resolution, John Adams Thayer, secretary of the Periodical Publishers' Association, said that the new law will so restrict circulation that in the end the Government will suffer a loss of postal income, instead of increasing its revenue from this source.

MAGAZINE PUBLISHERS' VIEW OF HIGHER POSTAL RATES.

EDITOR THE FOURTH ESTATE.

SIR: The adoption by the United States Government of a flat rate for magazines and newspapers of one cent a pound was one of the greatest and most far reaching moves ever promulgated.

I presume that it was the idea of our Congress at that time that a low postal rate would not only promote education, consolidate opinion, and make for national unity of thought and feeling, but that it would bring the people in all parts of the country into constant touch with national affairs.

The results from this low postage rate have been tremendous in many ways.

The periodical press has been largely instrumental in bringing about the greatest solidarity of public opinion on matters of national importance.

It has been the means of educating the people, bringing to millions of homes the best literature at a minimum cost.

It is a fact that magazines, periodicals and newspapers generally have not only multiplied in number, but have made giant strides in circulation, and in the increase in advertising has been marvelous.

But we must not forget the great benefits which the people enjoy on account of the tremendous circulation of national publications with their advertising income. It is this enormous revenue, as well as the flat rate of a cent a pound postage, which has enabled American publishers to make their periodicals the best in the world.

But the large circulation and advertising incomes have been built up under the flat rate of postage. With the tremendous increase called for by the bill, which goes into effect next July, if not repealed, the price of the publications must be increased.

This increase of subscription price will naturally decrease circulation; decreased circulation means a lower advertising rate, and hence less advertising income.

Less advertising income means cheaper paper, cheaper illustrations, lower prices to authors, lower salaries to solicitors, clerks and other workers, a reduction of employees to conform to conditions and bankruptcy for thousands.

I say thousands and believe I am right in saying thousands, for probably more than 50 per cent. of the publications existing today will be forced to suspend publication if this bill goes into effect. The printing industry, now the third industrial activity in this country, will suffer tremendously.

There are some 700,000 men directly employed and dependent upon the printing industry. With this tax in effect, probably 30 to 50 per cent. of these men will be forced out of employment.

If this bill is not repealed, magazines will have to increase their prices tremendously, and the public, therefore, will refuse to subscribe to a great many of them.

Enough, certainly, will be forced out of business to nullify any proposed increase in postal revenue, while those which do survive will be greatly reduced in circulation.

CHECKING UP THE PRESS COUNT

WITH NUMBER OF PAPERS SENT OUT THROUGH THE CIRCULATION END.

By HUGH A. AKIN.

Circulation Manager Columbus (Ohio) Citizen.

What system is best to check up the press run from the counters on the press with the total number of papers sent out in the various branches of circulation?

I have frequently heard complaint along this line, and, personally, have experienced considerable trouble until we were able to work out our present system.

Our press room is located in the basement of our building and papers are delivered to the mailing room on hydraulic lifts and the normal load is 300 papers.

Our mailing room is so arranged that the papers for the five branches of distribution—namely mail, express, newsboys, office carriers and branch carriers—are in separate parts of the room.

The boys who man these lifts have a sheet conveniently at hand separated into these five departments, and as they take from the lifts these 300 papers they are checked out to the department to which they are delivered.

For example, if a bundle of 300 papers is delivered to the man at the newsboys' window, under the column of newsboys is marked with a single stroke the fact that 300 papers have been delivered to this department, and likewise to the others when delivered to them.

This sheet is a little more than an ordinary tally sheet, and, as I said before, each stroke indicating 300 papers. This is made so simply that it is almost fool-proof.

Then, at the end of each edition run, these sheets are turned in to the chief mailing clerk, who at the end of the day compares them with the pressman's report of total perfect print—and, I might add that our net daily press run for the year of 1916 was 74,526, with an average of papers not accounted for of twenty-two.

With the many chances for miscount, I think that the average of twenty-two is practically the minimum.

By dividing the distribution in the mailing room into the five departments before mentioned, it also offers an opportunity to very easily trace any extraordinary discrepancy.

As a method of checking spoils, our pressman has adopted the following plan, which in a small office like ours, has proven very satisfactory.

The press counters are changed on each edition, or, rather, set back for each edition, but instead of starting at zero we start at all nine's, excepting the last number, which is set at five. This gives him an opportunity to turn the press five revolutions, or the equivalent of ten papers, which takes care of all spoiled papers in changing the plates or increasing the size of the paper from one edition to another.

These papers as they come through are laid aside, first counted, and then at the close of the edition, with whatever spoils may arise, are weighed.

Understand me now, weighed and counted for each edition, and whenever this is tried, you will be surprised at that notwithstanding not all full papers come out of the press, how close weight and count come.

These papers also give an opportunity to the fly-boy to make up quite a number of perfect print papers, as certain papers on one press will be perfect where those on the other are not, and by looking them over at the end of the run, as I said before, several perfect print papers can be secured.

With us this system has been in vogue so long that it is pretty nearly second nature, and it is possible that I may have skipped over some point that would be of interest, and if so I would be pleased to answer any questions that may be put to me on this point.

NEWS NOTES OF CIRCULATORS.

The circulation staff of the Des Moines (Ia.) Register and Tribune was banqueted by Gardner Cowles, publisher, at the Savery Hotel on November 12, to celebrate the gain in circulation enabling them to reach the 100,000 mark.

The staff, composed of twenty-five men in direct connection with carrier and newsdealer work, was addressed by Mr. Cowles, who discussed the print paper situation, the increase in postage and why the Government would not permit news of the movement of troops to be printed.

A banquet will be held about December 1 for the circulation road men who are working on the rural routes of Iowa soliciting cash-in-advance subscriptions and who expect to have a real harvest during the months of December, January and February.

J. L. Garrison has become identified with the Register and Tribune road circulation staff.

The Morton Ross Company has changed its headquarters from Galveston, Tex., to Columbus, Ohio.

This firm has just closed circulation campaigns for the Johnston (Pa.) Leader and the Frankfort (Ind.) Crescent-News.

Charles D. Isaacson, editor of "Our Family Music Page" of the New York Globe, read "Face to Face with Brahms" at the Globe concert on November 11. Two thousand Globe Music Club members were present.

During the same afternoon the Globe's choruses co-operated with the New Singing Society for the benefit of the Syrian-Armenian fund at the New York Hippodrome.

The Louisville Courier-Journal has reduced the subscription price for the daily, (by mail), from $6 to $5 per year.

The Philadelphia North American will insert in every copy of its issue of Sunday, December 2, a Government picture, "The Army," by James Montgomery Flagg. Another Government picture appeared in the issue of Sunday, September 2.

A. E. MacKinnon, promotion manager, says that the North American has secured the exclusive use of those Government pictures distributed.

FRANCE TO GET MORE NEWS PRINT PAPER.

The principal newspapers of France have jointly organized a National Paper Office. Through this organization an appeal has been made to the Interministerial French Press Commission to have provided ample space in French government ships in which to transport news print paper from the United States to France.

This appeal has resulted in the government's placing at the disposal of the National Paper Office such space as will be necessary to provide the French newspapers with what paper they need.

The charge for this space will be approximately $50 per ton. F. o. b. ship cost, plus ocean freight, landing charges at the French ports and rail haul to Paris will mean that the French publishers' paper, laid down to them, will cost between eight and eight and one-half cents per pound.

This is a new and interesting phase of the news print paper situation so far as it affects the newspaper publishers of France.

MAGAZINE MEN ASK REPEAL OF POSTAL INCREASE.

A resolution urging the Government to repeal the recently passed postal rate increases on second class mail matter was adopted on November 19 by the Representatives' Club, which is composed of magazine advertising men, at a luncheon at Hotel McAlpin, New York.

In discussing the resolution, John Adams Thayer, secretary of the Periodical Publishers' Association, said that the new law will so restrict circulation that in the end the Government will suffer a loss of postal income, instead of increasing its revenue from this source.

MONEY FOR CHARITY.

In the Hudson County (N. J.) Newspaper Men's Baseball League games last summer $372 was realized. Through Commissioner A. Harry Moore, who was the treasurer of the fund, this amount has been divided among the charitable institutions of the county.

MAGAZINE PUBLISHERS' VIEW OF HIGHER POSTAL RATES.

EDITOR THE FOURTH ESTATE.

Sir: The adoption by the United States Government of a flat rate for magazines and newspapers of one cent a pound was one of the greatest and most far reaching moves ever promulgated.

I presume that it was the idea of our Congress at that time that a low postal rate would not only promote education, consolidate opinion, and make for national unity of thought and feeling, but that it would bring the people in all parts of the country into constant touch with national affairs.

The results from this low postage rate have been tremendous in many ways.

The periodical press has been largely instrumental in bringing about the greatest solidarity of public opinion on matters of national importance.

It has been the means of educating the people, bringing to millions of homes the best literature at a minimum cost.

It is a fact that magazines, periodicals and newspapers generally have not only multiplied in number, but have made giant strides in circulation, and in the increase in advertising has been marvelous.

But we must not forget the great benefits which the people enjoy on account of the tremendous circulation of national publications with their advertising income. It is this enormous revenue, as well as the flat rate of a cent a pound postage, which has enabled American publishers to make their periodicals the best in the world.

But the large circulation and advertising incomes have been built up under the flat rate of postage. With the tremendous increase called for by the bill, which goes into effect next July, if not repealed, the price of the publications must be increased.

This increase of subscription price will naturally decrease circulation; decreased circulation means a lower advertising rate, and hence less advertising income.

Less advertising income means cheaper paper, cheaper illustrations, lower prices to authors, lower salaries to solicitors, clerks and other workers, a reduction of employees to conform to conditions and bankruptcy for thousands.

I say thousands and believe I am right in saying thousands, for probably more than 50 per cent. of the publications existing today will be forced to suspend publication if this bill goes into effect. The printing industry, now the third industrial activity in this country, will suffer tremendously.

There are some 700,000 men directly employed and dependent upon the printing industry. With this tax in effect, probably 30 to 50 per cent. of these men will be forced out of employment.

If this bill is not repealed, magazines will have to increase their prices tremendously, and the public, therefore, will refuse to subscribe to a great many of them.

Enough, certainly, will be forced out of business to nullify any proposed increase in postal revenue, while those which do survive will be greatly reduced in circulation.

CIRCULATORS OF MARYLAND, PENNSYLVANIA, NEW JERSEY AND DELAWARE MEET.

Following generally in the footsteps of the sectional organizations of circulation men that have recently been formed by New York, New England and Ohio newspaper circulation managers in their respective territories, a number of circulation men of newspapers in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia met on Tuesday in the Adelphia Hotel, Philadelphia, and organized the Inter-States Circulation Managers Association.

The purpose of the organization is to create a spirit of closer co-operation between the circulation men in these territories and bring about a beneficial interchange of ideas so that from the sum total of their experiences and effort each member may be able to cope more vigorously with the problems that arise from time to time, and be able, collectively, to bring about conditions and changes which may be mutually advantageous.

A. E. MacKinnon of the Philadelphia North American was elected temporary chairman and A. R. Michener of the Harrisburg (Pa.) Telegraph acted as temporary secretary and will do so until permanent officers are chosen at a subsequent meeting in the very near future.

The problem of newspapers' sales and distribution in the various soldiers' training camps was the main topic of discussion. This problem seems to be quite an urgent one just now for newspapers throughout the country, and is occupying the attention of almost every circulation man.

In many cases papers have been sent to training camps and have been either lost in transit or have disappeared with a total loss to the publishers; and in a good many cases it has been hard to collect for papers actually sold.

A method has been sought which would obviate any loss to the publishers, be of profit to the divisional camp exchanges selling the papers; not do away with the privilege of sales promotion which some of the newspapers are doing or might wish to do, and yet allow the small newspapers to come in for their share of patronage at the various cantonments.

PLAN FOR CAMP CIRCULATION.

M. T. Zepp, circulation manager of the Washington Times, and a member of the new organization, told the circulation men what had been accomplished by E. D. Shaw, publisher of the Times, and himself in that respect, and submitted the following suggestions evolved by them, which he thought might be advisable to take up with Harold Braddock of the Commission on Training Camp Activities, a branch of the service under the United States War Department, in charge of divisional camp exchanges, where newspapers and other periodicals are sold:

"1. No newspaper, periodical or magazine shall be given superior facilities for sale or preferred display to any other of its general classification.

"2. The price paid by the camp agent for newspapers, periodicals and magazines shall be in each case not less than the wholesale price regularly charged by the publication. It transportation expense in getting publications into camp from a transfer point is necessary and is incurred by the agent, the actual expense involved may be apportioned and charged among the publications benefiting.

"3. The price charged the purchaser shall not be more than the published retail price for the publication unless written authorization has been obtained from the publisher to sell at a higher price.

"4. While the camp agent is not required to put on sale all publications offered to him for that purpose, it is expected that he will put on sale those newspapers, periodicals and magazines for which there is a natural and expected demand.

"5. Agents authorized to sell newspapers, periodicals and magazines within the limits of the camp are expected to agree in advance to the principles outlined above and permission to sell within the camp should be made conditional upon the observance and maintenance of those principles."

ALL ASSOCIATIONS TO CO-OPERATE.

Mr. Zepp also said that he brought a personal message from the Government in Washington that it is willing to meet newspaper publishers half way in any proposition that would solve the problem. All that is necessary was to formulate some definite plan of operation satisfactory to all.

A committee of three was appointed, consisting of Mr. Zepp, F. A. Clark of the Philadelphia Evening Ledger, and A. R. Michener to act in co-operation with committees appointed by other sectional managers, associations and representatives from the magazines to formulate a plan and present it to Mr. Braddock in Washington, tending to satisfactorily solve the problem of distribution and sale of newspapers in army cantonments.

The next meeting of the association will be held on December 11, at Philadelphia, when a full attendance is looked for and definite steps will be taken in that direction.

TURNER BACK TO WORK.

Harris Turner, M.L.A., who lost his eyesight in France as the result of wounds, has returned to civil life and has resumed his work on the editorial staff of the Regina Post and the Saskatoon Star.

Mr. Turner was recently married to Miss Alice Moyer.

CHECKING UP THE PRESS COUNT

WITH NUMBER OF PAPERS SENT OUT THROUGH THE CIRCULATION END.

By HUGH A. AKIN.

Circulation Manager Columbus (Ohio) Citizen.

What system is best to check up the press run from the counters on the press with the total number of papers sent out in the various branches of circulation?

I have frequently heard complaint along this line, and, personally, have experienced considerable trouble until we were able to work out our present system.

Our press room is located in the basement of our building and papers are delivered to the mailing room on hydraulic lifts and the normal load is 300 papers.

Our presses are five-deck straight-line Goss presses with a capacity of twenty pages to a single fold, and never do we exceed twenty pages, not running any supplements or sections. These presses deliver papers in bunches of fifty, and the fly-boy criss-crossing the papers easily determines when he has 300, and then carries same to the lifts.

There are two of these lifts, and each is manned by a boy stout enough to easily carry 300 papers of the maximum size. Our mailing room is so arranged that the papers for the five branches of distribution—namely mail, express, newsboys, office carriers and branch carriers—are in separate parts of the room.

The boys who man these lifts have a sheet conveniently at hand separated into these five departments, and as they take from the lifts these 300 papers they are checked out to the department to which they are delivered.

For example, if a bundle of 300 papers is delivered to the man at the newsboys' window, under the column of newsboys is marked with a single stroke the fact that 300 papers have been delivered to this department, and likewise to the others when delivered to them.

This sheet is a little more than an ordinary tally sheet, and, as I said before, each stroke indicating 300 papers. This is made so simply that it is almost fool-proof.

Then, at the end of each edition run, these sheets are turned in to the chief mailing clerk, who at the end of the day compares them with the pressman's report of total perfect print—and, I might add that our net daily press run for the year of 1916 was 74,526, with an average of papers not accounted for of twenty-two.

With the many chances for miscount, I think that the average of twenty-two is practically the minimum.

By dividing the distribution in the mailing room into the five departments before mentioned, it also offers an opportunity to very easily trace any extraordinary discrepancy.

As a method of checking spoils, our pressman has adopted the following plan, which in a small office like ours, has proven very satisfactory.

The press counters are changed on each edition, or, rather, set back for each edition, but instead of starting at zero we start at all nine's, excepting the last number, which is set at five. This gives him an opportunity to turn the press five revolutions, or the equivalent of ten papers, which takes care of all spoiled papers in changing the plates or increasing the size of the paper from one edition to another.

These papers as they come through are laid aside, first counted, and then at the close of the edition, with whatever spoils may arise, are weighed.

Understand me now, weighed and counted for each edition, and whenever this is tried, you will be surprised at that notwithstanding not all full papers come out of the press, how close weight and count come.

These papers also give an opportunity to the fly-boy to make up quite a number of perfect print papers, as certain papers on one press will be perfect where those on the other are not, and by looking them over at the end of the run, as I said before, several perfect print papers can be secured.

With us this system has been in vogue so long that it is pretty nearly second nature, and it is possible that I may have skipped over some point that would be of interest, and if so, I would be pleased to answer any questions that may be put to me on this point.

PLAN FOR CAMP CIRCULATION.

M. T. Zepp, circulation manager of the Washington Times, and a member of the new organization, told the circulation men what had been accomplished by E. D. Shaw, publisher of the Times, and himself in that respect, and submitted the following suggestions evolved by them, which he thought might be advisable to take up with Harold Braddock of the Commission on Training Camp Activities, a branch of the service under the United States War Department, in charge of divisional camp exchanges, where newspapers and other periodicals are sold:

"1. No newspaper, periodical or magazine shall be given superior facilities for sale or preferred display to any other of its general classification.

"2. The price paid by the camp agent for newspapers, periodicals and magazines shall be in each case not less than the wholesale price regularly charged by the publication. It transportation expense in getting publications into camp from a transfer point is necessary and is incurred by the agent, the actual expense involved may be apportioned and charged among the publications benefiting.

"3. The price charged the purchaser shall not be more than the published retail price for the publication unless written authorization has been obtained from the publisher to sell at a higher price.

"4. While the camp agent is not required to put on sale all publications offered to him for that purpose, it is expected that he will put on sale those newspapers, periodicals and magazines for which there is a natural and expected demand.

"5. Agents authorized to sell newspapers, periodicals and magazines within the limits of the camp are expected to agree in advance to the principles outlined above and permission to sell within the camp should be made conditional upon the observance and maintenance of those principles."

ALL ASSOCIATIONS TO CO-OPERATE.

Mr. Zepp also said that he brought a personal message from the Government in Washington that it is willing to meet newspaper publishers half way in any proposition that would solve the problem. All that is necessary was to formulate some definite plan of operation satisfactory to all.

A committee of three was appointed, consisting of Mr. Zepp, F. A. Clark of the Philadelphia Evening Ledger, and A. R. Michener to act in co-operated with committees appointed by other sectional managers, associations and representatives from the magazines to formulate a plan and present it to Mr. Braddock in Washington, tending to satisfactorily solve the problem of distribution and sale of newspapers in army cantonments.

The next meeting of the association will be held on December 11, at Philadelphia, when a full attendance is looked for and definite steps will be taken in that direction.

CHECKING UP THE PRESS COUNT

WITH NUMBER OF PAPERS SENT OUT THROUGH THE CIRCULATION END.

By HUGH A. AKIN.

Circulation Manager Columbus (Ohio) Citizen.

What system is best to check up the press run from the counters on the press with the total number of papers sent out in the various branches of circulation?

I have frequently heard complaint along this line, and, personally, have experienced considerable trouble until we were able to work out our present system.

Our press room is located in the basement of our building and papers are delivered to the mailing room on hydraulic lifts and the normal load is 300 papers.

Our presses are five-deck straight-line Goss presses with a capacity of twenty pages to a single fold, and never do we exceed twenty pages, not running any supplements or sections. These presses deliver papers in bunches of fifty, and the fly-boy criss-crossing the papers easily determines when he has 300, and then carries same to the lifts.

There are two of these lifts, and each is manned by a boy stout enough to easily carry 300 papers of the maximum size. Our mailing room is so arranged that the papers for the five branches of distribution—namely mail, express, newsboys, office carriers and branch carriers—are in separate parts of the room.

The boys who man these lifts have a sheet conveniently at hand separated into these five departments, and as they take from the lifts these 300 papers they are checked out to the department to which they are delivered.

For example, if a bundle of 300 papers is delivered to the man at the newsboys' window, under the column of newsboys is marked with a single stroke the fact that 300 papers have been delivered to this department, and likewise to the others when delivered to them.

This sheet is a little more than an ordinary tally sheet, and, as I said before, each stroke indicating 300 papers. This is made so simply that it is almost fool-proof.

Then, at the end of each edition run, these sheets are turned in to the chief mailing clerk, who at the end of the day compares them with the pressman's report of total perfect print—and, I might add that our net daily press run for the year of 1916 was 74,526, with an average of papers not accounted for of twenty-two.

With the many chances for miscount, I think that the average of twenty-two is practically the minimum.

By dividing the distribution in the mailing room into the five departments before mentioned, it also offers an opportunity to very easily trace any extraordinary discrepancy.

As a method of checking spoils, our pressman has adopted the following plan, which in a small office like ours, has proven very satisfactory.

The press counters are changed on each edition, or, rather, set back for each edition, but instead of starting at zero we start at all nine's, excepting the last number, which is set at five. This gives him an opportunity to turn the press five revolutions, or the equivalent of ten papers, which takes care of all spoiled papers in changing the plates or increasing the size of the paper from one edition to another.

These papers as they come through are laid aside, first counted, and then at the close of the edition, with whatever spoils may arise, are weighed.

Understand me now, weighed and counted for each edition, and whenever this is tried, you will be surprised at, that notwithstanding not all full papers come out of the press, how close weight and count come.

These papers also give an opportunity to the fly-boy to make up quite a number of perfect print papers, as certain papers on one press will be perfect where those on the other are not, and by looking them over at the end of the run, as I said before, several perfect print papers can be secured.

With us this system has been in vogue so long that it is pretty nearly second nature, and it is possible that I may have skipped over some point that would be of interest, and if so I would be pleased to answer any questions that may be put to me on this point.

NEWS NOTES OF CIRCULATORS.

The circulation staff of the Des Moines (Ia.) Register and Tribune was banqueted by Gardner Cowles, publisher, at the Savery Hotel on November 12, to celebrate the gain in circulation enabling them to reach the 100,000 mark.

The staff, composed of twenty-five men in direct connection with carrier and newsdealer work, was addressed by Mr. Cowles, who discussed the print paper situation, the increase in postage and why the Government would not permit news of the movement of troops to be printed.

A banquet will be held about December 1 for the circulation road men who are working on the rural routes of Iowa soliciting cash-in-advance subscriptions and who expect to have a real harvest during the months of December, January and February.

J. L. Garrison has become identified with the Register and Tribune road circulation staff.

The Morton Ross Company has changed its headquarters from Galveston, Tex., to Columbus, Ohio.

This firm has just closed circulation campaigns for the Johnstown (Pa.) Leader and the Frankfort (Ind.) Crescent-News.

Charles D. Isaacson, editor of "Our Family Music Page" of the New York Globe, read "Face to Face with Brahms" at the Globe concert on November 11. Two thousand Globe Music Club members were present.

During the same afternoon the Globe's choruses co-operated with the New Singing Society for the benefit of the Syrian-Armenian fund at the New York Hippodrome.

The Louisville Courier-Journal has reduced the subscription price for the daily, (by mail), from $6 to $3 per year.

The Philadelphia North American will insert in every copy of its issue of Sunday, December 2, a Government picture, "The Army," by James Montgomery Flagg. Another Government picture appeared in the issue of Sunday, September 2.

A. E. MacKinnon, promotion manager, says that the North American has secured the exclusive use of those Government pictures distributed.

The problem of newspapers' sales and distribution in the various soldiers' training camps was the main topic of discussion. This problem seems to be quite an urgent one just now for newspapers throughout the country, and is occupying the attention of almost every circulation man.

In many cases papers have been sent to training camps and have been either lost in transit or have disappeared with a total loss to the publishers; and in a good many cases it has been hard to collect for papers actually sold.

A method has been sought which would obviate any loss to the publishers, be of profit to the divisional camp exchanges selling the papers; not do away with the privilege of

FRANCE TO GET MORE NEWS PRINT PAPER.

The principal newspapers of France have jointly organized a National Paper Office. Through this organization an appeal has been made to the Interministerial French Press Commission to have provided ample space in French government ships in which to transport news print paper from the United States to France.

This appeal has resulted in the government's placing at the disposal of the National Paper Office such space as will be necessary to provide the French newspapers with what paper they need.

The charge for this space will be approximately $50 per ton. Freight, ship cost, plus ocean freight, landing charges at the French ports and rail haul to Paris will mean that the French publishers' paper, laid down to them, will cost between eight and eight and one-half cents per pound.

This is a new and interesting phase of the news print paper situation so far as it affects the newspaper publishers of France.

MAGAZINE MEN ASK REPEAL OF POSTAL INCREASE.

A resolution urging the Government to repeal the recently passed postal rate increases on second class mail matter was adopted on November 19 by the Representatives' Club, which is composed of magazine advertising men, at a luncheon at Hotel McAlpin, New York.

In discussing the resolution, John Adams Thayer, secretary of the Periodical Publishers' Association, said that the new law will so restrict circulation that in the end the Government will suffer a loss of postal income, instead of increasing its revenue from this source.

MAGAZINE PUBLISHERS' VIEW OF HIGHER POSTAL RATES.

EDITOR THE FOURTH ESTATE.

Sir: The adoption by the United States Government of a flat rate for magazines and newspapers of one cent a pound was one of the greatest and most far reaching moves ever promulgated.

I presume that it was the idea of our Congress at that time that a low postal rate would not only promote education, consolidate opinion, and make for national unity of thought and feeling, but that it would bring the people in all parts of the country into constant touch with national affairs.

The results from this low postage rate have been tremendous in many ways.

The periodical press has been largely instrumental in bringing about the greatest solidarity of public opinion on matters of national importance.

It has been the means of educating the people, bringing to millions of homes the best literature at a minimum cost.

It is a fact that magazines, periodicals and newspapers generally have not only multiplied in number, but have made giant strides in circulation, and in the increase in advertising has been marvelous.

But we must not forget the great benefits which the people enjoy on account of the tremendous circulation of national publications with their advertising income. It is this enormous revenue, as well as the flat rate of a cent a pound postage, which has enabled American publishers to make their periodicals the best in the world.

But the large circulation and advertising incomes have been built up under the flat rate of postage. With the tremendous increase called for by the bill, which goes into effect next July, if not repealed, the price of the publications must be increased.

This increase of subscription price will naturally decrease circulation; decreased circulation means a lower advertising rate, and hence less advertising income.

Less advertising income means cheaper paper, cheaper illustrations, lower prices to authors, lower salaries to solicitors, clerks and other workers, a reduction of employees to conform to conditions and bankruptcy for thousands.

I say thousands and believe I am right in saying thousands, for probably more than 50 per cent. of the publications existing today will be forced to suspend publication if this bill goes into effect. The printing industry, now the third industrial activity in this country, will suffer tremendously.

There are some 700,000 men directly employed and dependent upon the printing industry. With this tax in effect, probably 30 to 50 per cent. of these men will be forced out of employment.

If this bill is not repealed, magazines will have to increase their prices tremendously, and the public, therefore, will refuse to subscribe to a great many of them.

Enough, certainly, will be forced out of business to nullify any proposed increase in postal revenue, while those which do survive will be greatly reduced in circulation.

CIRCULATORS OF MARYLAND, PENNSYLVANIA, NEW JERSEY AND DELAWARE MEET.

Following generally in the footsteps of the sectional organizations of circulation men that have recently been formed by New York, New England and Ohio newspaper circulation managers in their respective territories, a number of circulation men of newspapers in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia met on Tuesday in the Adelphi Hotel, Philadelphia, and organized the Inter-States Circulation Managers Association.

The purpose of the organization is to create a spirit of closer co-operation between the circulation men in these territories and bring about a sales promotion which some of the newspapers are doing or might wish to do, and yet allow the small newspapers to come in for their share of patronage at the various cantonments.

PLAN FOR CAMP CIRCULATION.

M. T. Zepp, circulation manager of the Washington Times, and a member of the new organization, told the circulation men what had been accomplished by E. D. It transportation expense in getting publications into camp from a transfer point is necessary and is incurred by the agent, the actual expense involved may be apportioned and charged among the publications benefiting.

"3. The price charged the purchaser shall not be more than the published retail price for the publication unless written authorization has been obtained from the publisher to sell at a higher price.

"4. While the camp agent is not required to put on sale all publications offered to him for that purpose, it is expected that he will put on sale those newspapers, periodicals and magazines for which there is a natural and expected demand.

"5. Agents authorized to sell newspapers, periodicals and magazines within the limits of the camp are expected to agree in advance to the principles outlined above and permission to sell within the camp should be made conditional upon the observance and maintenance of those principles."

ALL ASSOCIATIONS TO CO-OPERATE.

Mr. Zepp also said that he brought a personal message from the Government in Washington that it is willing to meet newspaper publishers half way in any proposition that would solve the problem. All that is necessary was to formulate some definite plan of operation satisfactory to all.

CHECKING UP THE PRESS COUNT

WITH NUMBER OF PAPERS SENT OUT THROUGH THE CIRCULATION END.

By HUGH A. AKIN.

Circulation Manager Columbus (Ohio) Citizen.

What system is best to check up the press run from the counters on the press with the total number of papers sent out in the various branches of circulation?

I have frequently heard complaint along this line, and, personally, have experienced considerable trouble until we were able to work out our present system.

Our press room is located in the basement of our building and papers are delivered to the mailing room on hydraulic lifts and the normal load is 300 papers.

EDITOR THE FOURTH ESTATE.

SIR: The adoption by the United States Government of a flat rate for magazines and newspapers of one cent a pound was one of the greatest and most far reaching moves ever promulgated.

I presume that it was the idea of our Congress at that time that a low postal rate would not only promote education, consolidate opinion, and make for national unity of thought and feeling, but that it would bring the people in all parts of the country into constant touch with national affairs.

The results from this low postage rate have been tremendous in many ways.

The periodical press has been largely instrumental in bringing about the greatest solidarity of public opinion on matters of national importance.

It has been the means of educating the people, bringing to millions of homes the best literature at a minimum cost.

It is a fact that magazines, periodicals and newspapers generally have not only multiplied in number, but have made giant strides in circulation, and in the increase in advertising has been marvelous.

But we must not forget the great benefits which the people enjoy on account of the tremendous circulation of national publications with their advertising income. It is this enormous revenue, as well as the flat rate of a cent a pound postage, which has enabled American publishers to make their periodicals the best in the world.

But the large circulation and advertising incomes have been built up under the flat rate of postage. With the tremendous increase called for by the bill, which goes into effect next July, if not repealed, the price of the publications must be increased.

This increase of subscription price will naturally decrease circulation; decreased circulation means a lower advertising rate, and hence less advertising income.

Less advertising income means cheaper paper, cheaper illustrations, lower prices to authors, lower salaries to solicitors, clerks and other workers, a reduction of employees to conform to conditions and bankruptcy for thousands.

I say thousands and believe I am right in saying thousands, for probably more than 50 per cent. of the publications existing today will be forced to suspend publication if this bill goes into effect. The printing industry, now the third industrial activity in this country, will suffer tremendously.

There are some 700,000 men directly employed and dependent upon the printing industry. With this tax in effect, probably 30 to 50 per cent. of these men will be forced out of employment.

If this bill is not repealed, magazines will have to increase their prices tremendously, and the public, therefore, will refuse to subscribe to a great many of them.

Enough, certainly, will be forced out of business to nullify any proposed increase in postal revenue, while those which do survive will be greatly reduced in circulation.

DIRECTORY OF CHICAGO REP- RESENTATIVES.

The Newspaper Representatives Association of Chicago has issued "An Official List of the Daily Newspaper Representatives in Chicago," as the successor to the directory published twice a year for the past seventeen years by C. George Krogness, who is now general manager of the Minneapolis Tribune.

The directory is corrected to November 1 and is in two sections. The first is a list of daily newspapers arranged alphabetically by states and the name of the representative; the second section gives the names of the representatives, arranged alphabetically, with the office address, telephone number and papers represented by each.

ARTICLE XVI.

FINDING THE COST OF PRODUCING ANY PARTICULAR ADVERTISEMENT THROUGH SYSTEM.

BY EDMUND WALKER.
Herald Building, Chicago.

At this time a careful examination into the cost of producing different classes of advertising matter can be made because we already have installed a system whereby the cost of any particular advertisement may be quickly ascertained.

In order to lend extra interest to this article I propose to give figures that are the correct average figures for twelve different newspapers—and from this information you will be able to make valuable comparisons with your own records.

The way I have arrived at these figures is to average all twelve papers—and you will understand that these papers are all in entirely different localities.

	Per cent.
Display advertising carried.....	62.74
Foreign advertising carried.....	17.74
Classified advertising	19.52

The above table shows the three classifications we will deal with today.

	Per cent.
The total advertising carried amounted to	$9.59
The total news matter carried amounted to	47.68
Display advertising cost to produce	41.68 cents
Foreign advertising cost to produce	40.11 cents
Classified and condensed cost to produce	45.74 cents

These figures represent the cost per inch in each case.

Compare them with the selling prices for the same groups:

Display advertising sold for.....	$9.24 cents
Foreign advertising sold for.....	49.78 cents
Classified advertising sold for.....	$9.46 cents

Please notice how classified advertising sold at a large loss, and some reason must be found for this condition.

The answer is that publishers feel classified advertising has a certain news value and they are willing to pay for that, but I would contend that all advertising has a news value, and many would go much farther than I on contention.

A few weeks ago I tried an interesting contention and you can try it, too. Buying five Chicago newspapers, I banded them to my wife after dinner one evening and watched her reading them. After an hour's reading I asked what news was in the papers. She replied: "I don't know. I have been reading about Marshall Field's sale tomorrow and I shall go down to it."

This was merely an experiment, but it proved a contention which I have often felt justified in declaring—namely, that a large percentage of your circulation is the result of your subscribers wishing to read your advertising matter and not your news matter.

Therefore it is not reasonable to state that you are willing to carry classified advertising at a loss because of its news value. You might just as well agree to carry all your advertising at a loss on the same basis.

Taking these same papers, we can now compare our percentage of productive time, and if you have installed the cost sheets which you have already read about, you will find it interesting to compare your results with these figures, which are average figures from the costing sheets installed by me in different newspapers:

Stereotype room	76.5% productive
Press room	84.3% productive
Hand composition	54.7% productive
Machine composition	78.7% productive

Comparing these figures with yours, you will see at once how you can compare with other publishers—perhaps right in your own territory.

You will naturally want to know what I have classified as "productive" operations. This, you will remember, was fully discussed recently in The Fourth Estate.

Interest on the capital invested in the business has in each case above set out been included in the cost of producing an inch of advertising space. This was entered on the basis of 8 per cent per annum on the amount of the capital stock issued and paid in full.

BOGUS CANVASSER AT WORK.

The New York Times has received complaints from many parts of the country saying that persons had subscribed to the Mid-Week Pictorial at the solicitation of one C. Bibbs and had not received that publication. They said that they had paid forty-eight cents for a year's subscription to the magazine. The Times has no such agent as C. Bibbs and there is no such subscription price as forty-eight cents for the Mid-Week Pictorial.

At the bottom of receipts received by the Times the "subscriber" is advised to wait forty days before making complaint if the magazine is not received. Some of the receipts bear the heading "the New York Publishing Company" and others "The Chicago Promotion Company." In neither case is a street address given. There is no such concern in New York as "the New York Publishing Company."

The complaints show that Bibbs has operated in the last four months in Minnesota, Wisconsin and other Western states, and in the last few weeks in Albany, Troy, Buffalo and other New York cities. The police of several cities, including New York, have been asked by the Times to arrest C. Bibbs.

A.A.C.W. JUDGES AD CASES.

WILL ALSO AID PUBLISHERS IN FIGHTING HIGHER RATES ON SECOND CLASS MAIL.

At the meeting of the national commission of the A. A. C. W. held at Indianapolis, November 14, in conjunction with a meeting of the executive committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World the commission reviewed a number of questions submitted for commission adjudication and grasped the opportunity to become better acquainted with the individual problems of the twenty-one departments of the Associated Advertising Clubs, each of which chooses one representative to sit on the commission.

Those representatives paid a high tribute to the commission, characterizing it as one common ground on which all advertising interests could meet with a broader insight into the articulation of one medium of advertising with another.

Harry Tipper of the Automobile, New York, said "the national commission provides a binding influence in organized advertising by which is eliminated the distinction between knowledge and understanding. Advertising men generally have always had knowledge of various mediums, but the interchange of thought through the national commission also gives them understanding."

WILL OPPOSE NEW SECOND CLASS RATE.

It was announced that if publishers seek its aid, every co-operation which the national commission of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World can enlist in their behalf will be extended toward bringing about an amendment of the new second class postage law, which the publishers declare hostile to their welfare, because of the zone system.

Characterizing the publications mailed under second class privilege as the great popular educators, E. R. Shaw of Power Engineering, Chicago, declared the zone system to be unpatriotic and un-American. The nation suffered an embattled four years' fight against sectionalism, he said—and now Congress, in effect, brings about a sectional division just as inimical to national interests as the one-time division of the North and South.

"First class mail pays an immense profit," said Mr. Shaw, "and advertising is in a great measure responsible not only for a great volume of first class, but third class and parcel post as well."

"By reason of the advertising service publications render their readers, apart from text value, a favorable postage rate is as essential to national progress as are the display windows of a department store, or the elevator system in public buildings. Neither of the latter pay a profit directly, nor are they expected to. They are a means to bigger, better and more commonly satisfactory business."

HANFF-METZGER CASE.

One of the questions submitted to the commission was whether Hanff-Metzger, Inc., New York advertising agency, had been aspersed without basis by the Democratic National Committee, which (following the 1916 campaign) refused to pay some advertising bills on the ground that they were excessive.

Hanff-Metzger submitted a comprehensive brief of their case. The commission declared this brief to show no culpability on the part of the agency. Since the original controversy, the advertising bills have been paid, and although the commission takes cognizance of the ethical question involved, this was considered further evidence of the company's blamelessness.

However, the Democratic National Committee will be given opportunity to submit a rebuttal. Failure to do this will bring a decision that the Democratic committee was in error when it complained of "overcharge," and will absolve the agency from violating the accepted standards of practice.

NATIONAL AD EXHIBITS.

It was decided that the commission would accept responsibility for further national advertising exhibits, such as that at St. Louis, which was viewed by 60,000 visitors, and as a step in co-ordinating the departments that will collaborate in the display, arrangements were made for standard size display panels.

BUSINESS VS. RETAIL DEPARTMENTS.

The business press department of the A. A. C. W. some time ago lodged a complaint against the retail department because it caused to be published a small magazine of a nature somewhat competitive with other publications in that trade field, older and more firmly established. Because the magazine has suspended publication the complaint was dismissed.

STOCKDALE ENDORSED.

Before adjournment the commission endorsed the work of Frank Stockdale, retailing counsel for the Associated Advertising Clubs, whose lectures before business organizations have brought him the widest commendation from all parts of North America.

PRESS CLUB IS FORMED IN PHILADELPHIA.

Preliminary plans for the formation of a Philadelphia Press Club were laid at a meeting of fifty representatives of newspapers of that city, on November 14.

The plan to form a big live newspaper organization has the backing of the executives of all the newspapers in Philadelphia. At a "get-together" meeting to be held shortly, a permanent organization will be established, and arrangements made for the leasing of a clubhouse in the center of the city.

William Wilson of the Philadelphia Record is temporary chairman of the organization, and Harry Macauley of the Evening Ledger is temporary secretary.

A meeting of the executive committee will be held on November 28.

HOLLIWAY OUT ON BOND.

Robert E. Holliway, Jefferson City, (Mo.) correspondent for the St. Louis Republic, who has been in jail for about two months on a contempt charge, has been released on bond to appear before the grand jury at Jefferson City next March. Holliway's incarceration was due to his unwillingness to divulge the source of an important news story regarding the grand jury's activity.

The case against Ralph E. Stout, managing editor of the Kansas City (Mo.) Star, in connection with the same incident was dismissed.

VIOLATED ADVERTISING LAW.

A conviction has just been secured for violation of the Chicago ordinance prohibiting false or misleading advertising. The defendant, the Moneyworth Wholesale Grocery Company, has been fined $25 and costs.

The conviction was brought about through the vigilance committee of the Chicago Advertising Association, which gathered the evidence necessary.

MARCH-PATRIOTIC AD MONTH.

EULA McCLARY EXPLAINS PLAN THAT HAS BEEN ENDORSED BY PROMINENT MEN.

THE FOURTH ESTATE last week told briefly of a plan that has been endorsed by leading advertisers and advertising agents to make the month of March a "Patriotic Advertising Month," and promised more details in the near future.

They are presented herewith in the form of an interview with Eula McClary, who suggested the idea. She said:

"In a nutshell, the thing I am trying to do is to stimulate the advertisers to make March the most effective advertising month in the history of advertising—and April and all other months if possible until the war is won.

"March should be 'PATRIOTIC ADVERTISING MONTH.'

"Every ad in every newspaper and periodicals of importance should be patriotic in tone. This will drive the war home to America—sell the war to ourselves.

"There are a million ways to present the ads.

"Patriotic statements of well known men—living or dead—could be boxed in the ads.

"Slogans could be introduced.

"The story of the Red Cross needs, the Navy Auxiliary, the training camp activities, the Liberty Loan, war saving stamps, food, recruiting—anything and everything that will bring this war to a successful end and make comfortable our fighting men—could be told by word or picture or cartoon—inserted into advertisements to any extent the advertiser might allow in his copy.

"Such a campaign would more than sell the war to the country; it would make interesting reading for the reading public; it would make advertising of more value to the advertiser also.

"Not that this is my object. It isn't. I am not an advertiser—only a patriotic woman and I am interested in organizing this campaign for patriotic reasons only.

"The Association of National Advertisers, the Periodical Publishers' Association, the American Association of Advertising Agents have begun work to organize their forces.

"The Edison Company, Inc., the Prudential Life Insurance Co., Heinz & Co., Eastman Kodak Company and other well-known advertisers have promised their support.

"William H. Johns, Frank Presbrey, Mr. Thorsen, O. H. Blackman, Charles Johnson, editors, writers and cartoonists (including Briggs); artists and members of the Cabinet have offered their co-operation and are enthusiastic about the scheme.

"The New York Advertising Men's Club was kind enough to allow me to give a talk there one noon recently, urging the members to join the battalion making a spring drive that will not be forgotten in the advertising world for a long time.

"The New York Council of Advertising Agents permitted me to be the first woman to join in their monthly dinner and I reached many men there who are enthusiastically working out their end of the scheme now.

"I am to talk to the Periodical Publishers' Association at the executive meeting and at the A.N.A. convention in December.

"I state this that you will know I have been to see the right people and that they are anxious to put the plan over.

"I can be reached at the office of the American Association of Advertising Agents in the Metropolitan Tower, New York City.

"Any suggestions I can make, anything I can do, I shall be happy to do. Making this a success is my patriotic bit—before I leave for the other side to try and do something over there.

"Any suggestions, any criticisms of the plan will be most welcome. Constructive criticism will be particularly welcome.

"My work in organizing is about over and it falls to me to furnish patriotic statements, cartoons, etc., which I will do gladly—gratis—to help make the months not only the most patriotic months in the history of advertising up to date, but the most interesting. These months will establish a new standard in advertising.

"Thus far, I believe, advertising hasn't given us even a hint of the economic necessity it is, or of the patriotic possibilities it possesses.

"With the wonderful work accomplished through advertising channels during the last Liberty Loan, this places advertising as the greatest of all war selling mediums.

"Let everyone put on their imagination caps, and let the patriotic advertisements ring out the message of our day—'We Must Win This War.'

"The interests working on the 'Patriotic Advertising Month' plan have suggested that newspaper advertisers concentrate their 'bit' in the first week of March.

SAN FRANCISCO IS PREPARING.

COMMITTEE IS APPOINTED FOR A.A.C.W. MEETING—PLANS TAKE SHAPE.

Five of the seven members of the convention board of the San Francisco Ad Club, which will direct the affairs of the ad club in connection with the annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, which is to be held in San Francisco next July, have been appointed by the directors of the club.

Frank H. Abbott, Jr., of the Abbott Press, was made general director of the board. Associated with him are B. F. Schlesinger, the Emporium; Milton H. Esberg, General Cigar Company; Samuel P. Johnston, Johnston-Ayres, president of the club; and Charles W. Duncan, Foster & Kleiser, secretary of the board.

Securing delegates to the 1918 convention will be one of the principal activities of the board in the near future. General Director Abbott states that highly encouraging reports are already coming to the club from all parts of the country concerning the active participation of affiliated organizations throughout the United States. An attendance of more than 7,000 delegates is now anticipated by the club.

Train loads are now being made up by the advertising clubs of Boston, Philadelphia, St. Louis, New York and Dallas. Most of the clubs of these cities are making weekly payments into a fund to defray the expenses of the trip.

The San Francisco convention board now has under preparation a special booklet, 50,000 copies of which will be distributed all over the country. In conjunction with the booklet an aggressive campaign is to be made of follow-up letters in connection with other features. The keynote of the nation-wide appeal that is to be made is "Spend your 1918 vacation in San Francisco, attend the convention and see the wonders of the Pacific coast." The board will have the active co-operation of the transcontinental railroads in stimulating interest and attendance in this big San Francisco gathering.

According to Mr. Abbott, the entertainment features in connection with the convention will include a radical departure from the stereotyped forms. Excursions into the scenic sections of California will be a big feature, revealing at the same time the extensive industrial and agricultural resources of the state. While the railroads will be utilized most of the time for this form of the entertainment, Mr. Abbott says that many automobile tours will be arranged which, before the convention guests depart, will total several thousand miles of travel over the state's highways and byways.

RADICAL WEEKLY HELD UP.

The Post Office authorities are holding up this week's issue of the Freie Arbeiter Stimme, a radical Jewish publication issued from 175 East Broadway, New York, until word is received from Washington as to whether it shall have the privileges of the mails.

S. Janowsky, editor of the weekly, declared it contained nothing which he considered treasonable or of aid or comfort to the enemy.

PUBLISHER'S DAUGHTER HURT

"Becky" Lanier, twelve years old, the daughter of Charles D. Lanier, the publisher of the Review of Reviews, New York, was slightly injured when she was thrown from her horse at the National Horse Show, in Madison Square Garden this week.

MAKING IMPROVEMENTS IN "THE LAND OF JOY."

Press Representative E. A. Weil announces that beginning Monday evening, November 26, at the Park Theater, New York, a complete new American libretto will be incorporated into "The Land of Joy," the Spanish review by "Quinto" Valverde which has registered such a pronounced success. The new American dialogue and lyrics have been supplied by Montague Glass, the author of the "Potash and Perlmutter" stories, and will serve simply to introduce the Spanish scenes and numbers in a manner which will be more easily understood by those in the audience who are not familiar with the Spanish language.

Coincident with the presentation of the new American version, a complete change in the personnel of the English-speaking characters will also be made.

The Valverde Concert Sunday night will be replete with new features in song and dance from the works of Valverde and other noted Spanish composers.

SUES MAGAZINES FOR LIBEL.

Harper's Weekly and the McClure publications, New York, are involved in a libel suit now in progress in the Supreme Court in New York, the plaintiff being Mme. Maud Yale Wilson, who delivers lectures throughout the country on beauty culture.

The defendants are accused by Mme. Yale, as she is called, of injuring her business in the manufacture of toilet preparations.

FILM AD MEN MEETING.

The Advertising Film Producers Association of the A. A. C. W. is holding its annual convention in Cincinnati at the time of going to press.

FINANCIAL ADVERTISING IN NEWSPAPERS.

TO GET MORE THEY SHOULD HAVE A STRONG FINANCIAL PAGE, GIVING REAL INVESTMENT NEWS.

By WILLARD N. RECORD,
General Manager Albert Frank & Co.

As I view it, financial advertising is not only one of the most interesting, but one of the most important divisions of advertising, because it is so difficult to handle in its correct sense and because of the results attained.

Some advertisers say they can seldom trace satisfactory sales to advertising; others report the contrary. Few, however, give it the thought and attention it should have, while others employ trained experts to look after all advertising and publicity matters.

In the latter instances, sales campaigns are carefully worked out and most of them are successful.

On the other hand, those who simply make spasmodic announcements, using limited media, nearly always regard financial advertising with an air of disappointment.

Aside from these points this kind of advertising differs but little from any other, but any advertiser who treats it otherwise than as a serious business proposition is bound to be disappointed.

I say it is the most difficult to handle. This is because we are restricted as to what we can say in the copy, and in most instances we are not allowed to put in the "rep" that can be used to advantage in general advertising.

Genuine financial advertising, on the other hand, must be dignified in the extreme. Then there is the technical side which must be most carefully guarded. Quite frequently it is the case that when the banker has given his final approval of a piece of copy, it is pretty dry reading and the technicalities are so closely drawn that only the most experienced investor knows what he means.

There are a great many things which might be discussed along these lines, but the thing which interests me most is the misuse of the term "financial advertising." It should mean the very best there is in any advertising, but I cannot think of any term applied to advertising which is so generally abused.

Publishers, advertising men and others have become accustomed to regard it as covering anything which has to do with finance, whether it be good, bad or indifferent—and I think you will agree with me that many things creep into the newspapers under the guise of financial advertising which are infinitely bad, and have no business to be represented in that way.

The fact that the term "financial advertising" is made to stand for almost anything is one of the things which should be brought to the attention of publishers especially so that the commonplace value placed upon it can eventually be removed.

If properly applied, the subject is well worthy of the name and should stand for more than the ordinary in advertising.

It was originally supposed to relate principally to banking, and, from an argumentative viewpoint, was used extensively to teach and stimulate the habit of saving. Here its application to the public required not only the most serious but dignified thought in the preparation of the copy.

In the old days certain bankers refused to advertise because they believed it both undignified and unethical.

Happily, however, that prejudice has given away and at the present time nearly all banks advertise in one way or another.

"FINANCIAL ADVERTISING" A MISNOMER

What I shall say now is probably not new, but you may not have thought of it in the same light.

Let me repeat that financial advertising is made to stand for iniquities beyond number, in that the worst class of get-rich-quick artists in the country are allowed to take advantage of the classification to fleece the public through the columns of the financial pages of certain newspapers, and there are many.

I need not speak at length of the cleverly worded appeal, the attractive advertisement or the subtle influences which are foisted upon an unsuspecting public.

All of these things are well known, and, while I have not taken the trouble to look up the statistics on the subject, I believe it is true that almost countless millions of dollars are taken each year from pockets of individuals throughout the country, representing life savings in many instances, and transferred to the coffers of interests who tell of untold riches to be gained through the purchase of this or that kind of stock—oil wells, gold mines, copper mines, automobiles, tires, rubber plantations and almost any old thing.

Why, I think that if some crook would offer to sell the German Empire through financial advertising at this particular stage of the game, some people would jump at the chance to get a few shares of the stock.

One of the things these interests work the hardest to do is to put it over the newspapers, and their present method is to put on a respectable front.

The old flashy stuff doesn't go as well as it used to, but they are getting away with it through clean looking copy. Nine out of ten newspaper representatives who call on me refer to such publicity as financial advertising.

Advertising men refer to our firm as the leading financial advertising agency, but I want to tell you that it would take some mighty fine maneuvering to get any of that get-rich-quick stuff through our office. We have turned away more than one half million dollars worth of such advertising in a year's time and are mighty proud of the fact that we have not been parties to transactions of that kind.

If there was the proper censorship generally, then there would be less advertising of the "Blue Sky" or similar sort, but you can never stop it as long as advertising agents handle it and newspapers publish it.

Some may ask the question:

"What is financial advertising?"

The answer is, in my mind, that if you stick to the advertising of banks, and publish that which the function of such institutions permit, you will suffer no criticism. There are many things which a bank can say about itself which would not only make good advertising copy but good reading matter as well.

INVESTMENT BANKERS' ADS.

The kind of advertising which newspapers prize most highly and which their representatives solicit energetically is that of the investment banker. I would characterize this kind of advertising as "investment advertising."

But here, also, there is plenty of chance for mistakes to be made.

The question may be asked: "Who is going to decide who the bona fide investment banker is?"

It is true that here we are apt to again find the wolf in sheep's clothing.

Probably the terms "investment banker," "investment securities," "investment bonds" and the like have been greatly abused in an effort to get hold of people's money.

It is an easy matter, however, to locate the real investment banker or bond dealer, and any would-be investor who will not take the trouble to go to his banker or any banking institution and get good, sound advice on the subject is not to be pitied, although I have known many advertisements to boldly quote certain banks without authority in order to bait the public.

As is well known, investment advertising is that which covers bonds and other securities of well known corporations, such as public utilities, public service corporations, railroad and municipalities, which have been purchased outright by investment banking interests of well established reputation.

If an investor does not happen to know the institution making the offering, it is his own fault if he does not get the desired information from the newspaper or bank, as either one of them can get it.

Investment advertising has been reduced pretty well to a science in recent years. New methods and new ideas are constantly being worked out, so it may be said that progress is steadily being made.

Old fashioned advertising is being supplanted by more up-to-date arguments, accompanied by attractive type effects and modern descriptive art, all of which is welcomed. The backbone of all advertising, however, is the Truth—there can be no dodging of this point.

I have seen many an advertisement held up for days because of the merest technicality, or seemingly so, which had to be overcome before the banker would sanction the statement.

I am quite often asked what I think a newspaper should do to stimulate investment advertising, and I always suggest a strong financial page, carrying live investment news outside of the ordinary resume of the stock market fluctuations.

There is no reason that I know of why such important matter should not be just as entertainingly discussed as the news in any other department of a newspaper and I am of the opinion that, during the next few years, there will be a greater demand for it than ever before.

A news section of this kind, to my mind, is the only way to stimulate the best there is in financial or investment advertising.

That is all that is worth having.

THE DEAN OF NEWSPAPER WOMEN IN OHIO.

The dean of Ohio newspaper women is said to be Mrs. Isabelle McMurray Freeland of Marion. She is a charter member and president of the Ohio Newspaper Women's Association, which will hold its fourteenth annual meeting this month in Columbus. At that time Mrs. Freeland will report that she made three immense scrap books and sent them in the name of O.N.W.A. to hospitals in France, and that under her leadership the association was able to invest in Liberty Bonds and is also sending a talented young girl through the Ohio State University's school of journalism.

Mrs. Freeland is a well known contributor to all Ohio newspapers and is active in suffrage, Red Cross and temperance work in the state. Her work for food conservation was so remarkably good that she received a special letter of commendation from Food Director Hoover.

Mrs. Freeland is the author of "Thoughts in Verse" and several other books and the following lines were written by her, but have not been published before.

THE RED CROSS NURSE.

Out through the gates of Paradise
Strayed a being fair and bright;
Her pathway down to the world below
Was a gleam of glorious light.

She saw the sorrow, the strife, the woe,
The carnage, and blood and war;
She nursed the dying, covered the dead
In her wandering near and far.

Her mark was a cross, her own,
An emblem of most unselfish love.
Her mission is now in the earth below
And not in the realms above.

The seraph to Heaven will never return,
She has found a soul so true
To bear her message, to do her task:
Oh, Red Cross Nurse, is it you?

As the angels gaze from courts on high
They lift from war the curse,
And leave a smile on the dying face
For the sake of the Red Cross Nurse!

"BLUE SKY" LAW STATES.

ALSO THOSE THAT DO NOT CENSOR FINANCIAL ADVERTISING.

A number of inquiries have been received by THE FOURTH ESTATE from advertisers, advertising agents and publishers recently on what states have "Blue Sky" Laws, regulating the exploitation of financial enterprises through advertising and other means.

THE FOURTH ESTATE takes pleasure in presenting this information to all its readers, as there are undoubtedly many others than those who have inquired that are interested.

The following states have "Blue Sky" Laws in operation, some more drastic than others:

Arizona	Mississippi
Arkansas	North Carolina
California	Nebraska
Florida	North Dakota
Georgia	Oregon
Idaho	Ohio
Illinois (after January 1, 1918. See details below.)	South Dakota
Iowa	South Carolina
Kansas	Tennessee
Louisiana (has statutes against fake advertising and misrepresentation.)	Texas
Maine	Virginia (apparently limited in scope.)
Montana	Vermont
Minnesota	West Virginia (validity being tested.)
Missouri	Declared unconstitutional by Federal District Court.)
	Wisconsin.

The laws in the states of Ohio and Michigan are found by those placing financial advertising to be most drastic. For instance, in Michigan newspapers cannot accept stock advertising unless the stock is officially listed as all right by the state authorities.

ADS MUST BE NUMBERED IN ILLINOIS AFTER JANUARY 1.

A very strict new "Blue Sky" Law will go into effect in the state of Illinois on January 1, 1918. Regarding advertisements, it provides:

"No advertisement, pamphlet, circular or other document relating to stocks, bonds or securities not exempted by this Act, shall be issued, circulated or delivered by the dealer or any agent within this state, unless the same shall bear a serial number to be given by the Secretary of State, and a copy thereof shall first have been filed with the Secretary of State, nor after such dealer has been notified of objection thereto by said officer."

This law will affect all stocks, bonds and securities advertising, except as exempted by the following provisions:

"The provisions of this Act shall not apply to the disposal of securities:

"a. To a corporation; or
"b. To public sinking fund trustees; or
"c. To a license under this Act; or
"d. Being securities listed or dealt in upon an organized stock exchange or organized curb in this State or in any state or territory of the United States approved therefor by the Secretary of State, or securities senior thereto; or "e. Being bonds of a municipality, government or governmental agency or other public securities; or
"f. Whereof actual current sales at prices quoted shall have been from time to time, for not less than one year next preceding the transaction authorized by this clause, published in the tabulated market reports of a daily newspaper of general circulation published in this State or an adjoining state; or "g. Being bonds or notes secured by first mortgage lien upon real estate or leaseholds (leaseholds) within this State or within any state or territory of the United States; or
"h. Being the stock, notes, or other securities of, belonging to, or pledged to any national bank, or any bank, trust company, or insurance company organized and under the supervision of the department of trade and commerce, or other department of the State of Illinois, or building and loan association organized and doing business under the laws of this State; or

"i. Being bonds, stocks or other securities of quasi-public corporations, the issue of whose securities is regulated by a public service commission or board of any state or territory of the United States or any foreign government; or
"j. Being securities listed in a standard manual or in manuals approved by the Secretary of the State of Illinois; or
"k. Being stocks, bonds, or other securities sold at judicial, executor, administrators or trustee in bankruptcy's sale.

"A disposal of one's own property . . . for the owner's account exclusively, shall not, of itself, be held to amount to a dealing therein when such disposal

"a. Is not made in the course of continuing or repeated transactions of a similar nature by such owner; or
"b. Is made to an incorporator, antecedent, promoter, or one who is already a holder of the fully paid stock of the Illinois corporation issuing the property so disposed of by it; or
"c. Being made by the issuer of the property so disposed of, or his transferee, consists of negotiable promissory notes given for full value and for the sole purpose of evidencing or extending the time of payment of the price of goods, wares, or merchandise, purchased or dealt in by such issuer in the ordinary course of his business; commercial paper, or other evidence of indebtedness, running not more than twelve months; or
"d. Is made to a bank, trust company, insurance company, building and loan association, or to a licensed dealer in said property."

The states without "Blue Sky" legislation are:

Alabama New Jersey
Connecticut New Hampshire
Colorado New Mexico
Delaware Nevada
Indiana (has law against sales under false pretense.) Oklahoma
Kentucky Pennsylvania
Maryland—City of Rhode Island
Baltimore. Utah (has law regarding fraudulent advertising.)
Massachusetts Wyoming

DISCUSS FEATURE PROBLEMS.
The managing editors of the Associated Newspapers, dailies using Associated Newspapers syndicate material, met last week in Chicago for a general discussion of the feature needs of their respective newspapers for the ensuing year. There was expressed a general demand for time-tried features, but a perilous welcomer, at best, for new entries in the feature field. The managing editors in general vouchsafed the opinion that war features tinged strongly with "human interest" would be in demand.

Some of the newspaper men present pointed out that war conditions have turned ordinary newspaper methods topsy-turvy. This is evidenced in their opinion by the comparatively small interest evinced by newspaper readers in local happenings that before the war would have attracted wide attention.

"Fires, local murders, scandal, business things that formerly were full of news interest, now hold very little interest to local readers," is the way one man present expressed it.

"Reporters might as well stay in the office," said another. "The local stuff they bring in is either crowded out by innumerable war news or fails to arouse any interest even if it is printed."

Among the newspaper men present at the meeting were:
W. Kee Maxwell, Akron (Ohio)
Times: Calvin Cobb, Boise (Idaho)
Statesman: C. H. Dennis and Harry Smith, Chicago Daily News; Mr. Strauss, Cincinnati Times-Star; W. C. Jarnagin, Des Moines (Ia.) Capital; Herman Phillinson, Dallas Times-Herald; W. F. Hardy, Decatur (Ill.) Herald; Henry C. Campbell, Milwaukee Journal; H. D. Perkins, Norfolk Ledger-Dispatch; W. R. Watson, Omaha World-Herald; C.

REPAIR SEASON IN PAPER MILLS

GIVEN AS REASON FOR DROP IN DAILY AVERAGE DURING OCTOBER.

The News Print Manufacturers Association's report of production, shipments and stocks of news print paper for the month of October, 1917, says:

"While the actual tonnage produced was in excess of the September, 1917, production, owing to the larger number of operating days, the daily average was considerably less.

"Shipments, which were in excess of the quantity produced, were on a greater scale than during the previous month.

"The decreased production in October was due largely to the necessity of making repairs. A considerable amount of time was lost in all sections of the United States and Canada on this account.

"Labor difficulties and low water affected the Western United States territory. One mill was down all month on account of fire.

"The increase in stocks was caused almost entirely by the car shortage in Canada.

"Production in October, 1917, was less than during the same month last year; shipments were of approximately the same volume; and stocks show a decline of sixteen and a half per cent.

"Production, in comparison with maximum, was lower last month than during any month this year, although higher than during the same month last year.

"Comparing the production of the thirty-six companies that reported last month with the production obtained by the same companies in October, 1916, an increase of 3,000 tons is shown, and an increase of 5,000 tons in shipments.

"Stocks held by these thirty-six companies in September, 1917, show a decrease of slightly over 10,000 tons."

The figures on production and shipments follow. (The News Print Manufacturers Association claims to represent about seventy-two per cent. of the total news print produced in the United States and Canada):

SWEDISH WOOD PULP FIRMS AMALGAMATE.

The wood pulp firm of Billeruds AB, in Varmland, a concern which of late years has absorbed a number of similar undertakings, has purchased Salboda AB, and Jossfors AB, which hold the majority of the shares in Charlottenbergs AB.

Jossfors has a share capital of $670,000 and Charlottenberg of $160,000. The two companies own productive forest land to the extent of 40,000 acres. Jossfors has wood pulp mills with a yearly output of 33,000 tons of wet mechanical pulp. The capital of the Salboda Company is $402,000.

The company owns 22,000 acres of productive forest land, pulp mills, sulphite works and paper mills with an output of 4,500 tons of paper and 5,000 tons of sulphite pulp.

Billeruds reported for 1916 a net profit of $894,770 on a capital of $1,407,000, and raised its dividend from 10 to 15 per cent.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING NOVEMBER 24, 1917

REASONS FOR PASSING THE WATER POWER BILLS.

The efforts of the American Newspaper Publishers Association to have Congress enact bills, now pending, that would release the water powers of the United States for useful purposes (though it would tend to develop the news print paper making industry of this country, and probably benefit publishers that way) are of vital national importance in many more ways than that one, as is well pointed out by the noted American forestry authority, Gifford Pinchot.

The people of the United States own some fifty million undeveloped water horsepower, or about enough to run every train, trolley, factory, mill, mine, and electric power plant we have.

For ten years the friends of conservation have urged the development of public water powers in the public interest. But development has been held back by a little group of water power magnates and their friends in Congress who have blocked all legislation which would not give them these valuable properties forever and for nothing.

Today, when the nation needs all its resources, the same men who have been blocking reasonable water power legislation own and are holding millions of water horsepower undeveloped and out of use while clamoring for more.

The time has come when such obstruction threatens the nation's safety and success. We need the development of these powers in war even more than in peace. At the coming session of Congress sound water power legislation should be enacted as a war measure, based upon principles fair to all sides. These principles will be briefly as follows:

The thing to do with water power is to develop it. Whatever retards or restricts the development of public water powers on terms fair to the public is against public policy and hostile to the general welfare.

Water power belongs to the people. The sites where it is produced should always be held in public hands, for only so can effective control in the general interest be secured.

In order to protect the consumer against extortion, rates and service should be regulated by Federal authority when state or local authorities fail to do so.

Reasonably prompt and complete development and continuous operation, subject to market conditions, should be required. Already millions of water horsepower are held out of use to further monopoly by private corporations.

The advertising forms close on Thursday. Advertisements should be received as early in the week as possible to insure proper classification.

Corporations or individuals who make money out of rights granted by the people should share their profits with the people.

The public has a right to complete information about every business based on the use of public property.

"These are the principles for which the friends of conservation have been contending," says Mr. Pinchot. "Many water power men believe them to be fair and sound. They will, I hope, commend themselves to all as wise and reasonable. I am asking support for immediate legislation, based upon them, when Congress meets."

Mr. Pinchot also believes that where public development is not desired the right to use water power sites should be leased for periods long enough to permit sound, attractive and profitable investment, but never longer than fifty years; at the end of each lease all rights should return to the people who gave them.

THE FOURTH ESTATE does not endorse the return fifty-year proposition; instead of this it urges a renewal basis on an arbitration plan, which will protect the public and the investment and secure the continuity of industries established.

This is no time to give away public assets necessary for the welfare of our people both in the war and after the war, and we should no longer tolerate the selfishness of private interests which take the dog-in-the-manger position that they must have these water powers on their own terms or no one shall use them at all.

As the President has said: "The supreme test of the nation has come. We must all speak, act, and serve, together."

The newspapers should now be impressing these facts in the minds of their readers, as well as their Congressmen and Senators, so that public opinion will demand immediate passage of the water power release bills when Congress reconvenes next month.

WHY LOUISIANA DRAWS THE ADVERTISERS.

In a recent Agricultural and Live Stock Supplement issued by the New Orleans Item, the following foreword appeared on the front cover: "Louisiana, fairest and most fertile of the states of embattled America, is this year celebrating the greatest crop season in her history. In volume and in money, her agriculture as exhibited at her two great fairs exceeds all previous records.

"A thousand million allied fighting people are turning to America to win the war. Louisiana's sons have answered the call. Louisiana's women and men have enrolled for national service. A solemn importance attaches to the work of education which these fairs are doing, for the world relies upon the Louisiana farmers to help win the war."

The supplement then tells the secret of the wonderful prosperity of Louisiana in general and New Orleans in particular.

Cotton, rice, timber, livestock and corn are causing dollars to roll into Louisiana as never before.

A new development is the cultivation of rich cut-over land in timber sections which is being planted in cotton, velvet beans, potatoes, rice, oats, rye, peas, etc.

In some sections the last crop is chufas, which gives a large yield of grass nuts that are used to fatten hogs.

The activity throughout the state is reflected and immediately noticeable in New Orleans, and as a result the newspapers are beating all records in advertising.

The successful advertiser usually locates the prosperous sections.

THE WAY THE WIND BLOWS.

One of the large and well known manufacturing concerns which makes and distributes nationally consumed goods, appropriated $500,000 for its advertising campaign for the year 1917.

It is of special interest to newspaper publishers to know that this concern has just appropriated $1,250,000 for its advertising campaign for the year 1918, and that a larger percentage of this appropriation will be expended in daily newspapers than for the year 1917.

THE FOURTH ESTATE gets this information directly from the advertising manager of this concern, but with the proviso that for obvious reasons he does not care to have the names made public just at this time.

ANOTHER INSTANCE OF NEWSPAPER CHARITY WORK.

"You Must Buy That Hostel Car for Little Miss C."

It was a front-page headline that greeted readers of a New York newspaper last week.

Thus boldly challenged, the readers read on. In a minute or two numbers of them were tingling with the impulse to obey the request, phrased in the imperative mood.

Little Miss C, as the story in the New York Evening Post made clear, lived in a town somewhere in France, where there were twenty military hospitals filled with thousands of wounded soldiers. Their relatives, as many as can do so, come by scores to visit them. For, as the article pointedly asked, "If your brother or son was lying at death's door in France, hundreds of miles from home, would you not be anxious to see him before he went West?"

Little Miss C has been performing a labor of love. In a little car she has been meeting the trains and conveying these distressed relatives, at all hours of the day and night, to the hostel where they are made as comfortable as possible. She has made herself indispensable. But the car has become worn out. It breaks down at the wrong times, imposing hardships. A new one could be secured for $1,295.

That was the story told by the Evening Post. Tuesday it said that only $251 had been given and the story was slammed on Page One.

Thursday it asked for $75 more to complete the fund.

Friday morning the telephone jingled with calls from persons who wanted to contribute that $75—calls from city and up-state and New Jersey—over-the-way.

And the sum was oversubscribed by $170.

The surplus will be kept up as a reserve for repairs, for, as the newspaper writer put it, "a car without an extra tire and the prospect of some more gasoline is a very doubtful gift."

This is one more demonstration of the power of newspaper publicity and it serves also as a reminder of the tremendous part the newspapers of the country are playing in giving their space to charitable causes and to aiding in the prosecution of the war.

ADOPT STANDARD SIZE.

The American Newspaper Publishers Association's paper committee urges every publisher, if possible, to change to the standard size of 8 columns, 12 3/4 cms, and when buying paper or making contracts for next year, the new size, that is, 7 3/4 inch rolls, with the usual fractional sizes, be used.

It is difficult during the life of a contract to change the size of rolls, as it frequently means severe hardship on the mills.

When contracts are renewed, however, it is very easy to make the change.

The paper committee urges in the interest of economy and paper conservation, that every publisher who can possibly change, do so, and not tie himself up for another whole year on an irregular size.

New machines are being installed and it is very difficult for manufacturers to tell what size to install.

Probably 50 per cent of the tonnage used in the United States is on the standard size, and every publisher going to that size is helping the situation for the future, and for the permanent economy in the manufacture and consumption of print paper.

NOTE AND COMMENT.

F. H. Albee of Boston has evolved a scheme for cheaper fuel which threatens to add still another to the hard-working daily paper's lists of functions.

Mr. Albee has succeeded in producing a type of "newspaper log" which, he says, will burn from three-quarters of an hour to an hour and a half in any fireplace or stove. He gives the following directions:

"Spread newspapers, four or five sheets folded once, on a table with folded end toward you, and begin to roll in a fairly tight roll. Before the first section is completely rolled insert a second section. Add newspaper until a roll from two to three inches in diameter is made. Before finishing the last section of the roll fold back all the sheets, except the outside one, so that only one sheet remains. This should be pasted down with paste or mucilage.

"You will now have a solid roll of paper about eighteen inches long, which for convenience sake should be cut in two or three pieces. The 'newspaper log' may be cut with an ordinary saw like firewood. Each piece should then be saturated with kerosene. A quart or two may be poured in a tin pail, and the rolls, inserted end up, should be left to soak there for several minutes. From time to time they must be turned in the oil in order to insure complete saturation."

Mr. Albee says that two or three of these rolls lighted in the fireplace will produce an unusually warm, bright fire.

PURELY PERSONAL.

Victor F. Lawson, owner and publisher of the Chicago Daily News, is confined to his home by illness.

John R. Rathom, editor of the Providence (R. I.) Journal, will deliver an address before the Chicago Traffic Club on December 4.

Edgar L. Haynes, business manager of the Wilmington (Del.) Morning News, and Mrs. Haynes have gone to St. Augustine, Fla., for a fortnight.

Harry Swartzchild, editor and publisher of Shoe Findings, a Chicago trade publication, is contemplating the establishment of a new wholesale grocery publication.
